Which Are You?

There are two kinds of people on earth to-day,
Just two kinds of people, no more, I say.
Not the sinner and the saint, for 'tis well understood
The good are half bad, and the bad are half good.
Not the rich and the poor, for to count a man's wealth
You must first know the state of his conscience and health.
Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span,
Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man.
Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years
Brings each man his laughter and each man his tears.
No: the two kinds of people on earth I mean,
Are the people who lift, and the people who lean.
Wherever you go you will find the world's masses
Are always divided in just these two classes.
And oddly enough, you will find, too, I wean,
There is only one lifter of twenty who lean.
In which class are you? Are you easing the load
Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?
Or are you a leaner, who lets others bear
Your portion of labor and worry and care?

A WELL-MATCHED PAIR.

The platform was crowded this sunny morning with excursionists and swell yachtsmen and ladies with golf sticks.

Two people attracted a lot of attention by their palpable efforts at concealment. He, although the day was so hot, was enveloped in a long cloak with a collar reaching past his ears, and his cotton-white hair and mustache showed up occasionally in strong contrast to the deep brown of his face as he turned to watch the porters attacking a huge mound of his belongings.

Each box and bag was emblazoned with an imperial coronet over a monogram, and they told one another guardedly and under promises of profound secrecy, "that was Prince Paul Demtoff, the owner of the new one-hundred rater now lying off Southamption."

She, the lady, was tall and gracefully girl like. A neat hat, blue serge Redfern frock; a sun-burnt straw hat, with a dark blue ribbon; tiny tanned boots, a white shirt with a turn-down collar, and a flowing white tie completed her costume, saving a thick gossamer veil that completely hid her face, and but for the whiteness and purity of her neck it would have seemed she suffered from some facial disfigurement. It was evidently a desire not to be recognized that led to the the adoption of the yashmak.

She was evidently expecting or avoiding some friends. Her head moved with a bird-like quickness as she scanned each new arrival on the platform, and her slender hand, white and jewelless, twitched nervously round the handle of the morocco monogramed case she carried. Catching her eye from a distance, he walked toward her with the easy, firm assurance that women like. She saw he was coming to her and waited calmly—perhaps she breathed more quickly.

He raised his soft hat, and with a courtly bow said in perfect English, with the mere scent of accent: "Pardon me, you are distressed. Have you missed your maid? Can I be of any service to you?"

Now that his hat was off he appeared a prematurely white-haired man of forty-five or fifty, with a firm face and voice—a man evidently used to command.

"Thank you, very much," came in a soft, sibilant voice from beneath the thick gossamer. I have not quite lost my maid, but my portmanteau. I am afraid it is under that pile of luggage, and"—with a little shrug—"I'm afraid that pile of luggage is yours."

"That is mine, madame. I will get your bag at once. May I asked where you are going? To Southampton, and it is of the highest importance that you should not miss this train? Pardon, do not trouble. I will see that all is arranged."

A few words to the guard, a rapid passage of backsheesh and the missing bag, with a dainty monogram and a small crest, was placed carefully on the rack of the first-class carriage by which the veiled lady was standing. With the coolness that seemed part of his nature, the Russian indicated to a porter a small hamper, and had it placed in the same compartment. There must have been some collusion and a lavish tip, for though the train was crowded, the guard, after the imperceptible manner of his kind, kept that carriage empty until the train started and they found themselves alone, securely locked in.

A sudden start ran through her slender frame. She paused and asked quickly: "Do you know when the next train leaves Waterloo for Southampton?"

He was desolated. Of course she missed her maid, but he was afraid not for some hours.

"Madame is glad? Madame is afraid of being followed?"

"Yes, madame is glad. She does not wish to be taken back and forced into a hateful marriage," blushing prettily.

The old, old story—stern father, elderly lover, titled, rich, but horrid. No mother, sister, no brother. She was flying from bondage to her aunt, Lady Azuregore, in Guernsey.

Yes, she was Lady Constance Azuregore. Had he really met her at the duchess of Arlington's dance? She thought she knew his face. That was why she trusted him so implicitly on the platform, of course. But if she was veiled. Why was he so shrouded in a big cloak? "Come, now," anxiously, "a lady? An elopement?"

No, no, and again no! Nothing so joyous. He was prince Paul Demtoff, and had fallen between two stools—had incurred the enmity of the imperial court through coquetting the nihilists. That meant the Alexiefsky Ravelin or the fortress of Peter and Paul in St. Petersburg, and, on the other hand, finding the "party of progresa" going too far, he was threatened with death for deserting the red flag.

"You must pardon me, prince, but we seem in trouble together," and she laughed merrily. "Do you know I half thought you were a detective?"

By this time he had returned to his hamper and produced deftly a tablecloth, plates, knives, forks and serviettes, a small bottle of Chateau Mouton Rothschild and a dainty cold chicken. Their mutual confessions had lessened embarrassment, and the lady, after making a little moue, said she was so hungry and so glad to eat, etc.

They chatted and laughed as the train sped through the beautiful country, and by the time Southampton was thought of she had smoked a mild cigarette and he had kissed her hand.

She had readjusted her veil and he assumed his big cloak with a sigh as the whistle of the train signaled the station.

"The Guernsey boat does not leave till midnight. What are you going to do? Where will you put up?"

"I don't know. I never will be taken back alive. And you? You are hunted. What will you do?"

"Go on board my yacht. She is lying off here, and the gig waits for this train at the landing steps. I must hail them, as none of them know me. My agent has engaged an entirely new crew, skipper included, all English. I want no nihilists on board." And he looked moodily out of the window.

She made a sudden movement as if about to speak, but drew back. Again she leaned forward, and repetition roused him from his thoughts. He looked up and saw her eyes glistening even through the black veil. She was crying!

"What is the matter? You are frightened. Can I help you?"

"I hardly dare ask you. You may think badly of me, but I will not be forced into this detestable marriage. Can you—may I—"

He divined her thoughts. "Stay on board my yacht and board the boat at midnight? Yes, your ladyship, yes, in all honor, yes," and he held out both his hands, and with a sob almost hysterical, she placed her tiny gloves in them as the train stopped.

They left the station by a side door unnoticed, and walked down the broad graveled road with the soft sward and the old-time cannon, passed the crumbling walls and found the boat manned by six bronzed, typical yachtsman, the skipper, a fine looking old man, sitting motionless in the stern sheets holding the yoke lines.

The boat soon shot alongside a beautiful schooner yacht. The crew manned the gangway as the prince and lady Constance came on board, and a motherly, sunburned woman courtesied her through an exquisitely furnished saloon cabin into a bijou with a lace curtained bunk and a host of feminine fripperies.

"I may sail to-night. Is all ready? Right. Take the boat and go ashore, bring off my luggage and every thing we may want for the ship's stores. And, Johnson, keep the men afloat, but you just find out if there is any hue and cry about a lady eloping."

In about an hour he returned, and doffing his peaked cap said mysteriously: "I spoke to my cousin, the pleeceman, an' he says there's a lot o' cockney detective down a-watchin' the station an' the Guernsey packet for some young ooman."

Her ladyship had washed all travel stain away and changed her frocks, She looked like a fresh rosebud, but her face grew deadly pale, her eyes dilated, and the nerve lines deepened into marks of agony when he told her the captain's story. He thought she was going to faint and made as though to catch her, With a supreme effect she regained her self-possession and said in a hoarse whisper:

"Oh, save me! Take me to Guernsey in your yacht, or I will jump overboard!"

He turned on his heel without replying and went up the companionway on deck.

"Johnson, your wife doesn't mind a trip to sea?"

"Lor' bless your royal 'iness, she's dying for a sniff of the ocean!"

"Get under weigh at once!"

"Aye, aye, sir! All hands on deck! Tumble up, my hearties!"

Under a good southwesterly breeze the yacht spun almost merrily, throwing the foam in long, beautiful, feather-like curves from her clipper stern.

The lady stood leaning dreamily against the side ropes, and the prince, an experienced sailor, evidently, took the tiller and threaded the way carefully through the crowd of craft. For a time neither spoke; then, abruptly giving the management to the appreciatively critical skipper, he beckoned her into the cabin.

"I will land you at Guernsey to-morrow morning," he said, "but I have been deceiving you. I am not Prince Paul Demtoff. I am his valet. I have robbed him of one million roubles and am now going to the Argentine in his yacht," and he stood up rigidly and faced her.

She smiled and said calmly: "Very good! Take me with you. I am not Lady Constance Azuregore. I am her maid, but I've got her jewel case."—London Million.

A MACEDOINE ICE.

A macedoine ice containing candied cherries, apricots, pineapple, limes, and French walnuts is an exceedingly pretty as well as delicious dessert. Prepare a quart of lemon ice-cream, using a cup of granulated sugar, the rind of two large lemons and the whites of four eggs. Beat this mixture thoroughly together. Then add a pint of cold milk. Do not use any of the juice of the lemon, simply the yellow rind. Stir the mixture over the fire continually until it is ready to boil. Then add a pint of cream and freeze.

Make also a quart of coffee ice-cream. Add a cup of granulated sugar and the yolks of four eggs. Mix thoroughly. Add a pint of boiling milk. Stir for two minutes, until it comes to the boiling pint. Take it off the fire and add a pint of sweet boiling cream and two heaping tablespoonfuls of Mocha coffee ground very fine. Stir the mixture over the fire for two minutes. Then cover the saucepan containing it and let it stand for half an hour at the back of the stove where it will not boil. At the end of this time remove the lemon ice-cream from the freezer, pack it in a mould holding three quarts, and freeze the coffee ice-cream in the same packing which contained the lemon, adding a little more ice and salt, if the packing has melted down. The mould containing the lemon ice-cream should be packed in ice and salt while the coffee ice-cream is freezing.

Have ready a quarter of a pound each of candied cherries, cut in half, and candied apricots and candied peneapple cut in thin strips. Have also twenty-four large Grenoble walnuts, shelled and cut in pieces. When the coffee ice-cream is frozen remove about half the lemon ice-cream from the mould and pack into it about one-third the candied fruit and nuts. Then add a pint of the coffee ice-cream; another third of the fruit and nuts; then the half of the lemon ice-cream that was taken out; the last third of the nuts and fruit; and finally the other half of the coffee ice-cream.

Pack the mould down firmly, cover it with a thin sheet of writing-paper, and pack it tightly in salt and ice, covering the mould out of sight. Then tie two heavy newspapers over the top of the pail containing the salt and ice, and let the cream rest for three hours. At the end of this time, turn it out on folded napkin and serve it with a delicious white cake, flavored with bitter almonds.

THE TRUE TEST OF NERVE.

"I used to think," said Mr. Gratebar, "when I read of generals calmly dictating dispatches amid the carnage and uproar of battle, what nerve! But now as I try to write a letter here at home with the two older children in the parlor playing on the piano and singing with the vigor and voice of youth, the two younger children in the dining-room learning their lessons for the morrow, 'One times one is one; two times two is two; three times three is three,' and 'did the cat catch the rat! No, the cat did not catch the rat; why did not the cat catch the rat? with a carpet sweeper obligato by Mrs. Gratebar, and an occasional variation by the two younger children racing through the hall, coupled with a grand instrumental and vocal staccato in the parlor, why, I say to myself, no, no; the true test of nerve comes not in the stormier scenes of life but amid the delightful repose of home.'"—New York Sun.

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

VI.

Old Training and Muster Days.

The youth of the present generation are deprived of one excitement which so filled the vision of the boy of sixty or seventy years ago, and that event was the annual training and muster days. These were the days of the state militia, extending from 1810 to 1842, when it was the supreme ambition of many to hold some military office, and as a consequence our records of that period are crowded with the varied titles of ensign, sergeant, lieutenant, captain and colonel; but every man could not be an officer, so we find that the majority lived and died with plain "Mr." prefixed to his name.

If there was one quality more than another which served to make a popular captain or colonel, it was his ability to be able to serve his men with refreshment, both solid and liquid, so it was considered good form for the captain to serve his men with a substantial breakfast on training day. It is reported of one man who had an appetite equal to an anaconda, that he called on three captains on his way to drill and ate three square meals the same morning, so that he was nearly too full for utterance when his name was called. The men were often treated to a liberal supply of strong drink, so that those more thirsty than prudent were often rendered unfit to preform the closing part of the drill. Whatever the day might be to the elders, it was a great day for the small boy, who was alert for once without being called, at the first tap of the drum or shrick of the fife, for if there was any day in all the year when he was allowed six cents for spending money it was sure to be on training day, and that six cents always went for a card of gingerbread which was always on sale, and it is very doubtful if any cake has tasted so toothsome since, not excepting the cake of his own wedding. The men were on hand betimes, and when Col. Hamilton or Col. Turner were in command they gathered at the Old Center, or if Col. Knox was the officer of the day they repaired to his spacious field. The officers were gay with plumed hats and sashes, blue coats and white pantaloons. The independent company was also in bright uniform; then came the dragoons or troopers on horseback, the tony militia of the town, proud of their dashing display; lastly came the "floodwood" company, so styled because each man was clothed in whatsoever garb he might choose for the occasion, only his accouterments must be in fine order, consisting of a flint-lock musket and all its belongings; if any thing was lacking he was liable to a fine. The regulation uniform militia hat of those days was a ponderous bell-shaped thing made of leather, requiring the aid of a cord tied under the chin to keep it in place. These varied companies must have furnished a curious picture as they performed their evolutions under compulson, more for the gratification of the spectators them for themselves.

The fall muster outranked the training day in interest for all; even the militiamen took an interest in that occasion, for the spirit of competition entered into it, for then the clans gathered from Wales and Brimfield, Monson, Wilbraham and Ware at Palmer, and when Col. Knox was commander the parade was held on his grounds. The effect was often fine when six or seven hundred men were on parade, with companies and dagoons in full gay uniform, and officers dashing about with plumes and bright sashes fluttering in the breeze, evoking the spirit of '76 and enthusing their men to do their best. The interest of the day reached its climax at the close of the sham fight, when the cavalry charged the footmen at a furious pace, when of course they all fled as nimbly as possible, if not to preserve their lines to keep their uniform in order at least. Sometimes however, some new recruit, whose ecurage was better than his discretion, would stand his ground and fiercely meet his oncoming foe with the butt of his musket, only to be jeered at by his comrades for his mutinous valor. Then the companies would reform in solid phalanx, with the cavalry on the flank, to receive the welcome order to disband, and the general muster was over. But the spirit of the men was up, and woe betide the toll-gate keeper who exceeded the spirit of the law and tried to collect his usual fees, for a desmantled gate would be the sudden result, and like Don Quixote, they would pass on flushed with victory.

The following is a list of those who served as militia officers in Palmer from 1810 to 1842: Colonels—Isaac King, Amos Hamilton, John Fenton, Cyrus Knox, Elias Turner; Captains—Jesse King, Daniel King, Jonathan Cooley, William Cooley, Alpheus Converse, Timothy Ferell, Jonathan Moores, John McClanathan, Abraham Murdock, Sylvester Parks, Freeman Smith, John Shaw. Captain A. N. Dewey was an officer in Becket before removing to Palmer. Capt. Ephraim Fenton of Brookfield and Capt. Walker of Monson were officers in command at the muster in Palmer from their respective towns.

A Just Criticism.

Patient—"But, doctor, didn't you strictly order me to avoid all excitement?"

Doctor—"Certainly. In your state the least excitement is most injurious and may lead to the worst consequences."

Patient—"Then why on earth did you send in that long bill of yours yesterday?"—Once a week.

HE KNOWS.—"I need oil," said an ancient monk. So he planted him an olive sapling.

"Lord," he prayed, "it needs rain, that its roots may drink and swell. Send gentle showers." And the Lord sent a gentle shower.

"Lord," prayed the monk, "my tree needs sun. Send sun, I pray thee." And the sun shone, gilding the dripping clouds.

"Now frost, my Lord, to brace its tissues," said the monk. And behold the little tree stood sparkling with frost. But at evening it died. Then the monk sought the cell of a brother monk, and told his strange experience.

"I, too, have planted a little tree," he said; "and see, it thrives well. But I trusted my little tree to its God. He who made it knows better what it needs than a man like me. I laid no conditions. I fixed no ways and means. 'Lord, send it what it needs,' I prayed—'storm or sunshine, wind, rain, or frost. Thou hast made it, and thou dost know.'"

LOCAL NOTICES.

The Bicycle Club's Tournament.

The threatening weather of the early part of the day greatly affected the attendance at the bicycle club's races yesterday, only about 800 being present. The races as a whole were very good, though characterized by considerable loafing, the referee placing a time limit on only two of the contests.

The mile novice race brought out twelve riders, who started off in a bunch with Kingsbury of Springfield in the lead, which he kept to the three-quarters mark, when Sam Adams of Chicopee Falls, Vining of Springfield and J. F. Adams of Chicopee Falls pulled out and finished in the order named, Adams four lengths ahead of the other two in 2 36.

There were so many entries in the one-mile three minute class that two trial heats were run, the first four to finish in each of these competing in the final. Both trial heats proved uninteresting, the riders loafing to the home stretch and then making a spurt for position. In the first heat F. H. Pratt of Lawrence, G. E. Kingsbury of Springfield, George Blythe of Chicopee and and Edward Price of Warren qualified, the time being 2.55¾; in the second W. J. Knowlton of Bondsville, J. Vincelette of Chicopee, A. H. Myers of Stafford Springs and H. F. Kendall of Springfield qualified, time 2.54½. In the final all rode bunched for the first five-eighths, when Knowlton, who was in the rear, made a terrific spurt but was at once collared by Pratt, who is an experienced rider while Knowlton is a novice, and was beaten out at the tape by a length, Blythe of Chicopee being third several lengths behind; the time was 2.45¼, the last half being ridden in 1.12.

Two heats were run in the mile open class A, in the slow time of 2.58¾ and 3.04¾, though the last quarter of the latter heat was made in 34 seconds. Blythe of Chicopee, G. H. Rist of Springfield, Kendall of Springfield, E. D. Tufts of Palmer, Pratt of Lawrence, F. T. Parsons of Springfield, K. C. Adams of Stafford Springs and A. W. Stacey of Belchertown qualified. The referee placed a time limit of 2.45 on the final, but as the first prize was a $50 diamond, while the second and third prizes were valued at $15 and $8 only, all wanted to save their strength for the first prize and no one would set the pace; consequently it was a loafing match to the stretch and then a pretty contest to the tape, where Parsons finished first, Pratt second and Rist third. The referee ordered the race run over, but this heat proved more of a farce than the other, the time being 3.03¾. The referee promptly declared it no race and withdrew the prizes. The men claimed that the track was slippery on the turns from the rain which had fallen, and that they could not do better without a pace-maker, but as the last quarter was made in 35½ seconds their statements were ridiculed by the judges. Stacy had a bad fall on the stretch in the last heat; one of the cranks of his machine broke and he was thrown headlong, but was not much hurt.

Price of Warren drew out of the race for the Waite prize cup, leaving only Tufts and Stacy, both of the Palmer club, to ride; the mile was made in 2.57¼, Stacy winning by a wheel.

The time made in the half-mile handicap showed that the riders did not fear any by condition of the track on the turns. Twenty-four riders started with handicaps ranging from 10 to 55 yards, and Parsons of Springfield on the scratch. The race was a hustle from the crack of the starter's pistol until H. C. Walker of Ludlow, a 50-yards man, crossed the tape in 1.07¾, with Joseph Vincelette of Chicopee second and Pratt of Lawrence third. This was the prettiest race of the day, the riders being strung out in a long line up the back stretch, while the crowd intently watched the ever-changing positions of the riders as the faster men at the rear gradually passed those in front and left them strung out in a procession behind.

The one-mile open for riders in Monson, Ware, Warren, Ludlow and Palmer brought out five riders, C. D. Holden of Bondsville, Edw. Price of Warren, H. C. Walker of Ludlow, W. J. Knowlton of Bondsville and E. D. Tufts of Palmer. None of them seemed to care anything about riding for the first three-quarters, when there was a gradual increase of speed to the stretch and then a fight for position, Walker finishing first in the slow time of 3.10, Holden second and Knowlton third. One of the features of the afternoon's entertainment was the fancy and trick riding of Master Allen Atkins, who seemed perfectly at home on his machine in any position, riding without hands and propelling the machine with either foot, setting on either pedal while in motion, picking up cap from ground while at full speed, sitting in the saddle and steering with feet on the handle bars, standing with both feet on one pedal, riding with one foot through the frame and then balancing the machine in this position without hands, riding backwards in short circles, riding both forward and backward while astride the forward wheel, besides several balancing tricks with the machine standing on two kegs set on end, for all of which he received a large share of applause.

School Matters.

The school committee held a meeting last Saturday and voted to close two of the district schools, the Shorley and the Palmer Center, and transport the scholars to the school at Thorndike. The saving in expense will be about $200 a year, and the scholars will have the advantage of more experienced teachers, and an incentive to do better work where there are more in competition. The resignation of Miss Peirce as assistant in the high school was accepted, and Miss Grace C. Risley of Athol Center, Wellesley '93, was appointed to the vacancy. Miss N. M. Mahoney of North Brookfield was appointed teacher of drawing in the schools. It was voted to place new seats in Mrs. Leach's room in the Depot village grammar building. The contracts for transporting scholars were awarded as follows: From Three Rivers to the high school, J. F. Twiss, $8 50 per week; Bondsville to the high school, W. S. Whiting, $2.50 per day; Thorndike to the high school, and from Palmer Center to Thorndike, G. D. Mooers, $16.25 per week; Forest Lake to the high school, G. D. Whiting, $8 per week; Shorley district to Thorndike, Dennis Mahoney, $8 per week, the number not to exceed ten. A bond of $100 will be required from each contractor.

A graduated salary list for the teachers was adopted, by means of which a teacher is enabled to increase her wages by good work. For the room teachers in the various grammar schools the minimum pay will be $40 a month, which will be increased to $42.50 and $45 on merit only; for the lady principals of the grammar schools the grades will be $55, $57.50 and $60; high school assistants, $55, $57.50 and $60. During the past year 18 of the teachers have had their salaries raised from $2.50 to $5 per month. While these figures may strike terror to the heart of the average taxpayer on first thought, it will be found that all these matters have been carefully figured out by the committee, and that the expenses will be kept within the appropriations.

Of the 49 who took the entrance examinations for the high school 31 passed clear, and five will go in on minor conditions, and this in face of the fact that the examination was the hardest ever given, and the average demanded was higher than ever before—70, with no study below 60; the work of the scholar the past year in the lower grade counted two-thirds, and the examinations one-third in determining the average. The entering class next fall will be the largest for several years, last year's class numbering 23 and that of the year before 18. Notwithstanding the severe examination 13 had an average above 80;

A Chance to Hear Good Music.

High-class music has always been an important feature of Ringling Bros.' World's Greatest Shows. In studying the popular taste Ringling Bros. have always been quick to appreciate the effect of melody upon great audiences, and have never failed to meet public expectation in this regard. This season they conceived the idea of combining with their vast exhibition a musical feature so grand as to mark a distinct era in the annals of amusement. To do this it was necessary to secure the greatest band-master and the greatest band in the world. They have succeeded, and the famous Liberati band is offered to the public as a gratuitous feature in connection with an already stupendous amusement institution. This superb musical organization embraces sixty well-known musicians, every one of whom is a capable soloist. It is under the personal direction of the greatest of all band-masters and virtuosos, Sig. A. Liberati. This famous director is a native of Italy, and won many of his signal triumphs in that land of art and poesy. In recent years he has established a reputation in the great cities of the United States such as no other maestro has ever succeeded in doing. His remarkable power in blending together large numbers of musicians in a homogeneous organization, and his rare good judgment in selecting a class of music most pleasing to his audiences, have made him and his superb band the leading attraction at every important exposition in recent years. The interest in the Liberati band is enhanced by the addition of many especially engaged instrumental soloists, who will appear in connection with the big musical organization. The grand band concert begins one hour before the commencement of the show; and is a separate and distinct entertainment, tendered by the management to all who visit the great exhibition at Palmer Tuesday, July 16.

Another Old-Time House Gone.

The old house on South Main street belonging to the Parks estate which was destroyed by fire Wednesday night, was built by Rev. Moses Baldwin 90 years ago for his son William, who had married a daughter of Capt. John King. Mr. Baldwin then lived where Charles E. Fuller now resides, and gave a deed of the house lot to his son for $10; the latter did not live long to enjoy his new home, for he died in 1806. The house has been used as a tenement for many years, and of late has been in a very dilapidated condition. In its destruction the town loses from South Main street a picturesque object and a reminder of the days before the village had materialized. O. P. ALLEN.

The dedication of the new opera house with the operatic spectacle of "Zephra" had so much local interest for so many people that a statement of the financial details may be of interest. It took 164 persons in all to give the production, 135 in the cast and 29 attaches. The receipts Wednesday night: 180 persons at $1, 87 at 75 cents and 49 at 50 cents; total admitted, 316; amount, $269.75. On Thursday night: 181 at $1, 119 at 75 cents and 76 at 50 cents, a total of 376 persons and receipts of $308.25. The two nights there were 692 persons admitted and the receipts amounted to $578. The dedication committee paid the following proportion of the expenses: Cast, Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Roberts, $20; orchestra, $43; transportation of Springfield people in the cast, $41.37; hotel bill of 16 persons, $22.60; advertising, bill posting, etc., $42.60; total, $169.57. One-half the gross receipts, the proportion belonging to the opera house, amounted to $289, less the expense account as above ($169.57) leaves $119.43 as the net profit in the production belonging to the opera house. There were opera house expenses of $11.15, which leaves a cash balance of $108.28 belonging to Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows.

The night before the Fourth was an unusually quiet one this year, there being much less noise than usual. The schoolhouse and church bells were rung at midnight, and two large bonfires were built on Main street, one near the watering trough and one in front of the JOURNAL office. Considerable vandalism was indulged in; several vehicles were burned, though fortunately none were valuable and the owners generally rejoiced to be rid of the old wrecks so easily. A wagon was taken from the yard of the Palmer Bakery and left on the walk in front of the high school door. Another belonging to a prominent citizen was taken from a shed in which it had been locked the night before, and but for the appearance of the owner would have been cremated. A sign was ripped from its fastenings on the door casing of a business place and the door broken in so doing. There was talk among the "boys" all the evening of burning the old Parks house on South Main street, but the officials got wind of it and were on the watch until a late hour, but about two in the morning it went up in smoke. Deputy Sheriffs Studley and Northrop, with Chief Engineer Bills of the fire department, were on the streets a good share of the night, or more mischief would have been done. There did not seem to be much enthusiasm during the day of the Fourth, and the rain somewhat dampened the displays of fireworks. During the evening three large panes of glass in the post office windows were broken by careless discharges of fireworks. No serious accidents are reported.

District Court.

A hearing was held Monday in the matter of the liquors recently seized from Immanuel Boubardier at Three Rivers, and they were declared forfeited to the commonwealth. Friends interested themselves in her behalf, and she was released on payment of the costs, $9.85, and a home for her has been found in a family.

On Tuesday Patrick White, alias Patrick Walsh, a "man without a home," but who was too vociferously proclaiming to all the evening before that he was an American citizen, which no one took the trouble to deny, was given three months in the house of correction for disturbing the peace.

Ernest M. Lord was up this morning for keeping liquor with intent to sell, and the case was continued until next Tuesday, he furnishing bonds in the sum of $200. Dwight Moon was fined $5 for drunkenness, and was allowed until to-morrow morning to raise the money.

William Trasher had quite an experience Monday evening. While he and Charles White were getting into a boat, which was moving about somewhat, he missed his mark, and as he is not a "Peter," went to the bottom. But Mr. Trasher is a good swimmer, and he was soon out of his embarrassing position.

J. W. Cheney put his naphtha launch "Flora" on the river last Friday morning. It measures 18 feet from stem to stern, and 5 feet in beam. Several of our East Main street residents were aroused from their peaceful slumbers last Friday night by a crowd of men who were exercising their vocal powers to an indiscreet extent at so late an hour. Onezine Pleau's little five-years-old boy came near being drowned Monday evening. Mr. Pleau had his children out for a boat ride, and the little boy was picking pond lilies, when he found one that was too much for him. The little girl on seeing her brother fall into the river was so moved that Mr. Pleau had to tie her to the boat to keep her from jumping into the river.

One of our merchants who used to pride himself on the fact that he was never caught "napping," especially in a railroad car, lost his reputation in that line a few days ago. He was on a business trip in Springfield, and when coming home he thought he would have time to indulge in a short visit to dreamland before reaching Three Rivers. We do not know why the man hovered so long in the celestial regions, but we know that Enfield was reached before the conductor shook the sleeper from his delusion. Our crestfallen merchant had to wait till the next day before he could rejoin his family.

While the party were enjoying themselves a man who claims to be from Chicopee, was taken sick on the road opposite Mr. Talmage's. They kindly took him in and summoned Dr. Boulay, who pronounced it an attack of pneumonia. The sick traveler was taken in charge by the proper town authorities.

The start and finish of the bicycle race yesterday under the management of the bicycle club was witnessed by a large number of people. N. station, then to the left and to Shearer's Corners in Palmer, returning over the same route direct to the starting point. The following was the order at the finish, with the time: William Ritchie, 16.47; Walter Ritchie, 19.10; Charles Alden, 19.42; Walter Russell, 15.35; Trenor Judd, 17.43; Herbert Sholes, 17.20. In the race for boys Frank Twiss won the first prize, a ball and bat; Arthur Twogood second, bicycle bell; Arthur Provo third, package of tire cement. In the slow race Trenor Judd easily won, and in the game of quoits which followed Charles McGarrett and Philip Story were the winners, each receiving a set of quoits. Story also received a pair of cuff buttons for the greatest number of points.

Might Have Been a Bad Fire.

Raymond Russell will doubtless leave matches alone in the future. He accidently started a bonfire in his father's woodshed the other day, but when he saw that the flames were too big for him to handle he retreated to a safe distance, whence to watch the fun. Luckily his parents discovered the fire before any serious damage had been done.

James E. Higgins came near losing an eye last evening by the carelessness of a celebrator of the Fourth. Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Flynt gave a birthday party Tuesday in celebration of the second birthday of their little son, Henry Needham Flynt. He has no customers for it at present, but will hold it for a few days and the first applicant will get the wheel. He has had two orders for it, but was obliged to cancel them on account of non-delivery as soon as wanted. It is an excellent wheel for the money.

A quiet home wedding took place at the residence of W. O. Hovey at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The groom was Charles A. White of Riverdale, and the bride was Miss Belle Louise Hovey of Chardon, O., a neice of W. O. Hovey. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. E. Jenkins, and was witnessed by a few friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. White took the 3.14 train from Palmer, and will make Providence their first stopping place. After a short wedding tour they will make their home in Riverdale.

The Fourth was not marked by any unusual demonstration yesterday, and generally seemed very quiet. No accidents were reported, and the day was all it should be to the peace-loving citizens. Many private celebrations were held, a few went to Crystal Lake, while others took in the bicycle races at Palmer. The principal attraction was the picnic on Flynt's Park of St. Patrick's church; large crowds were in attendance; dancing, with music by the Monson Orchestral Club, together with a good list of sports, served to make the day enjoyable until the rain, which fell about 3 o'clock, made it uncomfortable for all, so the dancers adjourned to Memorial Hall, where festivities were continued until a late hour. The list of events at the park, with winners: Half mile, Bennett 1st, Walker 2d; 220-yards dash, Stone 1st, Bennett 2d; 100-yards dash, Stone 1st, Murphy second; high jump, Walker 1st, Norman 2d; running jump, Norman 1st, Brattick 2d; hop, step and jump, Norman 1st, Cuddihy 2d; pole vault, Walker 1st, Bennett 2d.

The trustees of Wesleyan Academy held a meeting Wednesday and formally voted to build a gymnasium for the school. It will cost about $23,000, and as the money is all provided for it is hoped the building will be put up before winter. Dr. William Rice of Springfield, John R. Buck of Hartford, L. M. Hubbard of Wallingford, Ct., and Judge Hitchcock of Chicopee were appointed a committee to secure plans and specifications and a place for the building.

Porter of Wellesley to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss D. S. Woodbury; Miss Mary Cunningham was elected teacher in the Maple street school. Miss F. Mabel Winslow and Miss Viola D. Howe, teachers in the schools at West Warren, have resigned.

More Vandalism.

Probably the same rascals who did the damage in Foster's billiard room last week made a call on Joseph Heritage Monday night. They broke into the barn where he kept his mare, "Joe's Pet," and cut the hair from her tail at the end of the bone. A carriage was also disfigured by cutting "A. P. A." in the leather of the dasher and on the side of the body. The mare is a valuable and fast animal; she won a race at Ware Memorial Day, and was entered in one of the races at Brookfield yesterday. There is not much of a clue to the miscreants.

A musicale was enjoyed at the home of A. Baldwin Monday night. Mrs. Baldwin played the organ, Frank Nelson the bass voil, Richard Peters the violin, and the music was very fine. The two latter are en route for Popham Beach, a renowned watering place, where they will play for parties during the summer.

A. F. Pepper and wife were terribly frightened last Saturday night about midnight by being awakened by a terribly crash. On examination they found the old-fashioned 8-foot square chimney was in the cellar, and a considerable portion of the kitchen floor had also gone down, taking two stoves, one of which was completely smashed. The chimney was built on wood work even with the kitchen floor, which had rotted at the bottom. The entire chimney, from the ridge down, fell. Mr. and Mrs. Pepper were sleeping about six feet from the chimney; had the family been about their daily tasks a serious accident might have resulted. The house was damaged about $200.

Mrs. Andrews is an elocutionist of great ability, and her numbers were very pleasing. The programme was varied by songs given by Miss Lydia Brown Hitchcock and F. Lincoln Peirce.

J. N. Hubbard Dies at Chicago.

Announcement of the death of J. N. Hubbard of Chicago was made in town Monday. Mr. Hubbard was the only son of Dea. N. S. Hubbard of this town, and his early life was spent here. He received his education at the Hitchcock free high school and at Phillips academy, Andover. After leaving Brimfield he was in business in Florida for a time with his brother-in-law, James Ormes, who recently died abroad. Mr. Hubbard's later life was spent in Chicago, where he married several years ago a western woman who, with a son, survives him. He was an alumnus of the Hitchcock free high school, and at the reunion last year was one of the happiest in renewing old acquaintances. He was suffering at that time from ill health, which he never recovered from. He possessed an unusually genial disposition and a purity and simplicity of character, both as boy and man, which made him a true-hearted, whole-souled friend and citizen. The interment will be at Brimfield.

Twenty-nine candidates were examined for admission to the high school, and eighteen passed safely. It is probable that there will be a later examination, though it is understood there is not room for a much larger class.

The assessors have so nearly completed the tax list as to be able to announce the tax rate, $12.50 on $1000. There are 543 poll tax payers. Total valuation of the town, $840,715. The largest taxpayers are: C. L. Randall, $104; A. W. Stacy, $140; non-residents, Boston Duck company, $232; D. P. and E. L. Clapp, Brooklyn, $117; K. L. Clapp, New York, $126; E. B. Walker estate, New York, $156.

Trampled to Death By a Bull.

Francis M. Dickenson, one of Belchertown's prominent citizens, was trampled to death by a savage young bull on his farm early Tuesday morning. His clothes were nearly all torn off and the body somewhat bruised, as if he had been tossed about, but the skin had not been lacerated by the animal's horns. Mr. Dickenson was in the habit of assisting in the work at the barn, and on Tuesday morning remained there after his sons had gone to breakfast. Not returning as soon as usual, his oldest son went in search of him and found him in the pasture back of the barn, life being extinct. It is probable that he met his death by being trampled upon and tossed, as the animal had not lacerated the flesh with the exception of a slight bruise back of one ear and upon one hand. The event has been a terrible shock to his family and townspeople generally, who held him in high esteem. Mr. Dickenson was born in New York state, but had been a resident of Belchertown for about 50 years. Of his father's family, two brothers, residents of Otisville, N. Y., survive him. A sister, Mrs. McNish, a resident of Middletown, N. Y., died a short time ago. Mr. Dickenson had been twice married. Of the first marriage, one daughter, Mrs. M. J. Shumway of Gardner, survives; of his last marriage, a widow, two sons and two daughters survive, Mrs. Dr. C. B. King and Mrs. H. D Hoag, Charles D. Dickenson and Myron A. Dickenson, all of Belchertown. Mrs. Dickenson is a sister of J. B. Woods of Springfield and Mrs. W. J. Holland of Brooklyn.

WARE.

George E. Utley has recently purchased a handsome pair of mares for use in his coal and lumber business.

George E. Tucker and family are at Pigeon Cove, instead of Pennsylvania, as the types made it last week.

The Beaver Lake club house is looking handsomer than ever in its new coat of paint by W. V. Howard.

Fire was discovered about 4 o'clock last Saturday afternoon in the attic of Gray's long tenement block on Water street. The alarm was rung in and four minutes from the first stroke there was a stream of water through the hose. The fire was soon out, although in a most difficult place to get at. The block was crowded with Polish tenants, whose furniture was not insured, but considerably damaged. It is estimated that the building was damaged $271, and the owner settled with insurance at that.

On Tuesday night a party of young men gave the town the richest kind of a musical treat as a forerunner of the glorious Fourth. A piano was set up on Fairbank's large wagon, which under the skilful touch of L. L. Bridge rang out its sweetness on the night air. Banjos and guitars were in the hands of Walter Reilley, Henry Davis and Patrick Higgins; Arthur Newcomb and Thomas Clark handled the tambos, and A. J. Crowley and Edward Lovett the triangle F. M. Carol the snare drum. The best of the entertainment was the singing, all the above named being good vocalists, and with the addition of the cultivated voice of Charles Lovett many popular seletons were rendered in a truly artistic manner. The entertainment was from 10 o'clock until 2, and given in various parts of the town.

FORBES & WALLACE'S,
SPRINGFIELD.

HERE THEY ARE AGAIN—Cheney Bros'. Printed Pongee Silks, 24 inches wide, at 37½ cents a yard; the usual 75 cent quality.

Another new lot of these famous silks to go at the same price that has plunged the whole trading population of this section into excitement. And perhaps these latest new patterns will please you better than any that we've had so far.

Pink and old rose chine effect on white ground.
Yellow and receda chine effect on white ground.
Blue and black chine effect on white ground.
Wavy line of white on navy ground.
Wavy robins' egg blue line on black ground.
Wavy white line on myrtle ground.
Wavy white line on Prussian blue ground.
Navy ground with white splotches.
Black ground with robins' egg blue splotches.
Black ground with white splotches.
Black ground with old rose splotches.
Black ground with cluster of diamond points.
Brown ground with cluster of white diamond points.

No matter what happens, probably, there will be no bigger silk bargain heard of this year. It's a remarkable silk at a remarkable price. Catch the fabric—how firm it is. Pull it—won't crock, won't pull out!—and this is a good test of its genuineness, here or anywhere, that you find silks masquerading as Cheney Brothers' Printed Pongees.

It's wise to come early; perhaps the very pattern that you'd like best will be the first to go. THE ROCKER SALE.

We've the best veranda rocker that we ever saw, or that the oldest inhabitant in these parts---we'll venture to say—ever saw at the price—$1.50.

Came Saturday—a hundred of them; and they'll all be gone before some people will ever hear of the news. Can't help those people. We've no means of telling them except through our news columns, and some people—their number is growing less and less every year, though—don't read advertisements.

The frames of the rockers are of solid maple, they've woven cane seats, high reed backs, finely turned rungs, wide arm rests, and the size is ample enough for most anybody.

The upholstered rockers are most gone; last call:

Rockers at $1.98; that have been $2.75
Rockers at 2.19; that have been 3.50
Rockers at 2.58; that have been 3.65

Spare Pearline, Spoil the Wash!

"Better use too much than too little." Too much Pearline won't do any harm—too little may. Use too much, and you only waste it, that's all. But use too little, and it's only a bit better than none at all. You'll have to work harder, and you'll have to rub—and then the wear and tear begins. It's this rubbing, and this wear, and this work that Pearline, if properly used, takes away.

Use it just as directed on every package, no more, no less, and you'll get the best results. You needn't try to improve upon it. You can't.

Beware of imitations. 365 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Blood Wine.

She—"Why do you look so unhappy, George? Don't you know that we are one now?" George—"Yes, darling, I know that; but judging from the hotel bill I've just had handed me, the manager doesn't seem to think so."—Tid-Bits.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the Remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain This same Remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism.

SWEATING SYSTEM IN NEW YORK.

The materials are cut and "bunched" for each garment by the manufacturer. They are then distributed in large lots to special jobbers, known as "contractors," each a specialist in his line. For example, one makes coats, another pantaloons, while some make special grades of size. With this distribution the wholesaler washes his hands of the business, his ignorance of how and where his goods are actually made up being as ideal as intentional.

Not far from one-half of the goods thus distributed are made up in the contractor's factories. As to the other half, the first contractor sub-lets the work to a "sweater," whose shop is generally one of the two larger rooms of a tenement flat, accommodating from 6 to 15 or 20 "sweating" employes—men, women and children. In the other large room of the flat are his living, sleeping and cooking arrangements, overflowing into the workroom. Employes whom he boards, who eat at their work, and sleep on the goods, frequently complete the intimate connection of home and shop. One-fourth of our ready-made and somewhat of our custom-made clothing are thus put together.

The people engaged are those whose families are most prolific, whoes sense of cleanliness is least developed, who comprehend no distinction between living and workrooms, whose premises are dirty to the point of filth, and who are found in the most densely populated portions of the city. But this is not the worst. Single families, inhabiting one or more rooms, generally having a family as sub-tenants, or a number of lodgers or boarders, sub-contract work from the tenement "sweaters." Thus by tenement "home workers" are made another one-fourth of our ready-made clothing and a much larger proportion of our children's clothing. The homes of those home workers include many of the most wretched in which human beings exist among us. The conditions of squalor and filth are frequently such as to make even inspection impossible, except by one hardened to the work, while the quarters in which the work is centered are those into which tend the most helpless of our population.

As to the wages in this "tenement home work," there is nothing which can properly be so called. The work is secured by underbidding of tenement sweat shops, and is generally piece work, one process of which may be attended to by the head of the family, and the rest by its other members according to their capacity. Those engaged are so generally compelled to accept rather than to choose their work that it is taken without reference to the possibility of gaining a livelihood therefrom, the miserable workers earning what they can, begging to supplement it and dying or being supported as paupers when they fail.

A large proportion—nearly, if not quite, one-half—of all the clothing worn by the majority of our people is thus made under conditions revolting to humanity and decency, and such as to endanger the health of the wearer. It is in children's clothes that the worst features most thoroughly characterize the manufacture. But the same conditions so far apply to all grades of clothing that not any can be considered as exempt. The use of ready-made goods has become so universal that no community, and almost no family, is free from danger.

Better laws, and more efficient and tactful administration of law, can do much; organization of those employed can do more; the slow betterment of conditions as the mass of foreign immigration is better digested by our population will do most of all. But for many years to come, in our great seaboard cities—especially New York—the "sweating system" will remain a reproach to humanity, a breeding nest of disease, unless one of two remedies shall be applied.

The federal government can throttle the evil by absolutely prohibiting interstate commerce in articles of clothing manufactured under other conditions than such as may be approved by law. Or the wholesale clothiers in each of our cities can stamp out the evil promptly, if they really care to do so. The first alternative is repugnant to our theory of non-interference by the federal government; the second is thus far opposed by the general policy of the manufacturers themselves.—Harper's Weekly.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES DIFFERED.—In the early days, says the Atlantic Journal, our friend was on the local staff of a Cincinnati paper. He was detailed to report a revival meeting, and was busily engaged in taking notes when one of the sisters approached him, and suggested that he should go up in front and take a seat on the anxious bench.

"Madam," he replied, "you see, I am sent here by my paper. I am very busy, and I really cannot spare the time."

"But, brother," urged the good lady, "do you not remember the story of the fishermen of Galilee, how they left their nets and all else to follow the Master?"

"I know the story," replied the unregenerate knight of the quill, "but there is a great difference, my dear madam. These fishermen were not working for John R. McLean."

Don't ache. Don't smart. Don't itch. Redding's Russia Salve stops all irritation and inflammation caused by bruises, burns, scalds, cuts, punctures, bites, skin diseases, boils, corns, bunions, etc. Never known not to give quick relief. Isn't such a medicine worth 25 cents? Ask your druggist.

If not for you, who is it for? For your friend and not for you? Oh, no, it is for everybody's friend. You are the very one, though, and by you we mean everyone. You with a capital Y and capital Soda with a capital S. After speaking of soda it makes us sad to speak of drugs. They're for people who feel sad and sick. They're among the necessities of life and after all our soda is only a high class luxury. We hate to talk about necessities. For further information call at

INDIAN MARY.

A woman named Mary Sexton, aged about 65, died at Rocky Bar, Idaho, recently. While respected and made much of by everybody, she was always referred to as "Indian Mary." It was not because she had any Indian blood in her veins, but because of an adventure in which she, single-handed and alone, whiped ten Indian warriors in a fair fight. The fertile section of Central Idaho known as Kansas Prairie extends from the Esmeralda range of mountains to about 30 miles south of the Malada River, a total distance of 90 miles, where the average breadth is about 75. One of the first settlers on the prairies was Colonel Sexton, whose wife Mary was, they moving up from Nevada. The Colonel could speak several Indian dialects, and had many times acted as interpreter when treaties were being made. The red men knew him to be a fair man, and respected him accordingly.

When the Colonel took up his land on the prairie he paid the Indians $100 over and above what he paid the government, and most of them were enthusiastic in praise, says the New York Press. There was however, a sub-chief named Red Rock, who took a dislike to the Colonel for some reason or other, and husband and wife had only got settled in their cabin when they were warned to look out for him. All the Indians about were at peace with the whites just then, and so very little attention was paid to the warnings. One September day in 1868 Red Rock called together nine young bucks who had the reputation of being headstrong and ugly tempered, and suggested that they go and wipe out the Sexton family. It did not require much urging to start them off. The ten left camp under pretense of going on a hunt, and then made a march of ten miles to the Sexton claim. They expected to find the Colonel working in the field, but it so happened that he had left home early in the morning for a ride of 20 miles on a matter of business.

When it was found that the husband was absent, it was determined to kill the wife and burn the cabin.

The Indians left their firearms outdoors and entered the cabin to find Mrs. Sexton seated in the bedroom door with some work in her hands. She greeted the callers pleasantly, but Red Rock sulkily demanded whisky and something to eat. This was mere pretence. The woman replied that she would not give them whiskey under any circumstances, and as game was plenty they must furnish their own food. On top of this she ordered them out of the house, and added that the Colonel would report their impudent conduct to the chief. Her defiant attitude gave Red Rock the excuse he wanted, and drawing his hunting knife from its sheath he said:

"We have come to kill you! When the Colonel returns he will find you roasted in the ashes of the cabin! I hate all white folks and will never be friends with a white man!"

As he ceased speaking Mrs. Sexton rose up, seized her Winchester, which was standing just inside the door, and at once opened fire on the crowd. Her action was so quick and unlooked-for as to produce a panic. Realizing that her life depended on her own efforts, and that Red Rock was the leader of the gang, she pulled down on him first and shot him dead in his tracks. Before the others could get out of the house she had dropped two more. The seven Indians ran for their guns as soon as outside the door. Mrs. Sexton had seen them hinding their rifles, and she followed them toward the spot and knocked over her fourth man before a weapon was raised against her. The Indians were armed only with muzzle loading rifles, and as soon as they had the weapons in hand they opened fire in return.

The woman replied, but at the same time backed toward the door. In the course of three minutes a dozen shots were fired, but none of them took effect. She had but one cartridge left in the gun when an Indian leaped forward, knife in hand, to seize her. She shot him dead when only 10 feet away, and then retreated into the house. In a couple of minutes she had the rifle recharged, and then looked out to see three of the five remaining Indians getting armfuls of hay from the stack to pile against the cabin. The other two had their rifles leveled on the door and window on that side of the structure. There was a small window on the other side, and Mrs. Sexton crawled through it and dropped to the ground. The first the Indians knew of her presence outside was when she shot down the foremost of the trio carrying hay across the yard. This left but four alive.

As Mrs. Sexton saw the smoke above the ditch she left the shelter of the cabin and advanced upon the Indian. Her action rattled the buck, who had not yet reloaded his rifle, and he rose up to run away. From a distance of 50 feet she fired and tumbled him over with a bullet in his back. He was mortally wounded and paralyzed from the hips down, but lived five hours. The three remaining Indians took refuge behind the stable, which was about 50 yards away, and the woman took up a position at the corner of the cabin. Ten or a dozen shots were fired at her without effect, and then one of the bucks carelessly exposed himself and was shot through the left lung and died in ten minutes. Only two were left now of the band of 10.

They probably agreed that their best chance was to make a rush upon the woman, for that was the expedient adopted. They did a foolish thing, however, in firing upon her before the rush, as they had only their knives to depend on when they left cover. She dropped one of them almost as soon as he stepped out. The other turned to the west to run away, but stumbled and fell, and as he got up he received a bullet in the back and pitched forward to die within five minutes. A quarter of an hour later two white men and three Indians who had been attracted by the firing, rode up from the south. The woman was found seated on the doorstep with the Winchester lying across her lap. She was pale and trembling but by no means on the point of fainting away. The only redskin left alive was the man she had shot in the ditch, and he it was who gave the particulars of the attack. The 10 bucks had come there with full determination to kill, and rob, and burn, and his only regret was they had failed to carry out their programme. He spoke in terms of highest praise of the woman's bravery, but lamented the fact that his bullet had not laid her low.

As soon as the news of the tragedy reached Gray Wolf, chief of the tribe, he had the bodies of the ten flung together and burned, and their rifles, ponies and whatever other personal property they possessed were given to Mrs. Sexton. In addition, she was presented with 320 acres of land and formally adopted by Gray Wolf as his sister, and so long as an Indian remained in that locality she was looked upon with the utmost reverence. That a white woman should not only come off victor in such a fight, but wipe out ten Indians in addition, was considered a miracle by all red men and a wonderful thing by all whites, and up to the days of her death Mrs. Sexton received homage above any man or woman in the territory. Ten years after the fight, when the Colonel was removed by death, over 20 Indians made a journey of 200 miles on foot to sympathize with her and look upon his grave. The cabin and stable were long since removed as changes for the better occurred, but on the site of the former the traveler will to-day find a heap of stones and a sign bearing the legend:

"Here occurred the fight in which Mary Sexton wiped out Red Rock and nine other Indians belonging to Gray Wolf's band."

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilions fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

CATARRH

Is strictly a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of sudden climatic changes.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is acknowledged to be the most thorough cure for Nasal Catarrh, Cold in the Head and Hay Fever of all remedies. It opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils, is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. The results that follow catarrh, due to the dropping of poisonous matter into the throat, are irritation of the bronchial tubes and soreness of the lungs accompanied by a cough. In all such cases we recommend Pineola Balsam to be used in connection with Cream Balm.

PINEOLA COUGH BALSAM will be found excellent for all throat and lung inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Price of Cream Balm, 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25c. In quantities of $2.50 we will deliver free of express or postage on receipt of amount.

Out of a Little Dust.

I.

In a little yellow box, fastened with a silken string,
(Both were once as white as snow in its earthward fluttering),
Thorn and stem are lying now, heedless of love's joy or grief,
And the box is filled with dust, withered rose and withered leaf.
While I look with dim sad eyes, all the present fades away
To another, fai er scene, in another land and day.
Skies alight with June's own blue, bird song pulsing through the air,
Bees among the nodding flowers, roses, roses, everywhere!
Then this withered ribboned stem held a silent offering
Which another heart, to mine, in youth's fairy-land did bring.
Oh, that was so long ago! Would you think I could forget
If this thorn drew drops of blood, or this rose with tears were wet?
Wave on wave of soundless space, blanks of half-forgotten time
Came upon me, rolling downward over youth and hope sublime!

II.

In a casket old—as this: silken pillowed, silken lined—
If I looked therein to-day, do you think that I would find
Any semblance, any trace of love's lip or hand or eye
In the silent heaps of that upon the cushion lie?
Once, in anguish pitiful, I above that casket leaned,
Calling to a vanished soul, but the blank that intervened
Beat my longing heart cries back and grew denser year by year,
Froze the fire upon love's hearthstone, chilled the blood with mortal fear,
And at last I came to know, Death has no interpreter
That can pierce our dull old world with a language plain to her!
Cold and pulseless heart of age mumbling in the dreamless dust
Where ends all things, but the soul's still unchanged and changeless trust!
Rising from the dust of love, death and flame its strength renew,
In that other world, the soul's—all its dreams will yet come true.

HER CHINESE ADORER.

She was little, prim and pious. She was also distractingly pretty.

Three of these are an unusual combination. Therefore worthy of note.

She came up to New York to study bookkeeping and shorthand. Her name was Alice Pearson, and she had a mania for converting people.

The house at which she boarded was kept by a stout Irish-American woman — Mrs. Brown. She looked the essence of good nature, but she let the boarders freeze all winter by never having a fire in the furnace, and she fed them with pork and beans until life became a burden. She had a daughter, Matie, tall, rather well-favored, though running to bone, who was much in love with a man I may term the "head boarder." That is, a person who, having a magnificent constitution, had been able to stand the ravages of Mrs. Brown's pork and beans the longest. He was a medical student, and his name was Caldwell. He was very good looking, by-the-by.

There were sixteen boarders in Mrs. Brown's establishment the first night Miss Pearson came down to dinner. Two weeks afterwards there were twenty-one, and within a month Mrs. Brown's limit—thirty—had been reached. The new-comers, it was noticed, were all men, and, curiously enough, men who, in the rush of New York business life, had time to worry about their souls. The fact was that before the lovely Miss Pearson had been in the house five weeks she had nearly ruined the surrounding boarding houses, and had turned Mrs. Brown's [illegible] into three opposing revival meetings roll[illegible] one and let loose. Fah Chung, laund[illegible]an, late of Peking, subsquently of San Francisco, then of the Bowery, New York, fell as madly and jealously in love with her as if he had been a Christian.

Miss Pearson affected demure little gray frocks, with a wide Eton collar and cuffs of white, and Fah Chung—oh, bliss!—Fah washed and ironed them for her. It was noticed that while no fault could be found with the Chinaman's ordinary work there was not in the whole of Sixth street any linen that could compare for whiteness and gloss with Miss Pearson's little collars and cuffs.

It has been remarked that Miss Pearson had a mania for converting people. She tried her hand on Millie, the waitress, first; but Mrs. Brown made strong objections to having her servant talked to, so she turned her attention to Fah Chung.

"How do you do, Mr. Chung?" she greeted him with one morning when he came for the laundry work.

"Ni cha," replied the Celestial.

Miss Pearson started.

"I guess he means 'Howdy,' Mrs. Pearson," stuck in Millie, who was sweeping the room.

"Oh, Ni cha, Mr. Chung."

The Chinaman did not change a facial muscle. He did not want to look sad, and he could not grin any harder than he was already doing. The left side of the six padded coats gave a great beat outwards.

That was getting on.

The next time he came he brought one of those little reeds with a bunch of hair fastened in one end, which the Chinese use for pens, and presented it, with his immovable grin. That gentle smile of his was so fixedly wide that Caldwell declared the top of his head to be an Island surrounded by mouth. A somewhat exaggerated metaphor. Still it was what one might call a generous smile.

The following week he laid on her shrine a package of Chinese firecrackers, and had learned to count up to five in English. She had eight articles in the washing, but he began over again at "one" when he reached the place where "six" ought to be, so that was all right.

Miss Pearson never got beyond "Ni cha" in her study of Chinese tongue, but Fah Chung applied himself with ardor to the mastery of English, and went about his laundry practicing—"One collee, one collee two cuff, two cuff, one collee, two cuff." When he got so he could say "Allee lightee, washee soon, done Slatteday," Miss Pearson thought it time she began her spiritual ministration. Accordingly she took him down to the boarding house drawing room one Saturday, sat him on a stiff horsehair chair just were he got the draughts between the fireless grate and the door beautifully, and discoursed to him.

The girl was sincerely in earnest, and it was something of a shock when he turned towards her that unchangeable smile and affably remarked:

"Me likee Melican gal."

Fah Chung slept in a tiny box of a room at the back of his laundry. Presently he took to bunking on his ironing-table and let the box to a lodger. Fah Chung seemed to desire a larger income. Its began "wasting his substance on riotous" green jade boxes and Chinese hairpins, which he presented to his spiritual sponsor when he took her washing home. The recipient thought he was setting up as an Oriental dealer, and gave him half a dollar for one the pins. When he laid the money on the table and would none of it, she took it that it was below his price, so returned the pin and pocketed the coin herself. Finally it dawned on her that he was making her a present. She promptly declined the gift, but the next week it turned up again. At last she became so tired of seeing the much-refused article "bob up serenely" every Saturday that she took it to get rid of it, and Fah Chung grinned harder, worked later and ate less. The fever of the New World had seized him. He longed to amass riches.

With all her primness, Miss Pearson was of a somewhat adventurous nature. The great town, to her country mind, was full of wonders; and leading, as a woman, even a young and pretty woman, can, if she choose, in New York, as independent a life as if she were her own brother, she indulged her passion for exploring frequently. Her studies usually occupied the day, but on those evenings when she was not engaged in setting the boarding house by the ears by catechising one or another fortunate young masculine sinner, she donned a trig little gray bonnet and cloak and wandered out into the bewitching, brilliant night.

She was not sure just why, but she found that she felt a little uncomfortable in walking by herself up Broadway, Fifth avenue or Madison Square in the evening, but the good-natured crowds in the less fashionable parts of the town never annoyed or frightened her.

What more blissful than to walk down Sixth avenue with its cheap restaurants filled with noisy, merry people?

After a stroll part way down the avenue, it was very pleasant to cut through into dark deserted Thompson street and wander about a little while before taking Bond street, or one of the other turnings leading into the upper part of the Bowery.

Good little Miss Pearson might not have ventured down that street alone had she known what was going on in its basements.

It was a long time before anyone at the boarding house dreamed that she had gone anywhere except perhaps to chapel or to do a bit of shopping, and then it was Caldwell who found it out. He—good fellow that he was—simply followed at a distance and kept guard.

Now, it chanced that a certain pair of narrow, slanting black eyes had been keener than Caldwell's big round brown ones. Their owner perfied his "washee shop's reputation for promptness by lingering about the boarding house every night for an hour after dinner to learn what his divinity's movements were to be. If she went exploring, so did Fah Chung, and kept an eye on her. It grew more complicated when Caldwell took to shadowing her too. That gentleman never noticed the Chinaman, but Fah Chung did not grin so hard when he looked at Mr. Caldwell, particularly after he had seen Miss Pearson fasten a rose in his buttonhole.

There are some things which change not, eithern in America nor in China, and the heart of the lover is one. Fah Chung might take the Fourth of July, with fire crackers and illuminations, to be a kind of American "Feast of the Lanterns"—a great religous festival, in fact. There he mistook. Decidedly.

But Fah Chung was right when he guessed that the object of his passion regarded him no more in the light of a lover than she would some old woman who chose to wear a pigtail and unusual shoes.

The change in dress shadowed upon Miss Pearson's mind the fact that her laundryman was a man, and her manner toward him became somewhat reserved. That was good for the beginning. He wrote her a letter—she took it for a laundry list, by the bye— in his native tongue, of course,—in which he declared his passion. He knew she could not read it, but it was an outlet for his feelings.

He got his Irish lodger to address the envelope. As it stood, she could read the outside, and he the inside, so that made it even.

It was rather a pity that Fah Chung could not have learned a little more of the customs of his adopted country earlier. The knowledge might have saved him from making two great mistakes.

The first lay in the fact that he had not curtained his laundry window.

Strolling down the Bowery one bright afternoon and enjoying to the full the rush and roar of life in that Broadway of the lower class "Gothamites," Miss Pearson was amusing herself by counting the different nationalities represented in the shop's and so on. Between two turnings on one side of the street only she had passed a German delicatessen shop, a French laundry, six drinking saloons kept by Irishmen, a Swiss wood carver, a Spanish Jew pawnbroker, an Italian ballet master's academy, and one solitary shop—a grocery— kept by a native American. At the last corner she came upon Fah Chung's laundry. She stopped at the window to admire the scrupulous cleanliness and to watch its owner at work.

Now the ways of American laundrywomen are not as the ways of the Chinese laundrymen.

The former sprinkles the rough dried clothes by dipping her hand into a basin of water and flirting the drops from her finger tips. Then she rolls the garment up tightly and lays it away for an hour or two to absorb the moisture evenly.

Not so the Chinaman. He fills his mouth with water and deftly ejects a tiny spray over the garment in hand at the same time he is ironing it.

Fah Chung, lovingly pulling out the dainty ruffles of a little white apron with his slender yellow fingers, and ironing with ardor, was probably never so thunderstruck in his life as when it was snatched from his hands and a lovely little face as red as a rose with anger and disgust disclosed to him Miss Pearson's indignant brown eyes. The rest of her things lay on a shelf near, and, scolding as fast as her tongue could wag, she gathered them up, thrust them into a piece of paper, threw a half dollar upon the table and marched away, the amazed Chung in the meantime standing in helpless bewilderment, his cheeks puffed out, with his mouth full of water and his black eyes staring.

After that Miss Pearson sent her things to an Irish woman, who scrubbed them to pieces within a month, and the laundry of Fah Chung knew them no more. Alas!

His second mistake—a fatal one—sprang from a national difference of views regarding death and all things appertaining thereto which exists between the extreme east and the west.

He sent her a most gorgeous and comfortable coffin—life size—for a Christmas present.

Any one in China would have been flattered no end by such a splendid gift. Miss Pearson did not seem to like it.

In fact, she took it as an intimation on the Celestial's part that the "wooden overcoat"—as they are facetiously termed in the states—would presently have a wearer whom he, in remembrance of the scene in the laundry, would gladly provide.

It is probable that Fah Chung would have been kicked farther down the street than he was, but that Caldwell, who was in the drawing-room when the gift was presented, had to leave him just then.

Miss Pearson in her agitation seemed to require some one to hold her in his arms and call her his darling, and assure her that just as soon as he had time he would 'go and finish that Chinaman." She would not let any of the other fellows do it—Matie did not offer to go—so Caldwell sacrificed himself. Good old fellow! Matie glanced at them, and looked rather as if she could have found a use for that coffin if they had not been in such haste to pitch it into the street after its heart-broken owner.

The little Chinaman crept miserably away, wondering at the uncivilized manners of those "western barbarians." But even then "'is 'art was true"—not to Poll, but to Pearson.

Caldwell married Miss Pearson.

He got his diploma as M. D. and settled in her old home. They are shining lights among the Deep Water Baptists there.

Mrs. Caldwell—in view of her great familiarity with the Chinese, whereof Fah Chung's "laundry list," framed and hanging in her sitting room, is a proof—is always called upon to entertain "returned foreign missionaries," and to preside over the "top boots and blanket" clubs.

Matie had transferred her affections to her mother's present "head boarder." She is no longer young. She would not mind marrying.

Fah Chung? Ah, yes; Fah Chung.

Well, he got killed one night near the Bowery.

Caldwell, at that time accepted lover to Miss Pearson, had told her that she must on no account venture into any of the streets between lower Broadway and the Bowery alone. So, one evening, when he was at the hospital, she felt it her imperative duty to do so. She wandered about Mulberry street for a while and Baxter street, unconscious of two figures that had been following her for the last half hour.

From the top of Baxter street there is a short, very narrow, very dark turning leading into the wide and brilliantly lighted Bowery.

This turning is very quiet. It is filled with Chinese gambling hells and opium dens. The police rather avoid the place. It rejoices in the descriptive and suggestive local name of Dead Man's Alley.

As Miss Pearson was about to enter it, she was stopped by a Chinaman, who motioned her not to come that way. Recognizing Fah Chung, she indignantly brushed past him, and with great stateliness proceeded on.

Half-way between Baxter street and the Bowery, a stealthy figure stole close behind her—another figure quickly and quietly ran between them, there was a muttered oath, a slight struggle and something gleamed in the hand of the taller one. Just then Miss Pearson reached the Bowery, and in Dead Man's Alley one man was running swiftly and silently toward the sheltering crowds in Baxter street, and the other, a little Chinaman, lay on the ground bleeding to death. When Miss Pearson, on reaching home, found that her purse was gone, she exclaimed:

"There! I knew that a creature who sprinkled clothes in the disgusting way he did, wasn't honest!"—L. Hereward, in Today.

WHY ONE MAN FAILED.

They were talking about newspaper work the other evening. The oldest man in the party, who is now doing something in the real estate line, said that he had tried newspaper writing when he was not fitted for the business, and had given it up.

"I was always called a good writer at college," he said, "and I thought I had a good style. When I began work for myself I got employment with a circus manager.

"Can you write?" he asked.

"I can," I said.

"Well, I want a two-sheet poster that'll catch the town. Write one for me."

"And this was what I wrote, as nearly as I recollect:

"This is the last week that Mr. Sawdust's great circus will be in the city, and everyone should visit it at once. It offers to the public a number of admirable features, including several amusing clowns and many cleverly trained trick animals. The ring performance is highly creditable, and consists of various acts by the aforementioned clowns and animals. There will be a number of interesting races between the elephants and dogs ridden by trained monkeys. Mlle. Comehigh, who has done very good work abroad, executes a dance on the bare back of a running horse and jumps through some ignited paper-covered hoops. Children and clergymen will enjoy the collection of wild beasts in the manageric. The whole will conclude with an enjoyable exhibition of the Siege of New Orleans, the effect of which will be hightened by fire works. Admission will be 50 cents for adults, children half price."

"That was about it, I turned it in and smiled, for I thought I had done well. The manager differed from me in a coarse and profane way, but for some reason he didn't discharge me. He hired an ignorant man to write a new poster, and set me to work selling tickets, I stayed with him three seasons— until he went out of business—and at the end of that time I was one of the most proficient circus poster writer in the business.

"After he sold out I sought employment in a newspaper office, got it, and was set to work. My first job was reporting a fire in the Bowery. I can't remember only the first part of my report. It started out in this fashion:

"The grandest exhibition of the fire fiend ever given. Thousands of spectators thrilled by the grand and overpowering scene. The untold wealth of the Indies was threatened at early hour last evening by a grand and unparalleled holocaust at the corner of Bowery and Grand street. The great and throbbing outery of robust and living humanity was halted in its course. The streets were packed. The sidewalks were jammed. The flames started in the basement of the doomed building, and creeping stealthily up the air shaft, burst out, amid the wild, hoarse cries of the multitude, from the front windows. Higher and higher they rose, now licking the pale sky with their blood-red tongues, now sweeping downward and enveloping in their fiery embrace the neighboring chimneys. It was a sight of a lifetime, and the crowd looked on with bated breath."

"While I was writing, the city editor came around and looked over my shoulder.

"'What was the damage?" he asked, when he had read this far.

"'About $5000,' I said.

"'Any lives lost?"

"'None,' I answered.

"'All right,' he said. 'I guess you needn't finish this thrilling tale.'

"'All right, sir."

"'And by the way,' he added, as I was putting on my hat, 'you needn't come back to-morrow. You need rest after that effort. Suppose you take a year or so, at your own expense. Good-night!'

"The next day I went into the real estate business."—Door Country Advocate.

PALMER NEWS.

LOCAL NOTICES.

The young men implicated in removing a sign from W. R. Milligan's shoe store last week having agreed to replace the same no further action will taken in the matter.

A PHYSICIAN SKIPS OUT,

Leaving Numerous Unpaid Bills and Many Creditors, Who Would Like to See Him Again.

Since last Saturday night it has been the "Late Dr. Bell of Three Rivers," as that is the last time he was seen in this vicinity. At that time he packed up a few things and told his wife that he was obliged to leave town on account of his inability to pay his bills. He told her that she would hear from him, but did not say from where or when. Monday inquiries for him began to come thick and fast, and it soon developed that a number of people regret their acquaintance with the man.

Dr. Bell came to Three Rivers last January from East Chatham, N. Y., and was engaged by Dr. Desmarais as an assistant. Not long after Dr. Desmarais decided to dispose of his practice on account of ill-health, and Dr. Bell agreed to buy it; a forfeit was posted, but Dr. Bell never kept his part of the agreement. Later in the spring Dr. Desmarais decided to take a post-graduate course in New York, and Dr. Bell remained in charge of the office. He was a pleasant man and made many friends, acquiring a considerable practice. He evidently needed money, however, for he borrowed $250 of John Wilson of Three Rivers, giving as security a mortgage on two horses, a carriage and a harness. Mr. Wilson failed to have the mortgage recorded. Soon after this Dr. Bell also borrowed $300 of J. W. Cheney, giving a mortgage on the same property, and including some furniture. This mortgage was recorded, and so holds the property. He then sold one of the horses, a carriage and harness to W. R. Milligan of Palmer, who finds that the carriage and harness were the property of Dr. Desmarais, and the horse one on which Mr. Cheney holds a mortgage, so his claim is worthless and he is out the amount paid for them, about $150. Not long ago the Dr. secured a loan of $100 from S. H. Hellyar of Palmer, and again the much-encumbered property was made to duty as security, while it was again inflicted with a second mortgage to the same party June 29th for another $160. J. F. Hartnett of Three Rivers also loaned the Dr. $100, taking his note for security. F. F. Marcy has a bill against him for about $150 worth of lumber which C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers converted into a small store on ground which the Dr. had leased from him, but as the work was never paid for Mr. Ruggles has attached the building. So closely did the Dr's. creditors press him that last week he agreed to go to Holyoke with a Palmer lawyer Monday and arrange matters, but failed to appear.

There is no trace as to his whereabouts; he was not seen to take a train from Three Rivers, and nothing has been heard from him. A wife and four young children are left behind, who will go to Holyoke, where Mrs. Bell has relatives.

The horse which W. R. Milligan bought was claimed by Mrs. Bell as her property, and the check in payment was made to her order, she endorsing the same, and Mr. Milligan has made a complaint against her for selling mortgaged property, knowing it to be mortgaged. Mrs. Bell did not sign the mortgage given Mr. Cheney on the horse, but did sign the note which the mortgage secured, and the question as to whether she really owned the animal, and the possibility that it was mortgaged without her knowledge, will come up at the trial.

Dr. Desmarais has this morning discovered that Dr. Bell has collected several accounts due the former and probably has the amount with him, unless previously spent.

Fined $100 for Illegal Liquor Keeping.

The case of Ernest M. Lord for illegal liquor keeping at Three Rivers was tried in the district court Tuesday morning. T. W. Kenefick of Palmer appeared for the commonwealth, and W. H. McClintock of Springfield for the defense. Deputy Sheriff Studley told the circumstances of the raid, which took place about 11.30 on the night of the 3d. When he went into the room he found 15 or 20 men there, one being at the bar drinking from a bottle, which the officer secured as the man set it down; it had contained lager, in the opinion of the officer. Behind the bar were a number of "soft" drink bottles, and a lot of beer glasses; in a back room in a refrigerator were found seven bottles of beer and a quart bottle containing about a pint of whisky. There was an entrance to this room in front of the bar in the front room, and also a door leading to it from behind the bar. There was a bed in the room and a man lay on it asleep. Officer Manning of Three Rivers gave the same testimony. Counsel for the defense claimed that there was no proof that the liquor in the back room, if it was liquor, was kept by Lord; that there had been no evidence to show that he occupied or had anything to do with the room, or that the stuff seized belonged to him if he did, and asked for his discharge. Counsel for the commonwealth held that with the liquor on the ice in the back room, with a direct connection to it from behind the bar, and a bottle just emptied by a customer at the bar, there was an almost direct line from the stuff on ice to the consumer, who was served by Lord, and the court upheld this view of the case, fining the defendant $100, from which an appeal was taken and bonds in the sum of $300 furnished by LeRoy Lord of North Wilbraham and Frederick Calkins of Palmer. Lord had been talking about a settlement of the matter before the trial, and may find it hard sledding if he ever allows the case to come to trial in the upper court.

A New Board of Health.

The selectmen are no longer the board of health, for which they are thankful, as the work has been particularly arduous during the scarlet fever cases. The new board is composed of Drs. William Holbrook, H. A. Smith and W. H. Bliss. It will be remembered that these gentlemen were nominated and elected a board of health at the annual town meeting in March, all having been nominated for one year. But the Legislature of 1894 had passed a bill providing that all boards of health should be composed of three members and be elected in 1895 for three, two and one year respectively, and one each year thereafter, to serve for three years, and it was decided that they were not legally elected, and as the statutes provided that the selectmen should take upon themselves the duties of a board of health in such cases, they did so. The act regarding the election of a board of health was one of the last of the 1894 Legislature, and no one seemed to know much about it, Palmer not being the only town in the state which was without a board of health when the facts became known; in fact there were so many of them that the Legislature of 1895 was called upon for relief in the matter, and one of its last acts was to pass a measure providing that in all cases where a board of health had been nominated, balloted for and declared elected at the last annual town meeting, the board should serve out the time for which it was elected, notwithstanding any informality in the nominations, the balloting or the election. This relieved the Palmer selectmen from longer serving as a board of health, and the new board organized Monday with Dr. Holbrook as chairman.

Manufacturing Concerns Raise Wages.

The employes of the Palmer Carpet Co. were notified last Saturday morning that on and after Monday they would receive a raise in their wages, amounting to about 10½ per cent. The raise was in honor of M. Percival Whittall, son of the principal owner of the works, on occasion of his 21st birthday. To celebrate their good fortune the employes arranged a meeting, and nearly all of them gathered at the mill Saturday evening. A salute was fired from a cannon, and a display of fireworks followed. Mr. Joseph Page then read a letter from Percival Whittall to the employes, thanking them for the birthday present they had sent him by Mr. Page. It was voted to send a vote of thanks to M. J. Whittall, senior member of the firm for the liberality shown. The evening was passed with singing and dancing, and refreshments were served.

Mrs. Phetteplace will preach in the Advent chapel next Sunday.

A new sign has been put up over the entrance to Hellyar's bargain store.

Rev. C. R. Minard commenced his labors as pastor of the Baptist church last Sunday.

An attempt is to be made soon to form a camp of the Sons of Veterans in this place.

The interior of W. E. Stone's store has been brightened by new paint and varnish.

The bicycle club was particularly fortunate in clearing about $100 by its race meet the Fourth.

At the last meeting of Revere chapter, O. E. S., it was voted to hold no more meetings during July and August.

The new quarters of the Odd Fellows will be dedicated on the 23d of this month, a week from next Tuesday.

The special committee appointed to build the new school house at Thorndike will meet next Monday to consider plans.

Miss Helen Jenkins gave a party yesterday afternoon to a number of her young friends in celebration of her 10th birthday.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church has voted to change the hour of its Sunday evening service from 6 to 7.

Miss Lizzie Kinnevan has resigned her position at the depot restaurant and is now employed by the Palmer Carpet Co.

The recent census is supposed to show a population of over 6800 in Palmer, a gain of about 250 over the census of five years ago.

The Palmer Bicycle Club is making some changes in its rooms in Lynde's block, among them being the enlargment of the pool room.

About 125 attended the picnic of the Baptist Sunday school at State Line Wednesday, many remaining until the late train at night.

The trustees of the Palmer Cemetery Association will hold a meeting this evening at 7.30 in the reference room of the public library.

A fine display of fireworks, which it had been planned to have on the evening of the Fourth, but which was postponed by the rain, was given on the vacant lot west of W. E. Stone's house Tuesday evening, and was witnessed by a large number of people. The pyrotechnics were provided by the joint contributions of a number of persons in that vicinity.

Since the first of January 76 cases of contagious diseases have been reported through the town, against 31 for the whole of 1894. And these 76 do not, in all probability, represent the total number of cases; some have no doubt gone unreported by physicians, while others have had mild forms of the disease which did not require medical attendance.

Travel over the Boston and Albany road toward Boston has been very heavy during the past week. Since last Friday nearly all of the through trains from the West have been run in two sections, in addition to which three special trains were run through Saturday and one Sunday, one Tuesday and seven Wednesday. On Saturday 31 extra sleepers went east over the road.

The track on the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society's grounds was measured by a surveyor Tuesday, and was found to be 8½ feet over a half mile. The society is now a member of the National Trotting Association, and the races at the fair in September will be run under its rules. The entry blanks for the races are ready, and can be had of O. P. Allen, the secretary of the association. The premium lists are ready for distribution, and can be had at the same place.

The New London Northern road will run a special excursion to Watch Hill and Block Island the 20th, a week from to-morrow, and will allow patrons to stay over Sunday without extra charge for the tickets, which will be $1 50 for the round trip This gives a most excellent opportunity to spend a couple of days at the seashore and get a slight relaxation from the bustle of business and a respite from the heat of summer. The train will leave Palmer at 7.35 a. m., 10 minutes behind the regular Block Island train.

W. R. Milligan, the shoe dealer, offers a liberal reward for any information regarding the removing of a sign from his store Wednesday night.—Palmer Journal.

This advertisement of a reward on the part of Milligan must be a joke. Does he remember that Wednesday evening was the one before the glorious Fourth, when signs and sign boards are the rightful plunder of the small boy? Or if he thinks that in "de gang" of youths who probably took an irrepressible liking to his sign there is treason enough to "squeal," he thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor ne'er is like to be in the heart of boys the night before the Fourth, banded together to raise the "old Harry." You can't bribe 'em, Milligan. Get a new sign.—North Adams Daily Transcript, July 10.

When one of the special Endeavor trains from the west stopped at the station here Wednesday afternoon for water a lady handed O. C. Marcy a postal card and requested that he hand it to the lady in the next train to whom it was addressed, as follows: "For Lady with blue shawl, green & white striped shirt waist & little girl—Please give this card to her, she will come in on the next train from the West." The genial hack-driver read it, and concluded that the task of finding that particular woman among so many was too great for even his good nature, and so "guessed he wouldn't have time," and turned the card over to Station Agent Rice. The reverse of the card requested the sending of the blue shawl to a Lynn address.

It has been proposed that Palmer have a merchant's excursion to Watch Hill in August, about the first of the month, similar to those which Monson and Stafford have had for the past few years. Last year was the second for Monson merchants, and nearly every store was closed for the day, and proprietors, clerks and all joined in a good time and a day's outing at the shore; over 700 went. The fare for the round trip will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children, and over four hours are given at Watch Hill. It is proposed to run a special train, leaving Palmer ahead of the regular in the morning, and returning ahead of the regular at night, reaching here about 7.30 It is probable that the business club will be asked to take hold of the matter, and arrange a day's outing.

The Palmers will play to-morrow, on the grounds here, the first of a series of three games with the Warrens for the championship of Central Massachusetts. The Warrens have not lost a game this season, and some good ball playing may be looked for, The Palmer team will be a strong one, composed as follows: Larkin and Grace of Haydenville, pitcher and catcher; Cross, 1st base; Holbrook, 2d base; Nelson, 3d base; Rooney, short stop; Hastings, right field; Murphy, center field; Roche, left field. The admission will be only 15 cents, and the manager wishes it understood that all attending the game will be required to pay. The grounds have been hired of the agricultural society, and this, with the other expenses necessary for the support of the team, render a "deadhead" list impossible. Ladies will be admitted free, as usual.

The history and manual of the Second Congregational church has been published and is ready for distribution. It contains a complete history of the church and its various departments of work, a list of its various officers since its organization, a full list of members and a list of graduates in various schools, teachers and professional men who have been members. This part of the work has been written by O. P. Allen. The elaborate course of Bible study and the constitution and by-laws were written by the pastor, Rev. F. E. Jenkins. The work is illustrated by a fine new view of the church, a cut of the first church in Palmer, and portraits of all the pastors, and is printed on heavy toned paper. By vote of the church one copy will be given each member of the church (man and wife counting as one), and a copy to each household of its regular congregation in which there is no member of the church. To others the price will be 35 cents, and copies can be obtained of O. P. Allen.

It is safe to predict that Ringling Bros.' World's Greatest Show will receive an enthusiastic welcome when it exhibits here next Tuesday, July 16. It is larger, grander and more comprehensive than ever this year, and the press of other cities unhesitatingly pronounce it the greatest enterprise of its kind in the world. In point of novelty or in the number of greatest features no other show can approach it. The concerts of the Liberati Band alone constitute a grand and complete entertainment, and musical people are especially interested in this grand extra feature of the big show. The triple ring performance is beyond all comparison the finest ever seen in America. The menagerie, with its giant giraffe; the ponderous hippopotamus and the other rare and curious wild beasts; the horse fair with its 400 valuable horses; the grand opening tournament; the Roman hippodrome, with its thrilling standing races, its exciting two and four-horse chariot races and other engrossing contests, all contribute to a performance which in extent, variety and costliness defies description. The procession will leave the grounds at 10 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition, and move over the principal streets. Ringling Bros. have always been famed for their great street pageant, but this year's effort far surpasses that of any previous year.

On Monday Nelson Lanphear of Monson was placed on probation to keep the peace for six months, his advent in court being occasioned by an assault on Mrs. Elmira Pease. On Tuesday James Peverill of Three Rivers was tried for an assault on Mrs. Harriet Russell, and paid a fine of $5. James Murphy of Thorndike was also tried for an assault on one Lynch. It was shown that there had been bad blood between the two for some time, and when Lynch went into the barroom of the Clinton House Saturday night and was told that Murphy was "laying for" him, he went down to the other end of the bar, where Murphy was, and "just pushed him away from me, because I didn't want no trouble with him at all." Murphy naturally resented being "pushed" by a couple of blows, which he said Lynch inflicted, especially as he had his hands full at the time, and so dropped his burden and promptly placed one of Mr. Lynch's eyes in mourning, which he showed in court. Murphy was fined $1, and paid.

A young child of Nelson Lanphear of Monson was brought in yesterday as a neglected child, and given over to the care of the state authorities.

A young man in this village, who once delighted to annoy parties who looked at the moon a little too long on balmy summer evenings, has lived up to his stoical theory this week. It has leaked out that he indulged in a boat ride the other evening. The following morning several boatmen claimed to have been nearly run down by a reckless oarsman. No lawsuits will result, as the boat was not going at a very great rate of speed. The skipper seemed to be wholly absorbed in something. Whether he was admiring that celestial orb or whether he was gazing on the scenery in the rear of his craft no one has yet been able to ascertain.

Hale, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating, in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives of the family. The ceremony took place in the front parlor, the bridal couple standing under a horseshoe of evergreen, daisies and honeysuckles. The house was prettily decorated with evergreen, daisies and honeysuckles. Eddie Lamb, brother of the groom, and Daisy Canterbury, sister of the bride, stood with them. Fatal Accident to a Young Girl.

Nora Sullivan, 19, a daughter of the late Daniel Sullivan of South Belchertown, was killed Monday morning by being thrown from a wagon, death ensuing an hour and a half after the accident. She was employed in the mill at this place, and in company with two sisters had got into the wagon which was used to carry her to and from the mill, when it was discovered that the brudle of the harness was broken. The brother who drove the horse left his sisters in the wagon, to which the horse was hitched, while he took the bridle off and started for the house to mend it. The horse had been in the habit of starting for the pasture as soon as the harness was taken off, and evidently thought it was intended he should do so this time, for he started for it, but apparently became frightened on finding he was attached to a wagon, and started on a run, going through a barway, where the two sisters were thrown out, one of them, Mary, receiving a sprained ankle and other bruises, the other not being hurt. The horse then continued over a stone wall, where Nora was thrown out, her head striking a stone. She was taken up unconscious, and died an hour and a half later. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at St. Bartholomew's Catholic church, and was attended by many sympathizing friends.

Base Ball Notes.

The Thorndikes did not play the Gilbertville club here on Saturday, rain preventing the game. The home team will go to Gilbertville to-morrow.

The Thorndike club notices by the posters announcing the first game that the Knowles club of Warren and the Palmers are to play a series of three games to determine which shall be the champions of Central Massachusetts. The Thorndikes and Palmers have met twice this season, and each have won a game. Manager Farrell of the Thorndikes says he would like to meet the Palmers on any ground for fun or for money. He says he is not bent on playing for money, but that if a game cannot be arranged otherwise he is willing to post $50 that the Thorndikes can defeat the regular Palmer team. He is in hopes that Manager Conroy of the Palmers will respond and make arrangements for a game, or a series of games.

THE so-called patriotic orders can learn a lesson from the riot at East Boston on the Fourth. An organization wished to appear in the parade of the day with the American flag and a little red schoolhouse; it had no connection with the A. P. A., but four Democratic Catholic aldermen thought it had, and by voting adversely prevented the two-thirds vote necessary to give them a place. And in so doing they were simply acting as the protective orders would toward them. This action of the aldermen was directly responsible for the trouble; application was made to Governor Greenhalge for permission to parade and for protection, which was granted; the whole matter was made public by the newspapers, and thousands of people flocked to that section who would otherwise have stayed away. The rear of the column formed by the society was left unprotected in the parade, and a carriage containing ladies was attacked; in the melee which followed before the police could arrive a number of shots were fired and one man, a bystander, was killed and others seriously hurt. That one organization has as much right as another to parade cannot be denied, and if there be any regret at the reaction of the teachings of the protective orders it can only be that innocent persons were the victims.

Ralph Blodgett, the 13-years-old son of the late Giles Blodgett, was quite severely cut and bruised last Friday morning. He had just finish'd using a two-horse mower when the horses started to run before he had thrown the machine out of gear. When near the barn they ran over a ditch, breaking the evener and throwing young Blodgett forward over the knives. It is thought that the crossing of the ditch, which freed the horses from the machine, was the only thing which saved the boy's life. Otherwise he would have been right behind the horses' heels, between the pole and the wheel. As it was he escaped with a bad cut on his leg and some bruises on his hip and back

Death of Giles Blodgett.

Giles Blodgett, 65, died quite suddenly last Saturday morning. He had been ill for a long time, but was not considered in immediate danger. He was born in Stafford, Ct., but had lived in Warren most of his life, and was a well-to-do farmer. He was a member of the 42d Massachusetts regiment, and belonged to the Warren G. A. R. post. He was also a member of Quaboag lodge of Masons, and for many years a member of the Congregational church, where he was much loved and respected. His mother, Mrs. Elvira Blodgett, is still living, at the age of 93. A widow and three children, Miss Emma Blodgett, a teacher in the Springfield schools, and Edith and Ralph, who live at home, survive him. He also leaves five brothers, Andrew Blodgett of Springfield, Dr. Charles Blodgett of Holyoke, Dr. Julius Blodgett of Newton, Dr. Albert G. Blodgett and Frank Blodgett of West Brookfield, and two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Patrick of Warren and Mrs. Julia Lovell of Onarga, Ill. A Painful Accident.

In alighting from a carriage at Mrs. Warren Tarbell's she fell, striking upon her left side and fracturing the thigh bone. Mrs. Lawrence was able to be comfortably moved to her son's home in the afternoon.

Funeral of John N. Hubbard.

The funeral of John N. Hubbard of Chicago was very largely attended last Friday at the Hubbard homestead on Tower Hill. The services were opened by Rev. Mr. Kyle of the First Congregational church, who was followed by Rev. M. L. Richardson of Montague, a former pastor of the church in Brimfield. Rev. Mr. Whittlesay, formerly pastor of the Evanston, Ill., church of which Mr. Hubbard was a leading member and who was best acquainted with his life there and in Chicago, then paid an affectionate and fitting tribute to his character as exhibited in his business life, his work in the church and in his social relations. Amid all the whirl and stress of business activity in that rushing city Mr. Hubbard stood as a strong man. While his business ability won the respect of his associates and competitors, he was also distinguished for his character as a man of principle. Justice, integrity and charity characterized all his business relations, and his life was a daily witness to the truth that business can be successfully conducted on Christian principles. He was no less active in good works; and in the death of John Hubbard the church at Evanston has last a leader, and the community a citizen who was respected, trusted and loved, and whose memory is a benediction to all who came under his influence, shared his friendship or received helpful ministrations. Selections were given by a quartet composed of members of the First church choir. The bearers were Edward B. Brown, Orus F. Parker, Arthur B. Brown and Charles S. Tarbell, schoolmates of Mr. Hubbard in the Hitchcock Free High School. Although the field of Mr. Hubbard's business life and other activities was in the west, he kept up his connection with the people and interests of Brimfield, spending most of his summer vacations here and keeping old acquaintances and associations constantly renewed. He will be especially missed in the alumni association, at all of whose meetings he made an effort to be present, adding always to their interests by his spirit of good comradeship and genial words.

Brimfield has this year suffered the loss of a number of her sons who had just reached middle life and were men of marked usefulness and success. No one of them will be more sincerely mourned than John Hubbard.

District Deputy Toogood of Three Rivers visited Ware lodge, A. O. U. W., at its regular meeting Thursday evening. One new member was inititiated; the total membership now is 69.

In a recent paper an item from a Granby correspondent read; "Granby's five-eighths of a mile of state road is nearly finished, and is a fine piece of work." Ware bicyclists would be proud if they could boast of five-eighths of a mile of road which could be called even respectable.

The ball game to-morrow afternoon between the Northampton and Ware firemen, for the championship of Hampshire county, is expected to be of much interest. The Ware team are all firemen, and some of them are old players. The second game of the series will be played at Northampton.

Eddy and daughters, Mrs. Isaac Jeffries and daughter, W. H. Rivers, Harry Hitchcock, Archie Irwin, Arthur T. Smith, Miss Anna Fenn and Miss Coville.

There will be races on the driving park next week Friday and Saturday. On Friday there will be a 2 40 class for $100, and a three-minute class for $75; Saturday 2.28 and 2.34 classes for purses of $200 and $150 respectively. There will also be a race for horses without a mark, for 100 bushels of oats. The grand stand will be covered and the burned sheds rebuilt.

About 8.15 this morning there was an alarm rung from box 46 for a blaze in the tenement over George Eddy's boot manufactory. The tenement was occupied by George Lattinville, and at the time his children were alone in the rooms and set fire to a rubber coat and other clothing. The door and casing were burned, but the firemen had it out before much damage was done. The building was insured, but the loss would have been considerable if it had burned.

An event which will long be remembered by many was the house warming last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Hathaway, who have recently moved into their new house on Pleasant street, were surprised by about seventy-five of their friends. The evening was spent in a pleasant way with games, etc. A fine oak dining room set was presented by friends, E. W. Barney making the presentation speech, to which Mr. Hathaway responded in a genial way. Ice cream and cake were served.

There are so many routes of travel between the East and West now-a-days that one hardly knows which to choose, as each has some special points of interest. The traveler from this section can make no mistake if the Connecticut River division of the Boston & Maine and the Grand Trunk system be the chosen route. Leaving Springfield on the first trains now in service one is soon gliding swiftly along one of the garden spots of America, the famous Connecticut River valley; Mounts Tom and Holyoke stand proudly before one's vision, and busy Holyoke, Northampton and Greenfield are soon passed and the Green Mountain State is first in evidence when Brattleboro is reached. Here is the summer home of Rudyard Kipling and Mary Howe; pretty valley farms and comfortable farm houses and plenty, the river and valley narrows but is still a thing of beauty. Bellows Falls, the picturesque, and then comes White River Junction, at which point the Boston trains of the B. & M. unite with our train and thence over the Central Vermont we still journey on, or if we desire to visit Quebec for a short side trip we can here take the Passumpsic division of the B. & M. and readily do so, paying our respects to Lake Memphremagog and other intiresting points. This side trip over, we pass thriving and pretty Vermont towns and reach St. Albans, a remarkably handsome town, and at St. John we enter the tracks of the Grand Trunk system and are clearly upon foreign soil. Crossing the long bridge, a wonder in its day, we land at Montreal and spend enjoyable hours amid strange sights and scenes. The route to Chicago skirts along the grand old St. Lawrence River, and for variety we leave the train and travel awhile on the palace steamers plying on river and lake, and landing at Toronto, a city of importance and great interest, we resume the rail journey. Leaving the Canadian soil via the famous tunnel under the St. Clair river, a marvel of modern engineering, we are now "in the States," and Michigan in particular. Thriving towns and a pleasing landscape are the rule, and swift locomotive and good track soon land us in the magnificent terminal used by the Chicago & Grand Trunk, the Dearborn Station, and we are right in the bustle of America's most wonderful city, Chicago. Such is a brief description of one way, and a very pleasant way it is, to travel between the busy East and the bustling Western countyr.

LETTER FROM IOWA.

STORM LAKE, IOWA.

Editor Journal:—A distance of more than three thousand miles away intensifies a longing for some communication with friends at home, and as I look out upon the broad and level fields, forming a landscape of rich black soil stretching out as far as the eye can see, with only here and there a stream of muddy water, my mind involuntarily turns to my own New England home, with all its rock-ribbed hills, and murmuring streams of crystaline water. These thoughts of home, however, impel a correspondence to the JOURNAL, thus enabling me through its publication to acquaint my eastern friends with some things unlike our own which exist in this part of the country.

After leaving Palmer and traveling many hundred miles, thus catching glimpses of many and many a farm house, the first familiar things I saw were daisies. Next on several farms I noticed small cobble stones, and how they were being utilized for fencing purposes in constructing walls with them, first a layer of stone, then a layer of mortar, and so on until of sufficient hight. Again in passing land newly broken up I noticed another way of building a substantial fence. The stumps, which were taken out with roots projecting five or six feet, were placed in a line around the field.

The cities west of Chicago compare poorly in magnificence with our eastern cities. Most of them, it is true, have wide and level streets, though I found an exception to this at Galena. This being the home of General Grant, I paid particular attention to its location. It is situated in a valley, with high hills on either side, and along its streams are seen many manufacturing industries. Independence is another city which I thought best to mention, on account of its being the home of Mr. Williams, the noted horseman whose name is familiar to every reader of the JOURNAL. And finally here is Storm Lake, situated alongside of a lake three miles long and two wide, after which it is named. Its streets are broad and level, 100 feet wide, running parallel with each other directly north and south one way, and east and west the other. There are an abundance of fruit and shade trees here, the first being set out some 24 years ago when there were only six dwelling houses in town. Birds were almost unknown here then, and the reason for this is quite evident from the fact that there would not be anything on which a bird could alight. The barbary bush is grown here altogether for the front yard hedge, while the principal shade trees are cotton trees, which grow rapidly and resemble somewhat our poplar trees.

I took an all-day ride into the country, and noticed on the outskirts how the farmer invariably had planted trees on the north and west sides of his house to protect him from the furious northwest wind. It seemed to me while riding along on the smooth and level road as though I were on meadow land and could see higher land beyond, but as I rode on, the higher land was still in the distance, so on I rode with never a brook to be seen, but acres and acres of rich black land covered with immense fields of flax and corn. The corn, however, is backward, the strong winds have broken it down, and most of the farmers have planted it over already three times. I took dinner with a farmer who told me he owned 300 acres of land, had put in 140 acres of corn, kept 13 cows and 12 black hogs (all the hogs this way are black), and yet he was a small farmer, for most of the farmers own 500 and 600 acres and some 1000. Farmer's horses are not shod here, as the ground is soft and spongy to their feet, unlike our own, and has no scouring qualities. The farmer keeps his plow bright and smooth by taking it to a blacksmith shop and having it polished. Finally I have this to say for the west—splendid farms and everywhere land, level land; yet, after all, give me my own New England home, with its rocks and rills, to the immense plains of monotonous level of the great and growing West.

A New View of Life.

It is surprising how often the troubles of this life spring from indigestion. And more surprising how few people know it. You say, "I'm blue," or "My head feels queer," or "I can't sleep," or "Everything frets me." Nine times in ten indigestion is at the bottom of all your miseries, and a box of Ripans Tabules would give you an entirely new view of life.

The Secrets of Pearline's Success? Just a few to show that its enormous growth was only natural. First: The article was precisely what its makers claimed it to be and no improvement has been found. Second: The public was told all about Pearline—so new and so different from old ideas, people had to be educated.

Third: Every woman who has used it tells how much it has done for her; that while the cost is nominal, she has found it the best, always the same, perfectly harmless; and that the saving by using cheaper imitations for a year wouldn't be enough to pay for one ruined garment.

Beware of imitations. 366 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Waterproof collars and cuffs that will not wilt, are not effected by moisture and look just like linen are all the fashion now. They are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid" and are the only waterproof goods made with an interlining, consequently the only ones that will stand wear and give perfect satisfaction. Try them and you will never regret it. Always neat, and easily cleaned. When soiled simply wipe off with a wet cloth or sponge. Every piece of the genuine is stamped as follows:

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

Ask for those so marked and refuse any imitations, as they cannot possibly please you. If your dealer does not keep them, we will send a sample direct on receipt of price. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair. State size and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

"Yes," observed St. Peter, apologetically, "you will find us all torn up. The woman's Bible necessitates moving nearly all the partitions."—Detroit Tribune.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the Remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain This same Remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism.

WHY I AM A VEGETARIAN.

Many vegetarians eschew flesh for hygienic (selfish) considerations. They do not feel that it is unbecoming to make their stomachs graves, but they think it is unhealthy. Others are vegetarian for ethical considerations. Hygienic reasons are visible to them, but secondary. I am an ethical vegetarian. I eschew flesh for the benefit especially of the creatures whose corpses I would otherwise gnaw To my mind it is just as demonstrable that it is wrong to slay an ox for fun or food as that a human chattel is hideous. They are both phases of the same selfishness.

I am a vegetarian because I believe that our present day ethics was evolved from that puerile and medieval assumption that all other kinds of creatures and all worlds were created especially for the species homo. Evolution has taught us the kinship of all creatures. The ancient hiatus between man and the other animals has been effectually sewed up. The ox man enslaves and slays and the poor reptile that wriggles in his pathway are his brothers, partaking of his nature and sharing his destiny.

The doctrine that onman kind's account all the rest of the animal world came into being and that all other animals are mere hunks devoid of all psychic qualities found in man is a doctrine about as sagacious as the geocentric theory of the universe. Whether we realize it or not, the doctrine is not one with less heathenish than the doctrine of the ancient Grecks, Romans, Jews, et al., that they themselves were the pets of the gods and all the rest of mankind were soulless "barbarians." The industrious bee, the civilized ant, the devoted steed, the mischievous ape, the irascible serpent, the sagacious elephant, the beautiful gazelle and the great honest ox have within them in embryo all the emotions that roll through the soul of man. Fear, love, fidelity, hate, joy, selfishness, curiosity—are all found everywhere and they are the same passions that heave your breast and mine. The faithful dog who stood over the lifeless body of his master grieving for recognition and starting at every flutter of his garments, till he himself died of starvation, was just as noble as if he had all his days walked on his hind legs and worn a cane. The honest ox is not less honest because he is a quadruped. The wild bird who takes her life in her wings to save her nestlings from the voracious serpent, and the mother-bear away on the Arctic snows, who allows herself to be massacred in order to save her child, have just as genuine mother-love and love just as sacred as that which burns in the breast of woman. The ingenious ant which tends its fields, gathers its harvests, keeps slaves and armies and goes to war and performs about all the antics of civilized man, except maltreating the females and drinking gin, is no less civilized because it is miniature. And the Christian who goes to church on Sunday and wails long prayers, and on week days beats his oxen over the face with a walnut whip handle or lashes the flanks of his over-burdened horse till the strained tendrons are ready to snap from their attachments, or goes out with gleaming knife and massacres and devours his naive fellow creatures, is no less infernal because he teaches himself that a deed that is ruthless when done to himself is perfectly fair when done to a dog.

I am a vegetarian, because anything else is hideous and unnatural. The vegetal world contains all the elements necessary to human sustenance, and in a much more prime condition than they are found in the diseased tissues of our mistreated friends. The belief that we cannot have peache sin our dimples and diamonds in our brains without dead bodies in our digestion is a belief having no foundation except ignorance. Vegetal fibrin is identical with animal fibrin, and vegetal casein is identical with animal casein. The vegetal world in fact, is the natural storehouse, and the only original storehouse from which animal may derive energy. No animal can produce protoplasm, which is the basis of all life; this is a function of the plant, and of the plant only. All an animal can do is to take it after it is produced and burn it up. Animals are simply locomotives consuming the otherwise squandered energy which plants slowly catch from the sun. It is a beautiful process—plants storing up energy from the soil and sun (the inorganic) and handing it over to the animal, and the animal using this energy and then completing the circle by sending the elements back again to the inorganic. And it is an impropriety in nature, whereby animals violate this beautiful arrangement by turning found and swallowing each other.

Act toward others as you would that others would act towards you, has been the basic precept of morals of the generations. This wonderful rule has been mouthed and mouthed since the days of Confucius, two thousand four hundred years ago. But it has never been lived. "Do as you would be done by." Certainly; But to whom? Each class or swarm has been its own little pet coterie to whom it, after a fashion, observed this rule. Slavery and slaughter have been the rule toward every one else. The Troglodytes hunted the Ethiopians in four horse chariots with as little compunction as Americans hunt the wood-deer today. A Roman could take the life of his Gailic slave with as much impunity as an American can slay his bovine servant today. Yet to kill a Gaul was murder as much as to kill a Roman. It hasn't been very long since all the Christian nations hunted their dusky brethren in Africa, and sold and loaned and lashed them as we do the horse to-day. All these crimes are now matters of course to us, but we are daily doing crimes as knavish as Troglodyte ever committed. It is the same old story. We carry our eyes in the back of our heads. We can see behind us but not around us. After so many centuries of infamy we can see the solidarity of our species, but we are such babies we can not see the solidarity of all the animal world.

Of course the apology of the criminals has not been the same as it is to-day—that the crucified creatures were of a different order of beings—that a chasm yawned between the persecutors and the persecuted—that there was not a solidarity. The Gaul had no rights because he was a "barbarian," and the fact that he had a nervous system and a love of existance had nothing to do with it. The Ethiopian and the woman had no rights that were inconvenient to respect, because they had no soul and because their subordination was God-ordained. And the honest ox and the faithful dog have no rights to-day, because they were made to be murdered.

I do not eat my fellow creatures for the same reason I do not enslave my brother or treat my sister as an appendage or otherwise monopolize the sweets and opportunities of the plant—because I believe in a rational application of the Golden Rule. There are on this ball billions of people. They are fellow creatures. I do not want them to live simply as convenience (for me. I do not want their pleasures, and I do want them to drink my sorrows. I want simply my own, and I am perfectly content to rob no one. In the wonderful words of another: "I never want happiness that gives another pain. I wish not happiness from others, only happiness out of the bosom of the great All, which comes like the red flowers of the oleander."

THE LANDSCAPE PAINTER.

Of course it was very wrong of her, for we all know that you should not talk to gentlemen who have not been introduced to you But when you are sweet and 20, and are staying at a country house all alone, and are rather bored, and a handsome young man comes to your rescue in a wood, when your poor little dog has caught its foot in a cruel trap, how can you possibly pass him the very next day as if he were a s ranger? And he was so kind to the dog. He bound up its poor little bleeding foot in his handkerchief, and carried it in his arms to the lodge gate. Then he said:

"Do you often walk in the wood?"

She was feeling too grateful to him to resent his impertinence as she should have done. So she only said: "Sometimes," and thanked him again with all her heart in her pretty eyes.

He looked up to where, through the trees, the big red house showed its twisted, old-fashioned chimneys, and said:

"My name is Lavender. You are Miss Verinder, I suppose?"

She looked at him quickly.

"I am Miss Verinder's humble companion. My name is Smith."

"We are comrades in servitude," he said. "I am Lord Halibut's secretary. You walk in the woods sometimes. Then it isn't good-by. Do they let you come out often?"

"I am my own mistress at present," she said. "A lot of people will be coming down on the 25th for the heiress's coming of age. They give a grand entertainment to the tenants. Lord Halibut is to be there. What is he like?"

"Oh," said the young man, indifferently, "he's not a bad sort of a fellow. There's some talk of their families wishing him to marry the heiress. The estates go very well together. But he's never even seen her; he's been so much abroad, you know."

"I don't believe the heiress will have him," the girl answered sharply, and turned away with her poor little dog in her arms.

Now, it is quite clear that she ought not to have walked in the wood—at least, not so soon as the next day; or, if she walked there the next day, she ought not to have chosen the same hour when poor Troll had met with his misfortune. But to the bored much may be pardoned, and, as for Lord Halibut's secretary, he had a right, one may suppose, to amuse himself. And that meeting was not the last. How could it have been? And when you meet a person every day without chaperones or other tiresome people, you soon make friends. Before the week was out Mr. Lavender had heard how Miss Smith was left an orphan, and had to earn her living; and she had learned that Mr. Lavender's part in life must always be that of a subordinate.

"Is she kind to you?" he asked one evening, as they sat on a mosy tree trunk, and watched the red sun set across the valley, where the corn grew.

'Oh, yes, she's kind enough," the girl said; "at least, I am sure she means to be."

"She's revoltingly clever, I hear. Beat the senior wrangler at Cambridge, or something."

"She did. But that's not criminal; and Lord Halibut is, at least, her partner in iniquity. He took a first-class in Greats, didn't he? Oh, how I do hate clever men!"

"You have my sympathy. I abhor clever women!"

They both laughed. And the days went on; and July melted into August, and August grew in grace till the time came near for the coming of age of Miss Verinder; and if, during these days, there had been a hand pressure so slight as not to be worth resenting, or a look so nearly tender as to make a man's heart high with hope; if he had treasured the forget-me-nots she had gathered by the woodland pond, and pressed them in the volume of Browning from which he had read to her in the woods, and if she kept a certain handkerchief, stained with poor little Troll's blood, in a locked, sandal-wood box, and took it out and laid it against her face, for all its bloodstain, when no one else was by—all that concerned only the companion and the secretary and no one else in all the wide world.

* * * * * * * * *

It was bright noontide, and they walked through the woods; and presently they came to the wishing-tree, with its two trunks growing from one root.

"If we pass through the wishing tree," she said, "and wish as we go, the fairies will give us the wish of our hearts."

So they went through, hand in hand, because the way was rough. As she passed out of it, a bramble caught her dress, and he stooped to disentangle it, but the folds of her gown were eccentric and his hands trembled.

"How tiresome it is!" she said; "I believe that bramble will never let me go."

"Can you blame it," he asked, looking up at her; and she turned her face away. They walked on. "A whole month," he said, "and seeing you every day! When did such good fortune ever before come to a poor secretary?"

"Or to a humble companion? No, I don't mean that. But it has been pleasant."

They walked in silence to the little gate that divided the woods from the grounds. Here they stopped, and she said, looking at him for a moment, half-shyly, half-proudly, "Come in; I should like you to see the garden. All the smart people are coming to-morrow, to keep the heiress's birthday."

He hesitated, and she laughed. "Oh, we needn't go in sight of the house. The grounds are big enough."

He flushed, and stammered in worldless denial of the thought she had read in him that his being seen with the companion might compromise her, and together they walked under the arching trees to the old lawn where the sundial stands.

"This is where the tenants dance, I believe," she said: "and all the grand people dance with the cottager folks, which seems to me rather silly, for I am sure each set would rather dance with themselves. Lord Halibut is coming. Will you be here?"

"I shall certainly come if Lord Halibut does. May I dance with you?"

She laughed. "I don't think you know what dancing on turf is like. Besides, probably our steps don't suit"

"Let us try now," he said.

He laid his arm on her waist. The next moment her hand was on his arm and they were whirling down the lawn toward the sundial.

"What foolish people we are!" she said breathlessly, and half moved to pause. But his arm held her closer, and they waltzed to the end of the lawn, past the sundial, and into the shade of the great copper beech; and, there, before she had time to move her hand from his arm, both his arms were round her and he was raining kisses on her soft, flushed cheek. She shrank a little, and then laid her face softly against his, and put her hand up to his neck.

"Ah!" he said, "the wish is granted. I have my heart's desire. You do love me, don't you?"

She clasped her hands behind his neck, and hung back, looking at him at arm's length, with half-ashamed, half-laughing eyes.

"Oh, yes, I love you, Lord Halibut," she said.

He put his hands up and laid them on hers. "Then you know?"

She laughed again. "Your handkerchief, at least, was not ashamed of your name."

Not one thought that was traitor to his love for her stirred in him at her confession. Lord Halibut know true love when he saw it.

"Why did you deceive me?" she asked.

"Oh! the landscape-painter idea, I suppose," he said. "The lord of Burleigh and that sort of thing!"

She laughed once more. "The worst of it is," she said, "that I have a vow in heaven never to marry Lord Halibut.

"Surely Lord Halibut can absolve you from that, if any one can!"

"I am glad you think so, for you have a vow—somewhere or other—not to marry Miss Verinder, and you, too, will need absolution. Take it from me—"

"Then you are—you are not Miss Smith?"

Her dainty chin went up. "Now, do I look like it?" she said.

"But why?—"

"The landscape-painter's part," she answered, "seems to be universally attractive!"—The Sketch.

NOT TO BE SOOTHED—There had been some misunderstanding between the local theatre manager in the small town and the proprietor of the itinerant company. Disagreements as to advertising expenses, disputes as to expenditure for properties, had invariable resulted in the local man's surrender of his opinions.

"I've decided to change the bill for to-night," said the out-of-town manager.

"Well, I'm glad ye condescended to tell me before ye did the public," was the answer in a tone of resignation.

"The play will be 'As You Like It.'"

"No, twon't," was the prompt response. "Ye can't jolly me. It'll be what ye like whether I like it or not."

CATARRH

Is strictly a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of sudden climatic changes.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is acknowledged to be the most thorough cure for Nasal Catarrh, Cold in the Head and Hay Fever of all remedies. It opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils, is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. The results that follow catarrh, due to the dropping of poisonous matter into the throat, are irritation of the bronchial tubes and soreness of the lungs accompanied by a cough. In all such cases we recommend Pineola Balsam to be used in connection with Cream Balm.

PINEOLA COUGH BALSAM will be found excellent for all throat and lung inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Price of Cream Balm, 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25c. In quantities of $2.50 we will deliver free of express or postage on receipt of amount.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

An Old Man's Love.

When she comes back she'll never know
That I have really missed her so.
I s'pose she'd laugh if she but knew
One-half the boyish things I do.
An old man deep in love's as big
A goose as is a love-lorn sprig.
And I just smile at times to see
What simple thoughts come over me.

I used to fear long years of life
Would dim the love of man or wife,
But now I find that every mile
The flame grows brighter all the while,
And ever since she's been away
I've counted every hour and day,
And wished the time would hurry when
I'll look into her eyes again.

At evening when I sit and rock,
And hear the ticking of the clock—
'Twas given us the day we wed,
He heard it, too, the boy that's dead—
Then with the stillness all around
I think of days when first I wound
That dear old clock, and thoughts arise
That brings a mist before my eyes.

But they are sort of pleasant tears,
The ones you call through years and years
Of pleasure sprinkled through with pain,
Like April sunshine mixed with rain.
Some skies were dark and some were fair,
And joy came tangled up with care,
But after all the thongs and stings,
The way was blest with gracious things.

You couldn't make her think that I
Would on our old piano try
To pick out some sweet courting tune
We used to play in love's glad June.
'Twould worry her if she should know
While she's away I'm troubled so,
For when she's round the house, you see,
I'm dignified as I can be.

And then to-day—I had to laugh
To think I'd seek her photograph.
It seemed so queer; I don't know when
I've looked at it before, and then
I thought about the Sunday she
First gave that treasure rare to me,
And how I kissed it then, and how
I kiss it just as fondly now.

I wonder if two hearts in tune
Aren't always in their honeymoon,
And then I'd like to know if she's
A thinking any thoughts like these.
My love I'll hardly dare confess,
But I just wonder if she'll guess
Its depth within the smack
Her cheek will feel when she comes back.

OLD DERRINGER'S CHUM.

Promptly as the red sun touched the skyline Old Derringer knocked off work. He had done this as regularly as clock-work every day since the last of March, and now it was the middle of September. He threw his mining tools aside and straightened up with a sigh of relief. He was a tall, elderly man, with a rugged, weather-beaten face in which honesty and kindness of heart were not lacking. He looked the typical Western miner in his faded red shirt and greasy slouch hat, with the iron gray beard that reached almost to his waist.

He glanced up at his dugout on the hillside, at the sparkling stream at his feet, at the gigantic peaks, hundreds of feet high, which shut in the narrow Dakota ravine on both sides. Then his eyes strayed down the gully, where a tiny footpath followed the winding course of the stream through scrub and timber, and an exclamation of wonder burst from his lips.

A slender figure had suddenly appeared in the path about fifty feet distant, and as it came slowly nearer it proved to be that of a lad of sixteen or seventeen. He was empty-handed, and his clothes and shoes were much the worse for wear. He paused within a couple of feet of the miner, and looked at him timidly out of a pair of frank brown eyes.

"By the Great Falls of Missouri! Where do you come from, youngster?" demanded Old Derringer, "an' however did you find your way here? You're the first human creature I've seen in months. Any more comin' behind?" he added sharply and suspiciously.

"I'm all alone," replied the lad. "I was chucked off a Northern Pacific freight train back here, this morning, and I followed a sort of a road in this direction, thinking it would lead me to a mining camp. I lost it after a while and wandered around in the mountains till I struck the path that brought me here. If you can give me some supper and a place to sleep I'll go away in the morning.

"What's your name?" demanded Old Derringer.

"Tom Mellish," was the hesitating reply. "I'm from the east."

"It ain't hard to see that, young tenderfoot. Got in a scrape and run off, eh?"

"It was sort of that way," the lad answered sadly. "I lived in Pennsylvania, and when my parents died a year ago they didn't leave anything, and I couldn't get a place to work—you see the times were so hard. They were going to send me to the poor-house, and as I couldn't stand that I ran away. I had a little money. It's all gone now. I got here mostly on freight trains."

"And where are you bound?" asked the miner.

"I thought I'd like to be a sailor and travel to foreign countries," the lad answered, "but as I wanted to see the West first I came this way, thinking I might get on a vessel at Portland."

"Well, this here certainly beats me," declared Old Derringer, and his feeble face purpled with suppressed laughter. "You've got pluck anyhow, an' that counts a heap. Any relatives livin' ?"

"I don't know, sir. I had an uncle somewheres, but he may dead."

Old Derringer contemplated the lad for a moment, and pulled his beard reflectively. "I'm from the East myself," he said, "but I ain't seen it for twenty years. It breeds good stock, lads, and you're one them. I like your face, and if you care about stayin' here an' chummin' it with me, you're welcome."

"It's a bargain," the lad gladly replied. "I'm tired of freight trains, and tramping, and of being starved."

A little later the two were eating supper on the hillside, and Old Derringer, with a trust and confidence that was remarkable for him, was telling his new chum how he had stumbled on his this lonely gold-bearing stream, and was slowly gathering a store of precious nuggets and dust. Then he showed him the dugout, which was a room excavated in the soft part of the cliff, and repaid the toil expended upon it by its snugness and dryness.

"Besides," the miner explained, "it won't attract attention if any stray prospectors happen to peep into the valley. I'm a man what don't like to be meddled with, an' I reckon that's why I was called Old Derringer."

Thus Tom Mellish's new life began, and from the first he liked it and was happy and contented. After his wanderings it was pleasant to have regular and square meals, and a soft bed every night; and as for work—why, it was a never-ending delight to dig and cradle the yellow gold that the sides and bed of the stream yielded.

Tom and Old Derringer were soon fast friends, and their mutual liking ripened as the days went by. The miner no longer suffered from oppressive spells of loneliness, and he seemed to regard the lad as a living representative of the far away East, toward which his thoughts had turned yearningly of late. Neither spoke much of the past, however, and the subject was one that they tacitly avoided. The bag of gold under the floor of the old dugout grew larger and heavier as October dwindled away, and at the end of the month a wonderful thing happened. A stroke of Old Derringer's pick opened a pocket of big nuggets, and also disclosed a rich vein of gold that seemed to run deeply into the side of the hill. For three days they worked in a sort of a trance, almost forgetting to eat and sleep, and more than one canvas shot-bag was filled with the precious metal in pure bulk. On the fourth morning the spell was broken by the discovery that the supply of provisions was completely exhausted.

"There's only on thing to be done," growled Old Derringer, "an' that's a trip to the nearest settlement, which is a day's journey off. I hate to leave at such a time, but game's scarce hereabouts, an' we can't live on that anyway. I reckon I'll start right now, seein' it's purty early yet. You ain't afraid to stay till I come back, youngster?"

"Not a bit of it," replied Tom, "there's nothing to be afraid of. I'll just keep on working."

"That's the way to talk," Old Derringer exclaimed approvingly. "I'd stake all I've got on your honesty, lad, an' that's why I'm goin' to leave the pile of gold in your care. I'll try my level best to get back to-morrrow night, but don't worry if I ain't on hand. As there hasn't been anyone along this way since spring, excepting yourself, it ain't likely you'll have any visitors. This is a lonely spot and purty far off the beaten track. If anybody should happen along just keep your eyes open, an' don't let 'em in the dugout."

A few minutes later Old Derringer was striding down the ravine, rifle in hand, and Tom watched him until he vanished around a curve in the path. The lad felt proud of the confidence reposed in him, and a desire to show his gratitude kept him working all day long. He did not disturb the newly-opened vein which the miner had purposely covered over with bushes, but cradled the sand and pebbles from the bed of the stream.

When he returned to the dug-out at sundown he had quite a respectable pile of nuggets. He put them into a separate bag so that he could show what he had done, and he put the bag into the hole with the others under the miner's bunk. Then he ate half of the few crackers and dried beef that remained, and went to bed.

By sunrise on the following morning he was at work again at a spot about twenty yards below the dugout. He stopped long enough for a lunch at noon, and then went ahead with his cradling. He half expected the miner back that night, and he wanted to accomplish as much as possible.

About an hour before sundown he put the cradle on a rock, and was transferring some small nuggets from it to the bag in his hand when he heard a stone splash into the stream some distance below him. He glanced down the ravine and was startled to see two men standing in the path about thirty feet away.

They had evidently been taking an observation, and the stone dislodged by one of them betrayed their presence. Tom had good cause to feel alarmed, for the strangers were the most disreputable looking men he had ever seen. One was short and dwarfish; the other tall and stout. Both had bloated faces and black beards, and were roughly dressed. They carried rifles, but no prospecting tools or implements. Tom realized that the visitors would not hesitate to commit murder or robbery, and had probably come for the latter purpose. His first impulse was to make sure of his life by flight. But on second thoughts he remembered his duty to Old Derringer, and he resolved to do his best to save the gold. Just how that could be done was not a matter for present consideration, though a partial plan came into his mind as he stood hesitating. He dropped the cradle, stuffed the bag into his pocket and started up the ravine.

"Not so fast, kid," came a gruff voice after him, "hold on thar."

Tom quickened his steps and then broke into a run. As he clambered up the hillside a rifle cracked and the ball whistled close over his head. He kept bravely on, and a few more steps brought him to the little plateau in front of the dugout. He darted inside, and his first act was to seize Old Derringer's revolver from the shelf behind the bunk. Then he threw himself flat behind the upper corner of the doorway. There was a stone ledge a foot high in front of him, and from this point of vantage he had a slanting view of a good bit of the lower part of the ravine.

He felt rather more cheerful now, for he was in a safe position and could yet command the only approach to the dug-out. All chambers of the revolver were loaded, and Old Derringer had taught him how to use the weapon. The men, however, were in no hurry to approach. After seeing the lad disappear in the dug-out they stood for several minutes in earnest conversation. Then they came very slowly up the ravine, stopping to look closely about wherever there were signs of digging or cradling.

Tom watched them sharply and with growing uneasiness. Their careless manner showed plainly that they believed the lad to be alone, and what they saw along the ravine must have satisfied them that the dugout contained rich plunder. It was even possible that they had been waiting this chance for weeks, and knew that Old Derringer was absent at the settlement. Closer and closer they came, changing their shambling gait to a brisk, decided walk. Now they were nearly opposite the dugout, and had planted their feet on the path that led up the slope.

"Stop right there," cried Tom, showing the tip of his nose. "Don't come any nearer."

The men halted, and the larger one called out: "We want to see the boss of these diggin's. Where is he?"

"He'll be here pretty soon," replied Tom, "and I've got orders not to let any one in till he comes."

The men lowered their rifles from their shoulders and whispered to each for a moment. Then they glanced up toward Tom in a very threatening manner. "It's no use ter fool any longer, kid," said the dwarfish man. "We want your gold, an' what's more, we're goin' ter have it. If you fork over decent we'll give you a share an' let you go; if you don't we'll take it anyways and slit your throat in the bargain.

"I'll shoot you if you try to come up here," Tom answered pluckily, but the words were hardly out of his mouth when the two ruffians made a bound up the slope. What happened next Tom could never remember very clearly, for he was pretty badly excited at this trying moment. He did not want to shed blood, and he had a vague hope of scaring the men back by shooting over their heads, as he leveled the revolver with that intention.

Three times he snapped the trigger in succession, and two of the reports failed to check the ruffians. At the third shot the little man clapped a hand to his right arm with a yell of pain, and spun around. He fell against his companion, knocking him off his feet, and both rolled together to the foot of the slope. They were up instantly, and Tom wisely ducked his head behind the stone. He heard half a dozen rifle shots, and the balls passed over him and flattened against the wall of the dugout. Then all was quiet, and when he ventured to peep out he could faintly see the ruffians moving down the ravine. In a moment they were hidden by the dusky twilight.

The situation was now a perplexing one. Night was at hand and the men would certainly make an attempt to get the gold under cover of darkness. It was doubtful if Old Derringer would be back before the next day, and his timely return was not to be depended upon. Tom pondered deeply as he lay at his post, keeping his eyes and ears on the alert for his foes. He did not dare to light a fire, for that would have exposed him to certain death. After waiting for half an hour without detecting any signs of danger it flashed upon him that the ruffians probably hoped he would fall asleep after a time from a sense of false security, and were deferring their approach until then. He felt so sure of this that he conceived a plan for outwitting them. He decided to take as much of the gold as he could carry, hide the rest, and escape to the upper part of the ravine. Once safely away from the dugout he could easily hide until the miner's return.

He set about his preparation without delay. Quickly and quietly he filled a large bag with the precious metal, and hid what was left under the embers in the fireplace, carefully raking the ashes over the spot again. He purposely left the hole under the bunk uncovered so the ruffians would be sure to see that the treasure was gone.

Now he was ready, and after standing in a listening attitude for a few seconds he crept to the entrance of the dugout, the revolver held in one hand and the bag of gold in the other. He was barely outside when he heard a scraping noise straight overhead, and then quickly two dark figures dropped lightly behind him. The tricky ruffians had made a detour above the dugout, and crept down over the hillside that formed its roof. No doubt it was their intention to rush in and overpower the lad before he could shoot them, and had they dropped a moment sooner they might have been successful. But Tom discovered them before they saw him, and instantly he went plunging down the slope at full speed. As the coast was now clear he turned southward along the narrow path, hearing shouts and rapid steps behind him.

He ran faster and faster through the night, sticking to the path by blind instinct, and in tent only on escaping with the gold. Suddenly he felt slippery rocks under his feet and knew that he had blundered astray. Then a rifle cracked and at the same instant he fell forward. He felt a stinging pain along his head, a stunning blow over one eye, and after that he remembered nothing.

When Tom came back to consciousness he was lying on Old Derringer's bunk in the dug-out, and the miner himself was sitting near him on a stool. The sun was shining in the doorway, and the kettle was boiling over the fire. He suddenly remembered all that had happened, and he tried to sit up in spite of his weakness and headache.

"Lie still, youngster," said Old Derringer, in a strangely tender tone, "you'll be all right after a bit."

"The gold," cried Tom, "we have got it?"

"Every nugget," the miner replied. The bag was in your hand, an' I seen the rest peepin' from the ashes."

"But how did I get here and what became of the robbers?"

"I reckon I shot one," answered Old Derringer, "leastwise there was blood on the stones. You see I came along just as they fired at you, an' then they hustled up the gorge as quick as they could go. The ball only nipped your head, but you had an ugly knock from tumblin' on the rocks. I carried you up here, an' all night you kept talkin' delike about gold, an' robbers, an'—an' about your home at Carlisle away off in Pennsylvania. That was my home too, youngster. Say, if you don't mind, is Mellish your real name?"

"No," said Tom. "My real name is Woodruff."

Old Derringer turned pale. "Not the son of John Woodruff?"

"He was my father," Tom answered.

The next instant Old Derringer was kneeling beside the bunk, and had his arms around the amazed lad. "I'm your Uncle Jim," he cried hoarsely, "what run away from home twenty years ago. John Woodruff was my brother. Thank God we've found each other, lad. I'm goin' to sell the claim to a party at the settlement for a big price, an' as soon as he comes up to see it you an' me'll go back to Pennsylvania an' buy the old homestead. An' as for foreign lands—why there ain't one you shan't see if you want to. We'll take a trip together."

Old Derringer stopped for want of breath, and presently he and Tom discussed more calmly the wonderful thing that had happened. It was better than medicine for the lad, and by evening he was on his feet, as sound and well as ever.

In a few days later the two were traveling East as fast as steam could carry them, and Tom knew that his days of tramping and privation were over. In the strangely discovered relative he had found a life-long friend and protector.

A QUIET WEDDING.

'Did you attend the Bircher-Jacklong wedding out at Billy-bee Dam last night, Ike?" asked the able editor of the Hawville Clarion.

"Aw, yes!" answered Alkali Ike, wearily; "I was thar."

"Of course there was a lively time, and all that?"

"Accordin' to how you looked at it. I called it mighty slow. Outside of the regular routine and the eatin' nuthin' happened worth mentionin'. To be sure, the preacher and the groom got into a row because the divine wanted his pay in advance; but that is a common occurence. The Rev. Mr. Harps is too old a bird to take any chances. Of course Jack Howcome, the fiddler, had had too much, as usual, and this time he fell from the table and broke his bow arm; Jack always was more trouble than he was worth. The bride's mother, who didn't like the groom anyhow, jumped on to the poor feller's neck just before the ceremony with a rollin'-pin, and it took half a dozen of us ten minutes' hard work to tie the old lady fast in a rockin'-chair and carry her a few hundred yards out on the prairie. Durin' the rumpus somebody stole the feed, and we never saw hide nor hair of it all the rest of the evenin'. They accused me of it, but I was innercent as a lamb. I hain't that kind of a man; and besides, I had a private snack of my own. That was every blamed thing that happened, except that a deputy sheriff slid in and arrested Coyote Peter for horse-stealin' or a little suthin' that a-way, and some feller had a fit. Shucks! Weddin's hain't noways what they used to be a few years ago. Lord! Them was the times! But now everything is gettin' to be too much like it is in the East."—Harper's Magazine.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 19, 1895.

A LESSON concerning the futility of strikes comes from Illinois, where the 25,207 men engaged in the coal miners' strike last year lost $1,693,910 in wages, a sum which they could never recover in advanced wages, even at the highest rates.

EVEN kings suffer the effects of the hard times as well as the common people. Two years ago the king of Sweden and Norway had his allowance cut down from 336,000 kroner to 256,000, and now wants his wages raised again, as he evidently finds it hard to support his family in comfort on a miserable $204,000 a year.

A MAN who really wishes to work has no excuse at the present time for lying idle. Farmers in the West are loudly clamoring for assistance in harvesting their crops, and good wages are paid. Employment agencies are unable to fill their orders for hands, not only on the farms, but in the saw mills and on the railroads. The man who can't find work now is pretty sure not to want it.

SEVERAL more lynchings of negroes in the South during the past two weeks, and now it is reported that in certain sections they are getting thoroughly frightened and are anxious to embark for Liberia, where great inducements are held out to them. While the results may be satisfactory from a Southern standpoint, the means are certainly anything but creditable to the localities interested.

THERE are quite a number of presidential bees which will feel considerably more comfortable now that General Harrison has at last made his intentions in regard to the matter known, stating that he will not be a candidate, and would not accept the office. This reduces the number of those who have been reported as "willin' " by one, but there are still enough to keep the anxious ones watching each other pretty close and guessing.

CHICAGO'S latest scheme is to reproduce the Court of Honor at the World's Fair in white marble in the new Lake Front park, which the city is to have. The cost is estimated at $10,000,000, which is but a trifle for Chicago, and two men have promised $450,000 to start with. Other localities may scoff at the idea, but if Chicago seriously starts out on this project it will "go," vide the World's Fair, which no one thought she would ever carry through.

IT is possible that Corbett and Fitzsimmons may never settle the question of supremacy in matters fistic, as the attorney-general of Texas, where it was proposed to have the fight take place, has declared the "sport" to be illegal in that state. On some accounts this would be a misfortune, as the principals have only recently finished a lengthy tirade against each other through the newspapers and agreed to settle matters in the "good old way."

LAST year the dry weather spoiled the potato crop for the farmer, but this year the crop gave promise of being an unusually abundant one, though if the wet weather of the past ten days were to continue a while longer the supply of tubers might be short again next fall. The hay crop was not very abundant this year, owing to continued drought early in the season, then when the grass was ready to cut so much rain fell in many localities that it was impossible to get the crop cured. Verily between Scylla and Charybdis the farmer has a hard time of it.

EVEN base ball enthusiasm is somewhat dulled by the interest taken in the working of the Defender, which is to defend the cup in the international yacht races this fall. The boat has proved all that was expected of her in many ways, but has not been given much work, so that all her characteristics have not been brought out yet, and it is not known just what may be expected of her. Her crew and skipper will know her thoroughly before the events however, and may be trusted to do their best to show the visiting boat a clear view of the Defender's stern.

A WOMAN famed in recent history died last week at Chicago, Mrs. Catherine O'Leary, she who owned the cow which kicked over the lamp and started the fire which spread so fast and burned Chicago. The good lady was one who had fame thrust upon her, but with becoming modesty denied the soft impeachment and sought to efface it. Failing in this her anger knew no bounds. While a great disaster at the time, the present Chicago would never have been possible without the opportunity then given it to rise from the ashes greater than before, and a grateful populace should see to it that Dame O'Leary has a befitting monument.

THE People's Party believes evidently in doing things in season, and so met in Boston Wednesday and nominated its ticket for the November state election, as follows:

Governor, E. Gerry Brown of Brockton.
Lieutenant-governor, T. C. Budington of Springfield.
Secretary of state, Charles D. Nash of Whitman.
State treasurer, Dr. M. W. Moran of Boston.
Auditor, Andrew H. Paton of Danvers.
Attorney-general, Bert O. Winn of Greenfield.

The resolutions adopted favor the coinage of silver at 16 to 1; state control of the liquor system; published records of legislative votes on final passage of measures; the adoption of the initiative and referendum; oppose the biennial elections; pledge the party to support all reasonable demands of labor; condemn the encroachment of the judiciary upon the rights of the people to trial by jury, and favor equal suffrage to all citizens.

THE question of the councilorship in the 8th district is likely to be a lively one this fall. Alvan Barrus of Goshen has served for two terms, which is the usual length of service in that district, and it has been conceded that it was Franklin county's turn to name the candidate this year, but it is understood that Mr. Barrus would like to be his own successor, and the Northampton Gazette suggests that as the district is to be reconstructed next year it would be a nice thing to let the present councilor serve the last year of the district. The announcement that Mr. Barrus has a desire for a third term has brought out several other aspirants, among them Charles A. Towne of Orange, Col. James A. Larkin of Westfield, ex-Senator J. F. Bartlett of Turners Falls, N. S. Cutler of Greenfield, ex-Senator Edwin Baker of Shelburne Falls, and possibly others, and the prospect for a lively fight is good.

Herbert Myrick, president of the Phelps Publishing Company at Springfield, had a narrow escape from drowning at Marblehead last Saturday. While out in a small boat watching the yacht races the craft was overturned by a squall and sank, Mr. Myrick being rescued after being in the water an hour and becoming almost exhausted. His two companions in the boat were drowned.

Harold G. Brown and John Ross, held for the murder of John Wills in the "little red schoolhouse" riot at Boston on the Fourth, have been discharged for lack of evidence against them.

Governor Greenhalge has nominated George W. Bishop of Athol to be railroad commissioner in place of the late Everett A. Stevens of Boston.

Northampton had three fires last Sunday, aggregating over $75,000, the largest and principal loss being that of the McCallum block.

LOCAL NOTICES.

When W. R. Milligan, the shoe dealer, feels the need of other brains in conducting his personal affairs, he will apply elsewhere than to the North Adams Daily Transcript, or any of its sympathizing contemporaries. This is not meant for a joke.

Opera House Bookings.

Midsummer is a quiet time in theatrical matters, and the new opera house will not be opened until the regular season begins. The board of managers have chosen A. L. Hills as manager and treasurer of the house, and it is understood that he will make things as lively as possible in this direction. It is expected that Hi. Henry's $60,000 Premium Minstrels, with 50 carefully selected performers, will be an early attraction. The popular operatic spectacle "Zephra" will open its season in Palmer, and another October booking will be the favorite comedienne, Miss Agnes Herndon, with a first-class supporting company. This attraction will be followed by the merry comedy "Doctor Bill," the Garden Theatre, New York, success, as produced 500 nights in Paris and 400 in London. These attractions are much better than Palmer people can often expect to secure, and will certainly deserve liberal patronage in order to assure further attractions of this class. The standard scale of the house will be 200 seats at 75 cents, 250 at 50 cents, and 150 at 25 cents, with the $1. 75 and 50 cent scale for extra good attractions. An effort has been made to secure Denman Thompson in the "Old Homestead," but Mr. Thompson will not himself play for one year, and his road company is booked ahead for 18 months, so that Palmer will have to wait awhile for that attraction. James Knox has been appointed janitor of the house.

The Flynt Building and Constuction Company has the contract to build an extension to the bleachery of the Boston Duck Co. at Bondsville, to be 70 by 130 feet, three stories.

Tuesday was rather a dark day, and as a number of the merchants requested it, on account of the extra crowds which the circus brought, the electric company ran the incandescent lights all day.

When you go away for your vacation remember that you can have the JOURNAL sent to you every week, no matter what the address, or how often you may wish it changed. No letters from home can give you half the news the JOURNAL will contain.

Daniel Collity, the mail carrier, was attacked by several men late Tuesday night on the street, they mistaking him for Officer Studley, whom they were evidently trying to "do up." Collity broke away from the gang however, and escaped without injury, though stoned until he reached his boarding place.

The vacant lot on Main street owned by the Boston and Albany road has been cleared of the rubbish which had accumulated there, and presents a much better appearance. The place has been used as a dumping ground more or less by some persons, who have thrown all kinds of waste material there, but they will be invited by the road to find another dumping place for refuse.

A Three Rivers reader of the JOURNAL whose farm was last year overrun with woodchucks, wishes others similarly afflicted to know that he is getting rid of the pests by suffocating them in their burrows by the fumes of bisulphide of carbon, the cost of which, if bought direct from the manufacturers, is two cents a burrow. H. C. Burr will be glad to give particulars to any person who will write him, enclosing stamp for reply.

At an adjourned session of probate court held in Springfield last Friday the following was among the business transacted: Administration granted in the estate of Jane Griswold, late of Hampden, Theodore Griswold administrator. License granted to sell real estate in the estates of—Jane A. Chaffee of Wales; Fred J. and James Walter Brown of Brimfield. Petition to render inventory and account was allowed in the estate of Walter Haynes, late of Brimfield.

The dedication of the new Odd Fellow's Hall will take place next Tuesday evening. The grand officers of the grand lodge of the state will take charge of the ceremonies, which will begin at 8 o'clock. The fact that the size of the hall will only permit the assembling of some 200 persons necessarily prevents making the event a public one, consequently only Odd Fellows and their families will be admitted. The lodge is planning for a public demonstration, to be held in the opera house at some future time.

A couple of pairs of shoes were stolen from the front of A. B. Cowan's shoe store Wednesday morning by two young fellows. Mr. Cowan had stepped into an adjoining store for a few moments, and the thieves, who had been hanging about the block for some time, grabbed two pairs of shoes hanging on the hooks in the doorway and made off with them, unperceived by Mr. Cowan, who did not know of his loss until informed by a brother merchant. Nothing has been seen of the thieves since.

The storm of last Saturday afternoon did considerable damage in this section. The rain fell in torrents about 2 o'clock, and was soon followed by a shower of hail which for a time made the ground look as though a small snow storm had passed. While the stones were not unusually large in the village, considerable damage was done to gardens and grape vines. In many places the leaves on cucumber and grape vines were riddled by the hail, and at Silver Street in Monson the fruit itself was badly cut and bruised.

The Thorndike ball club protested against the announcement last week that the Palmers and Warrens were to play a series of games for the championship of Central Massachusetts, claiming that the standing of the Palmers and Thorndikes had not been satisfactorily settled yet, two games only having been played, each team winning one. As a result the managers came together Tuesday and agreed to play a game on the Palmer grounds August 3d; the gate receipts and expenses will be equally divided, and in addition a purse of $50 a side will be put up.

Clarence Wing, while at work on the old Wellman farm recently purchased by Rufus Flynt, dug up a curious Indian relic one day this week, the use of which no one hereabouts seeems to know. The general shape is that of a sled runner about two inches long; from near what would be the forward end of the runner, on either side is a projection slightly larger around than a lead pencil, the ends of which are enlarged to a kind of head, as if it might have been used for the purpose of a button, in fastening together the two ends of a strip of leather, or something similar. On the under side of the curved part of the "runner" are several notches. The whole is one piece of hard stone, and is in a remarkable state of preservation. A photograph of it will be taken and sent to the Smithsonian Institute, to see if the purpose of the original can be determined.

A meeting of those who had signed the agreement to become stockholders in the proposed electric road was held in the assembly room of the business club last Friday evening. A good deal of interest was manifested in the matter of securing a road, and a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the purpose of having a survey of the route made, preliminary to applying for a franchise. The committee consists of C. E. Fish, W. E. Stone, Rufus Flynt, G. M. Atkins and D. L. Bodfish, and nearly enough pledges have been secured. A meeting of the directors will be held in the club rooms this evening. In the opinion of some who have been looking into the matter a little, if Palmer people will only interest themselves in the road there will be enough additional outside capital added to build it, and that soon, while some are of the opinion that the road can be constructed wholly with Palmer capital.

Tuesday morning one of the detectives accompanying Ringling Bros.' shows called on Deputy Sheriff Studley and requested that he arrest a woman who was following the show peddling toy balloons, provided she appeared in Palmer, as she probably would; she had been following the show for some time, and the managers were trying to get rid of her. Mr. Studley consulted Judge Robinson, and was informed that if she sold without a license she could be arrested, and in the afternoon she was taken into custody and taken to Judge Robinson's house, but he was out of town. A consultation was then held with the chairman of the selectmen and the town's attorney, and it was agreed not to prosecute her if she would leave on the next train, which she did. When the show was in Providence she was arrested, and the police matron wished her to take a bath, but she refused; she was compelled to, however, and $2500 in bills was found sewed into her clothing.

The trustees of the Palmer Cemetery Association held a meeting last Friday evening in the reference room at the public library. As the selectmen have given the association control of the cemetery in the Depot village for this year, in accordance with the vote of the town, the trustees chose William Merriam superintendent of the ground; it was also voted that all grading of lots must be done with the approval and consent of the superintendent, to whom all applications for lots must be made. Rules forbidding the depositing of cut grass or other rubbish in the walks or drives or on any of the lots were passed; a place for such has been provided, and all grass or rubbish must be put there or taken from the grounds. Copies of the regulations will be printed and posted at the entrances to the cemetery. The association finds that the work of mowing the ground is a slow one, owing to the numerous deep and narrow paths left between many of the lots, and will fill these as fast as possible, then seeding down the ground.

Ringling Bros. had a rainy day for their circus Tuesday, but notwithstanding it drew a large crowd. People commenced to pour into town on the early morning trains, in private teams and by 'bus loads from the other villages, and the streets were soon packed with anxious waiters for the parade, which was unusually good, the open cages of animals attracting particular attention. Something like 5000 or 6000 people were at the afternoon performance, and not quite so many in the evening. The performances were of the best, many pronouncing them equal to, if not surpassing those of Barnum, and the best ever seen. The animals, while not large in numbers, were all sleek, in marked contrast to the skinny, sickly specimens so often shown. The especial attention of visitors seemed to be centered on the cage containing the two litters of baby lions, only a few months old. The day was an unusually quiet one about town, there being no disturbances and nothing out of the ordinary run of affairs except the crowds.

John Wright, Jr., of Palmer, was before the district court on Monday for drunkenness, and paid a fine of $5. John Brennan of Three Rivers was also fined $5 for drunkenness, and is working it out on the judge's farm, east of the village. Five victims of the ardent were up Wednesday morning, the morning after the circus, and paid fines aggregating $45. William Henry Harrison Ryder had his case continued until July 27th, when he has another continuance to answer to. Yesterday morning James McQuade of Monson paid $15 for drunkenness; Patrick Ryan of the same town paid $5, remarking that he wasn't very bad, but supposed he must have been drunk or the officer wouldn't have arrested him, his confidence in the officer's judgment being markedly unusual for one in his position. Henry Fisher of Palmer was probated until to-morrow. He was crazy drunk Wednesday evening, and baffled the attempts of Officer Murphy, assisted by S. L. Ferry, to arrest him at his home on Cross avenue; Officer Studley was sent for, and with Murphy's help got his man to the lockup, though a couple of blows on the head from the officer's club were necessary before his obstreperousness finally oozed out.

Charles B. Ellis, claiming England as a residence, has been in town since Tuesday morning endeavoring to work up an interest in Christian Science, and announced that he would give a free lecture last evening in the vacant store in the Lawrence block at 7.30. Unfortunately, as Mr. Ellis explained, he had hit upon the night when the churches held their regular weekly meeting, and all the people interested were attending their own meetings there. Much interest had been manifested, however, he asserted, and a large audience was expected when the meetings in the churches were over. Time passed rapidly until about 9 o'clock, but the professor had not a single hearer. He was not discouraged, however, one of the peculiarities of the true Christian Scientist being that he can never be discouraged, no matter what happens. According to Mr. Ellis, a true disciple of the faith cannot fail in whatever he undertakes, and can cure all diseases, of whatever character, no faith being required on the part of the patient. He also stated that no person not a true Christian Scientist can be a Christian, and on being asked how many true Christian Scientists there were in this country stated that he knew of but two, a Mrs. Eddy and himself; there might be others, but he was not aware of their existence. On being asked then if he considered that there were only two genuine Christians in the country, he stated that unless there were true Christian Scientists of whom he had no knowledge, there were no more. Orthodox Christians, so called, were rather better than the ordinary run of people, because their intentions were good, but they miserably failed of the true standard of perfection. Mr. Ellis left town to-day, because he was "on a Divine mission from England to New England," and announced that "this opportunity will never occur again." He signed his name as "Chas. B. Ellis, in Greek Elias, in Hebrew Elijah, Who was for to come."

Death of an Old Resident.

Rufus Bacon, one of the oldest citizens of the place passed, away very suddenly at his home last Saturday morning. He seemed as well as usual until Friday, when he complained of feeling tired and remained in bed nearly all day, but nothing was thought of it, as he had been in poor health for some years. About 5 o'clock Saturday morning, hearing a noise, Mrs. Bacon rose and going to his bed spoke to him, when he asked for a drink of water, which was given him, but he only took a swallow and complained of being cold; more clothes were put on the bed, and saying he was all right told her to go to bed. A short time after, hearing him stir, she again went to his bedside, when he asked to sit up; while helping him to do so he suddenly fell back and died almost instantly. He will be greatly missed in his home, being a quiet, inoffensive man, who if not able to say good of a person would not say evil. Had he lived till September he would have been 80 years old. Besides a wife he leaves a son, Pearl of Warren, four daughters, Mrs. Dickenson of Boston, Mrs. H. Hamilton of this place, Mrs. Charles Miller of South Hadley, who buried her husband last Thursday, and Emma, who lives at home. The funeral was largely attended Monday at 2 p. m., Rev. Changes at the Boston Duck Co.'s Mills.

Under the direction of Agent E. G. Childs, extensive improvements are being made in the Boston Duck Co.'s mill at this place. There are being put in at the lower dam two pairs of Hercules horizontal water wheels of 350-horse power each, which will furnish power for a 400 K. W. generator, which will generate current for a 485-horse power electric motor, located at the mills at a distance of about three-fifths of a mile. The motor will belt direct to the main wheel shaft. It is expected that this electric power will do away with the use of engines entirely, except in extreme low water, thereby making quite a saving in fuel. A lot of machinery is also being built for the mills by the Lowell machine shop of Lowell, consisting of revolving flat cards, drawing, slubbers, fly-frames and spinning. There is also contemplated an addition to the bleachery of a three-story building 70 feet wide by 170 feet long. The wheels are being furnished by the Holyoke Machine Co. of Worcester, and the electric plant by the General Electric Co. of Schenectady, New York. All parts and connections of the mill are running full time, giving employment to about 500 hands.

There was something the matter—either Ringling Bros. or the N. L. N. road was to blame—at least two young ladies in this place think so. They went to Palmer Tuesday morning to see the circus parade, waited for four hours, but no parade, and it was time for their train to start homeward. Looking out of the car window as the train was leaving Palmer they saw the belated parade just starting, and their friends ask them if the anticipation was greater than the realization in this case.

Two Mill Operatives Seriously Injured.

Last Saturday morning Jerry Connor and David Collins met with serious accidents while at their work in the mill. Of the two Connor was the most injured. He was going up on the elevator with a load of beams, and when nearing the floor above saw that the beams would come in contact with the ceiling. He tried to catch hold of the rod to stop the elevator, but was too late, and his hand was caught between the floor and the elevator, the skin being scraped off to the bone on both sides of his wrist. Dr. Bliss was immediately summoned and dressed the wound. Connor is doing finely, and will probably be able to use his hand in a few months.

David Collins came to grief while cleaning a machine in the dye house. He accidently stuck the end of his thumb between the rollers, which were revolving at a good rate, but he had the presence of mind to immediately extricate it, for he saw there was no "plum" in such a tight place. But it was very lucky for Collins that the weights were up; as it is, he is nursing a badly squeezed piece of flesh which was once a good thumb.

News has been received of the death of Mary Gifford Symes, aged 10, daughter of Mrs. Sophia Foster Symes of Denver, Colorado.

The Sunday school of the Universalist church will have its annual picnic at State Line next Thursday if pleasant; if the day should be stormy the picnic will be held Friday.

The selectmen are putting in a concrete walk on the east side of Main street, from Washington street to the Academy grounds, Contractor Dotney of Chicopee doing the work. Other walks will be put in at other places about town.

The foundation is in for the new addition to Heimann & Lichten's straw shops, and Contractor Graves is rushing the woodwork. It is hoped to have the roof on in three weeks. The building is to be about 40 by 100 feet, four stories.

Taxpayers are rejoicing over a rate of $18 on $1000, instead of $18.50, as was first announced. After the rate was announced the assessors discovered one item of $60,000 which they had accidentally omitted, which brought the rate down a half a dollar.

Mrs. Small of Palmer has donated to the Flynt Museum a fine specimen of a flying fish caught at St. Helena, on the coast of Africa, also a variety of eyestones. Harrison B. Ware has placed a large collection of Indian relics, geological specimens and other curios in the museum.

The contract for the new engine house for the chemical engines and hose carts has been given to F. J. Hynes. The building will be erected on the lot of H. C. Norcross, between Pendergast's market and the blacksmith shop, instead of on the Sarah Bradford lot, which was at first proposed.

The horse of Arthur S. Tucker became frightened last Friday morning and ran across the street from the post office, where he had been hitched. A little girl about eight years old was in the team, which was overturned. She was dragged for some distance, but escaped without injury.

Nothing is known about the result of the recent census taking in Monson except that the town has gained over the population of five years ago. It is hardly likely, however, that it has gained the number lost soon after the census of 1885, when about 400 left town, owing to the closing of some of the mills.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Calkins of Willimantic, on their way to Whitefield, Maine, spent Sunday with his sisters, Miss Calkins and Mrs. Edson of Washington street. Charles Merrick has a motor in his house to blow his organ, and the Catholic and Congregational societies are contemplating putting in motors for the same purpose.

Frank, the seven-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gath of Bridge street, disappeared from his home last week Thursday night, and it was feared he had been drowned. He left the house about 6.30 o'clock and his parents supposed he had gone to a neighboring pond after lilies. Becoming alarmed by his long absence they hurried to the pond, where their fears were increased by a neighbor who said he had seen Frank at the pond. The place was dragged for an hour without success, when F. J. Entwistle came up and said the boy had been at his house all the time.

Don't Forget

that Fuller is up to date in his repair shop, the same as he is with all of the newest things in shoes. If your need repairing and you want them fixed in the best possible shape, just leave them at Fuller's, and they will be finished when you want them.

Old Shoes

Geo. L. Fuller,
Monson.

The selectmen expect to commence work on the section of state road awarded the town week after next. It will extend from a point a short distance north of the Flynt quarry railroad to the crossing of the New London Northern road at the North Factory. The hills will be cut down to some extent and the hollows filled up; the roadway will be graded for a width of 21 feet, and covered with trap rock six inches deep for a width of 18 feet, with three feet of gravel on each side. It is probable that the trap rock will be secured at the Flynt quarry. The cost of the road is estimated at between $5000 and $6000.

The women of L. L. Merrick Relief Corps of Palmer held their annual picnic at Flynt's Park yesterday, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed by all, many ladies being present from the Warren and Monson corps. There was a scarcity of the sterner sex during the forenoon, only one man being present, and especial pains were taken to entertain him. The park was handsomely decorated by Mr. Flynt with flags and bunting. The ladies passed the forenoon in visiting the museum and menagerie. After dinner, which was served at noon, there was a peanut hunt, with prizes for the women who found the greatest and smallest number of peanuts. The first prize, a Japanese platter, was won by Mrs. G. A. Moore of Palmer, the booby prize going to Miss Grace Kenerson of New London; next came a walking match, the distance being 62 yards, which was won by Mrs. George A. Lyman of Palmer, who received a bon-bon dish, Mrs. Frank Maguire of Monson taking the booby prize, a glass creamer; a running race, 62 yards, between the young women, was won by Miss Blanche T. Lyman of Palmer, who received a cut glass creamer, Miss Flora Studley of the same place getting the booby prize, a bon-bon dish; a running match between the fat women came next and afforded considerable amusement, and the largest woman in the race, Mrs. L. L. Lull, won; there was no prize for this race, the conditions being that each contestant must weigh over 140 pounds; following came a running race for women weighing less than 140 pounds, Miss Mary Smith of Monson being the winner. After the sports were concluded the party broke up.

The gymnasium will be convenient of access to the athletic field, and it is possible that a new athletic field will be decided upon. Storm Serge.

No cloth in the world, perhaps, that will stand as much rough usage as storm serge; it seems proof against all hurt. Let the rain pour or the sun shine and it keeps its shape and dignity almost equally well—navy blue and black.

Navy blue:

37 inches, 37½ cents.
45 inches, 50 cents.
50 inches, 75 cents.
54 inches, $1, $1.25.

Black 50 to 56 inches wide, 55 cents, 75 and $1 a yard.

Always glad to send samples.

Swivel silks, 29 cents a yard—the usual 50-cent Swivel silks. We've made a window of them. Did you ever see such lovely Swivel silks before? Send for samples.

Cheney's 24-inch printed Pongee silks, at 37½ cents a yard—the usual 75-cent quality. No better silk bargain will be heard of this season than Cheney's famous printed Pongee at 37½ cents a yard. Send for samples.

Light-weight capes that were $8 and $15 this last spring season—any of them for $5. Just as likely as not we shall have many nights before the summer is over when you'll feel the need of some light overgarment. Are you prepared? The capes have already started to go at $5.

Mattings.

For your summer floors. Delightfully cool and crisp under foot these scorching days. Mattings were commonly thought to belong to luxury. Not so now. Everybody can have them; everybody ought to have them.

We've a quality at 10 cents a yard that will actually surprise you; the weave is so close and firm, the straw so supple and full of life.

Others at 12½, 15 and 25.

The people of Patagonia

are not the ones we wish to talk to, but the people of Palmer and vicinity. This is the picnic season, and our leader just now is Sugar Cookies, four pounds for 25 cents; hardly believe it, can you? we can't ourselves. A rival manufacturer says the maker must have stolen the flour; that's nothing to you as long as the goods are first-class and you get so much for your money.

And right here let us suggest that we carry a couple of dozen kinds of cakes and cookies just the thing for picnics.

If you don't like to bake this hot weather, or run short unexpectedly, we have bread, cake, cookies, etc., fresh every day from the Domestic Bakery at Ware; they're as good as can be constructed; almost like home-made.

If you're canning, we give 20 pounds Revere granulated sugar for your dollar, Have the cans for the fruit, too, and can send 'em up with the sugar; "Mason" and "Lightning" kinds.

25 cents a peck is all we ask for new potatoes.

Lots of other things; glad to show 'em and sell 'em; sell 'em if you want 'em, don't feel hurt though if you look and don't buy.

The Only One that's imitated, among all washing compounds, is Pearline. That is because it is the original, the most popular, and the best. Peddlers and some grocers will tell you that this thing or that thing is "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline — what better recommendation do you want for Pearline? They tell you this because it pays them better to sell these "same as" stuffs. But how will it pay you to use them? Any saving that they can offer you, in prizes or prices, can be only nominal. The loss in ruined linens, flannels, muslins, etc., can be large. 365 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Did you ever see one of the famous waterproof Interlined Collars or Cuffs? It's very easy to tell, for they are all marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

They are the only Interlined Collars and Cuffs, and are made of linen, covered with waterproof "CELLULOID." They'll stand right by you day in and day out, and they are all marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

The first cost is the only cost, for they keep clean a long time, and when soiled you can clean them in a minute by simply wiping off with a wet cloth —that is the kind marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

These collars and cuffs will outlast six linen ones. The wearer escapes laundry trials and laundry bills—no chafed neck and no wilting down if you get a collar marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

Ask your dealer first, and take nothing that has not above trade mark, if you desire perfect satisfaction. All others are imitations absolutely.

If you can't find collars or cuffs marked this way, we will send you a sample postpaid on receipt of price. Collars, 25 cts. each. Cuffs 50 cts. pair. Give your size and say whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the Remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain This same Remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

An Unrealized Dream.

He went fishing in the wildwood,
In the dancing mountain brook,
Where he used to fish in childhood
With a bent pin for a hook;
He bethought him of the catches
That he used to show with pride,
And the sunburn and the scratches
That adorned his youthful hide.

Now, he had a fancy tackle
And a rod of split bamboo,
Flies of every style of hackle,
Clicking reel, and silk line, too;
With a twelve-pound basket laden,
Harnessed up with straps and bands,
He had patent boots to wade in,
And kid gloves upon his hands.

Gayly then he started fishing
In a shady nook and cool,
Where the willows gently swishing,
Overhung a well-known pool;
That was where he used to catch them
When he was an urchin small,
Surely now he ought to match them
With his fancy rig and all.

But, alas! he could not do it,
Though he fished the pool all day;
Not a trout that ambled through it
Took the pains to come his way;
But his cuss words made the air blue,
And he whipped the creek to foam—
Then he smashed his fancy bamboo,
Paid his bill and came back home!

The Little Brown Cricket.

Rosa went to her grandma's last summer, in June,
And she stayed until late in fall;
But the very best friend she made while away
Was the cricket that lived in the wall.
The little brown cricket that lived in the wall,
As merry as merry could be,
He danced all the day and he sang all the night—
The gayest of good companie.

"Good-bye, little cricket," said Rosa, at last,
"I'm sorry to leave you so soon;
But do not forget me, I'm coming again,
I'm coming next summer, in June.
I wish I could take you away to my house,
But you wouldn't enjoy it at all,
For there isn't a bit of a garden, you see,
Nor a dear little hole in the wall."

As Rosa lay nestled that night in her bed,
She heard from her trunk in the hall
A queer little, 'creakity-creakity-creak'"—
'Twas the cricket that lived in the wall!
The little brown cricket that lived in the wall
Had taken a journey, you see.
And he danced and he "creakled" the long winter through—
The gayest of good companie.

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

VI.

Old Training and Muster Days.

SECOND ARTICLE.

Since writing the first article with the above title, a few additional incidents have come to hand which may be of interest to the students of our past days.

It seems that the cavalrymen from Springfield, who attended upon the musters in the eastern part of the county, deemed themselves of superior mould, and affected to despise the less fortunate ones who mustered on foot. On one occasion when the muster was held at Brimfield, the Springfield horsemen, during the sham battle rode down the footmen at a furious pace, charging upon them without regard to consequences, injuring several in the melee; this unjustifiable conduct created considerable feeling on the part of the Brimfield and Palmer men, so at the time of the next muster, held at Palmer, Col. Turner, who was in command, determined to put a stop to this abuse of privilege. This time when the grand charge was made by the horsemen, they found opposed to them a solid phalanx of men with fixed bayonets, and Col. Turner called out to them to advance further if they dared. The glittering points, the immovable men behind them, and the determined look of the dauntless Colonel were too much, and for once the gallant sons of Springfield were nonplussed, and did not have the usual fun of riding down the despised militia.

The Springfield men did not forget their discomfiture, and when the next muster was held in their city, the Palmer men were ostentatiously snubbed, besides which the tollgate man at Col. Butler's was instructed to exact gate fees from them on their return home, which was contrary to custom; of course Col. Turner and his men resented this, and the doughty Colonel commanded his men to charge bayonets; the gate keeper fled, and the men carried the gate a fourth of a mile and cast it over the fence into a vacant lot. On a later occasion, when the muster was held at Palmer, the Springfield men brought along a keg of oysters to be served for dinner, and as oysters were then considered a very tony luxury, they taunted the Palmer men with the meagerness of their rations. The Palmer boys said little, but bided their time, and when the delicious stew was placed on the fire John King, son of Dr. King, made some excuse to be conveniently near, and in an unguarded moment threw some cartridges under the pot which exploded and sent the pot and its precious contents high into the air to the unutterable disgust of the Springfield men, and they were obliged to acknowledge that the Palmer men were ahead, and a halt was called to their animosities.

As was said before, it was the practice for the captain to treat his men on training days to rum; on one occasion, when the jug was brought out to the field at the Old Center, Dea. Lebbeas Chapin, who was adverse to having the article dispensed, gave the jug a blow with the butt of his musket and spilled its contents, for which he was fined $1.50, but he paid it cheerfully for the privilege of destroying the article he so disliked.

About 1812 the Belchertown Artillery company came to Palmer on a muster day, and planted several cannon where the bakery now stands, on Church street, and fired at a target set on the Dewey Hill just above where E. J. Wood's house stands. It is said they succeeded in hitting a corner of the target once during the afternoon, but the balls flew freely everywhere else; one man who was chopping on the hill at quite a distance out of the supposed range had a ball come anxiously near him, which caused him to leave his work in a hurry to learn the cause.

Soon after this the last training day came, and proved as near a farce as possible, for in response to the roll call, each man as he answered here sent a well-directed piece of sod against the officer's face, with which to punctuate his answer. The enforced training days were ended, and the men of the old Bay State were not again to be called from the plough or office to learn the art of war, till the thunders of Sumter should arouse them from the dream of peace.

NOTE—I have been handed the commission papers of Abraham R. Murdock; he was commissioned lieutenant of a company in the 3d Regiment of Infantry August 23, 1823, by Governor William Estis, and Captain of a company in the same regiment by Governor Levi Lincoln, January 3, 1828. His resignation was accepted January 17, 1829

CORRECTION—In Palmer History Gleanings No. 3, the name Paniel Hamilton should read Daniel Hamilton.

In this connection the writer desires to say that he is preparing a paper on the early school days of Palmer, and would thank any one who has any records of the old district schools to bring them in for examination.

Fashionable Tailor—"Go front at once. Two young clerks there after suits." New Man (whispering)—"I'm waiting on a millionaire." Fashionable Tailor—"Leave him, and attend to the clerks. These millionaires don't buy new clothes once in five years. A clerk is good for a fresh suit every two or three months."—New York Weekly.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

HOW "GUMMA" DRESSED JACK.

Jack came trotting into papa's room one morning with two little black stockings in one hand, two little black boots in the other, and several small articles of clothing over his shoulder.

"Papa," he said, "does you know how to dwess yittle boys? Gumma's gone."

"Yes, indeed, my little man," said papa; and lifted Jack to his knee, and began to pull on one small stocking.

"Stop, papa! stop!" cried Jack. "Dat ain't a-way! Gumma don' do it dat-a-way!"

"Well, how does 'Gumma' do it?" asked papa, pausing for instruction.

"Dis-a-way," said Jack, taking up one foot and then carefully grasping a fat toe in his chubby hand.

"Here, Mishter Toe, you 'an your bruzzers mus' go into your yittle black house; now don' begin to wiggle. One, two, free, dere—you go!" and Jack pulled his stocking over his five toes, and up to his knee. Then looking up into his papa's face he said: "See?"

"Yes," said papa, smiling. "Here goes the other foot. Now, Mr. Toe, you and all your brothers"—

"No, no, papa!" cried Jack; "dat one is Mishis Toe, an' you mus' say, 'all your yittle sissers.'"

You don't have to wait for relief when you take Taylor's Anti-Headache Powders. Some pills cure headache, but it requires hours for them to do it. Taylor's Anti-Headache Powders are quick and reliable. For sale by LeGro & Lynde.

"O, ho!" said papa. Well then, Mrs. Toe, and all your little sisters! One, two, three, there you go!" and the second stocking was on.

"Now," said Jack, you mus' put on the woof."

"The what?" asked papa.

"The woof to the house," and Jack pointed to his boot.

"Oh! the roof. Very well," and papa put on the boot and began buttoning it with his fingers.

"Dat ain't the way!" cried Jack again. "You mus' get a hooker and lock all 'e doors, so all the yittle bruzzers and sissers won' get out 'e house for all day."

"Now see here, young man," said papa, "does grandma go through with all this rigmarole every morning?"

"Of courth," said Jack, looking at papa with surprised eyes.

"Well, papa hasn't the time, so let me get you into your clothes quick, before the breakfast bell rings."

So Jack had to submit to being dressed in a hurry, without his grandmother's pleasant romancing.

The minute he got downstairs he went to his mamma and asked:—

"Fen's my gumma comin' home?"

"She is coming to-morrow," said mamma.

"Dat's nice," said Jack, "for", he whispered into mamma's ear, "my papa don't know how to dwess yittle boys."—Carrie A. Griffin, in Babyland.

CATARRH

Is strictly a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of sudden climatic changes.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is acknowledged to be the most thorough cure for Nasal Catarrh, Cold in the Head and Hay Fever of all remedies. It opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils, is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. The results that follow catarrh, due to the dropping of poisonous matter into the throat, are irritation of the bronchial tubes and soreness of the lungs accompanied by a cough. In all such cases we recommend Pineola Balsam to be used in connection with Cream Balm.

PINEOLA COUGH BALSAM will be found excellent for all throat and lung inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Price of Cream Balm, 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25c. in quantities of $2.50 we will deliver free of express or postage on receipt of amount.

The House Beyant the Hill.

Wud its smoke agin the sunlight
An' its unlatched open dure,
Patsy, John an' Francis Michael
Shpinnin' tops upon the flure,
Not a shingle on it painted,
Shtrame an' orchard an' ould mill—
Shure no place in this new counthry
Like the house beyant the hill!

Days were long upon the railroad,
Slingin' sledge an' shtrikin' bar,
Fitz, meself an' John McCarthy
H'avin' rails from car to car!
But atwixt the blows an' sweatdhrops,
Aft me sowl widout me will
Wud go up the path and foothridge,
To the house beyant the hill!

"Ireland's far, but this land's nixt it,
Said I to meself them days;
Walkin' twenty miles on Sunday,
Hearin' mass wud long John Hayes.
On the way home, at Phil Haley's,
Shtoppin' if the day was chill—
Ah, there's no time like the ould time,
Wud its house beyant the hill!

All the neighbors now are sheattered,
Buried, most o' them, many a day,
An' I know be Patsy's childer,
I'm an ould chap in the way.
Only me an' poor John Daly—
Last week Thursday, buried Phil—
At the wake we two were talkin'
Av ould times beyant the hill!

Yesterday, wud Francis Michael,
I went down to see his shtore,
An' me heart bruk when I seen it—
Where the ould house was before!
An' I turned me eyes above me,
Thankin' Heaven for its will
That had left me, altho' lonely,
Shtandin' could beyant the hill!

MONSON STATE PRIMARY SCHOOL.

A Review of the History of the Institution Recently Closed.

On a hillside overlooking the town of Palmer stands a collection of large white buildings, formerly a state almshouse, later a state primary school, but now known as the Massachusetts Hospital for Epileptics

The large main building was erected in 1853-4 as a state almshouse. It is of wood, and including two wings, used as dormitories, is some 478 feet long by 37 feet wide, and three stories high, with the exception of the officers' department, which is four stories. During the first year 723 inmates were committed, and during the next year 1622. This increase in population made more buildings necessary, so in 1855 a brick building two stories was erected at a cost of $12,000. This building was 70 feet in length by 45 in width; the first story contained a kitchen and bakery, with a store room for each, also an engine room, and a washing room; in the second story an ironing room, clothes room, sewing room, and a drying room. In their appropriate places in this building were an engine of ten-horse power, a large tubular boiler, washing machines, grindstone, and various steam machinery and apparatus for cooking, washing, drying clothes, baking, etc. This building, with all its arrangements as to rooms and machinery, was planned by Dr. Brooks, the superintendent, and every part seemed exactly adapted to the purpose for which it was intended. The carpenter work was done by C. W. Richard of Palmer, and the mason work by the Messrs. Shaw of Palmer. In 1855 a barn was erected to accommodate the stock, and the storing of about 100 tons of hay. The next year, 1856, the institution was known as the state almshouse and primary school, the primary school having been added for the instruction of the children at the almshouse.

The two departments (the almhouse and primary school) were located in one building, and children were first received into the almshouse and then transferred to the primary school. Only children attending school were so transferred, the others remaining as inmates of the almshouse. In May, 1872, the almshouse department, which had dwindled to a small population, was abolished. In 1870 an appropriation of $16,000 was given the school for the purpose of heating the buildings by steam, they having been heated by small stoves up to that time. A brick building was erected, and in it placed a new engine of thirty-five-horse power, and four large tubular boilers. The plans for the building, calculations for the machinery, heating, and the distribution of same were under the charge of John N. Lacey, then engineer of the institution. A new hospital building was also erected on the hillside, east of the main buildings. It embraced a two-story center building, 32 feet square, with one-story wings running east and west, each 60 feet in length. The center building was designed for the office of the physician, the hospital kitchen, and lodging rooms for nurses. There are two wards in the male department, and three in the department for females and children. Connected with these are small rooms for patients when very sick, also bath rooms and other conveniences. During later years still another hospital was erected east of the one above mentioned, to be used by those who were affected with contagious diseases.

Any who had the idea that this school was in past years a sort of almshouse, would have done well to visit it and see for themselves what was being accomplished there. The children learned not only that the world meant kindly and well by them, but also that each of them had something to do for the good of the whole. The day began at half past five; breakfast at half past six. At half past seven both boys and girls, with the exception of those who were to attend the morning school session, took part in the housework or outside work, under the direction of the supervisors. Some made beds, others washed dishes and assisted in the different departments of washing and cooking, some scrubbed the floors in sleeping rooms, dining rooms, and halls; others assisted in the nursery, while some fifty boys worked on the farm and about the barn. The girls in the sewing room and the boys in the tailor shop, some of whom were lame, were kept heartily interested, besides accomplishing excellent seams and button holes. When a boy had learned to make himself a whole suit he was allowed to put in an additional pair of pockets. There was but little formality about their life, except that their hours were regular and their meals sure to come at the appointed times. They were allowed to run about the farm under certain restrictions; they picked berries, and with their earnings were allowed to visit the village occasionally to buy trifles, or have a tin-type taken. From twenty to a hundred at a time have been trusted by themseives outside the grounds, in the woods and fields.

The method of discipline was founded on the principle that self government, guided by intelligence, is the best for any community, whether of men and women, or of children. Some of the most trustworthy boys were selected, and placed in charge of sections of the school, with the power to promulgate rules, admonish and report offenders to the superintendent or supervisor. Rewards were offered for exemplary conduct, and positions of trust given to those who especially deserved the honor. Boys soon found that their plans to ran away were defeated, and after two or three attempts, they ceased to talk openly about leaving, even if they secretly meditated the plan. Some of the more prevalent bad habits, such as swearing, quarreling, and the like, were suppressed by the Boys' Improvement Club, "Mental and Moral Development," being their motto. The result of this method of discipline has been all that could be desired. The children were made better by it. Boys of bad reputation have become good, and in many instances there appeared to have been a remarkable quickening of the moral sense. Corporal punishment in its severer forms was scarcely ever needed, but whenever punishment was administered, it was in kindness and with an aim to the good of the child.

Services were held in the chapel every Sunday at 9 a. m. A short discourse was addressed to the children, by ministers of different denominations, and an hour was spent in Sunday school exercises under the direction of the superintendent and teachers. They usually had singing at services held every evening; many manifested a remarkable aptitude for learning tunes, and they sang in quite an interesting manner the sacred songs commencing, "I Want to be Like Jesus," "Dare to do Right; Dare to be True," "Come, Hail the Prince of Glory," and many other tunes.

The schools, of which there were eight grades and a sloyd department, were in session six hours in the day, recesses included, five days in the week, forty-seven weeks in the year. The method of instruction varied in the different schools, and went from primary work to that taught in the grammar schools. In 1874 a printing office was established and a paper, called the Dew Drop, was published bi-monthly for a time. This paper contained contributions from the scholars, as well as communications from friends. It was as valuable to them as any school exercise, inasmuch as it involved a practical application of the rules of orthography. The teachers, after their morning and afternoon sessions were over, often invited some of the children to their rooms to be taught verses, dialogues, etc., for the evening entertainments, which in their turn have greatly enlivened the school, discovering unexpected talent on the part of some, and causing much merriment to the rest. It may not be out of place to mention a few who have given the teachers encouragement. One boy from the school is now at Yale college; after serving his time on a farm he entered Williston Academy, paying his way by his own efforts, accepting willingly any honorable work that he could secure. Another is now studying at Dartmouth, after graduating from a high school. Another of the former pupils of the school has an ambition for West Point. Another, having served his time on a farm in Connecticut, is filling acceptably the position of clerk in a Hartford store. Many others might be mentioned who are doing equally well.

A large proportion of children, when first admitted, were ragged and filthy, unaccustomed to obey, and unwilling to submit to wholesome discipline. The first treatment of such was a bath, then new clothes, food and sympathy, which in most cases produced a wonderful change. The harness being now partly put on, attention was directed to their moral, intellectual and physical training, and to the procuring of good homes for as many as possible, and while many remained in homes found for them, a few returned as unmanageable, and these by care and perserving efforts were generally made useful members of society. In applying for a child to board the preliminary step was to apply to the superintendent for a blank to be signed by two or more selectmen or overseers of the poor, and the pastor of the church which the applicant attended, certifying that "the bearers, Mr. and Mrs.——, are residents of this——, with whom we are personally acquainted, and we cordially recommend them to be worthy citizens and suitable persons to be intrusted with the care and education of a child." Upon the presentation of this certificate, properly filled, a child was selected and sent out for one month on trial, and then, if the child gave satisfaction, it was indentured till of age; when desired, the children could be adopted. During later years Hon. S. C. Writington has had charge of the boarding out. He had agents who found homes, supplied them with children, and looked after them and saw that they were not abused. There are disappointed homes, as well as disappointed children, and no part of this work was more important than the careful selection of each for the other. To illustrate how delightful the result when satisfactory children reach good homes, the following quotations are made from a large file of letters received by the superintendent and officers: A. writes: "I am going to try to stay at my nice home;" S: "I am so thankful for so nice a home;" R: "I like my place very much; I thank you sending me here;" O: "I will try to be a good boy, and I have a nice place. We have a lot of tobacco, but I will not chew any; I remember what you told me about it." Many of the children received were known as "juvenile offenders," as well as those termed "neglected," and came as the result of bad homes and parental neglect It was the purpose of the state to counteract these bad beginnings, to reform these little offenders, to straighten the tree while yet it was a twig; so as many as possible were, without staying here very long, placed directly in families to receive discipline and training, and under this wholesome restraint to grow up like other children in the community, into good citizens.

The food of the children was carefully considered, and a dietary commending itself as nutritious and economical was supplied in an abundant quantity. The following is a bill of fare usually used, and will convey a fair idea of the living of the children:

Connected with the school is a fine farm of some 235 acres, with buildings large and well adapted to their purpose. About 100 head of stock is easily wintered, 50 of which furnished the milk for the institution. During 1893-94, 91,800 quarts was consumed. The new cow barn erected last year under the supervision of Superintendent Wheeler to take the place of the one burned in 1894, is the principal feature of the farm buildings. About 100 tons of ice is generally cut every winter, and from 300 to 400 pounds of poultry are also raised yearly. In 1855 the farm consisted of about 185 acres, about 30 being wood land, and the residue pasturage, tillage and a small proportion of mowing. It was for the most part a hard and rocky soil, but under the wise and diligent measures of George Fisherdick of Palmer it soon attained a good state of cultivation, and now can be considered as fine a farm as any in the county.

The water supply of the institution is obtained from two reservoirs, one on the south of the institution, the other one on the west. During the drought which prevailed in this vicinity last year the water in the reservoirs became very low. To meet this emergency prompt action was taken, and an excavation fifty by eight feet, twelve feet deep, was made just above the west reservoir. Three hundred feet above this water was found near the surface, and a second well was dug and piped into the large gallery before mentioned. These springs furnished in the dryest time more than seven thousand gallons of pure water a day.

The inflammable materials of which the buildings of the institution are constructed, and the danger of life which a conflagration would occasion, has been remarked by almost every visitor. To guard against a disaster of this kind proper safeguards are to be found about the institution. A double row of iron balconies, extending around both wings of the main building, were put up, thus affording a safe exit from all the dormitories to the ground. Ninety-two rods south of the buildings is a reservoir capable of holding thirty-five thousand gallons. This reservoir is at an elevation seventy-five feet above the cupola of the institution, and pipes carry the water to different parts of the buildings where a string of hose is attached ready for immediate use. But with all the precaution that has been taken three fires are recorded in the history of the institution. The first broke out in March, 1888, between the store-rooms of the kitchen and bakery, but by the prompt action of the officers it was soon subdued. The next fire destroyed the cow barn and all the hay and grain it contained. Fortunately, in happened in the daytime, and all the stock, with the exception of one cow, was saved. A most searching investigation failed to establish the exact origin of the fire. The large new cow barn standing on the site of the above, was destroyed by fire on the morning of Aug. 4, 1894, just after the cows had left the barn; a boy, on his way to his work in the stable, found a match in the highway close to the barn. Lighting it he passed on his way through the barn and threw it on the hay mow, then passing down stairs to his work. A few minutes later another boy sent through the barn to drive the cows saw the blaze and gave the alarm. Three men who were working in the cow wing at the time soon had a stream of water on the flames. The general alarm was sounded at the school, and within a few minutes five streams were playing upon the flames, but without avail. Help was asked by telephone from Palmer, and that department generously responded, and was of service in preventing the spread of the flames; all worked heroically to save the property, but the new barn, with all its contents, was destroyed, involving a loss of $14,000. The boy, who was not wholly responsible, was soon afterward removed from the school.

The first superintendent of the almshouse was Samuel D. Brooks of South Hadley; he was appointed in 1853, and continued till 1858. John M. Brewster, Jr. of Pittsfield, was appointed in 1858 and continued until 1868. Horace P. Wakefield of Reading, was appointed in 1868, and continued until 1876. J. H. Bradford was appointed in 1876, and continued till 1880. Gardiner Tufts, Lynn, was appointed in 1880, and continued till 1884. Amos Andrews of Holyoke, was appointed in 1884 and continued until 1892. Walter A. Wheeler of Rutland was appointed in 1892 and continued until 1895. Among the early inspectors may be mentioned with honor Gordon M. Fisk and Alonzo V. Blanchard of Palmer. J. M. Sisk has served as mail agent for the past 27 years, going there in 1868. Miss E. M. Fullington has served as teacher since 1874. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Prentiss, who were custodians of the buildings, have served at the institution for the past years. Among some of the former officers there may be mentioned Jos[illegible] Scott, superintendent of Concord Reformatory, Charles H. Bradley, superintendent of Boston Farm School, and S. A. Andrews, superintendent of Vermont Industrial School, John N. Lacey, steward at Danvers Hospital, Rev. Charles F. Foster, superintendent of schools in Chester, Pa., Dr. Page, superintendent of the Danvers Hospital.

CRUELTY OF FRIGHTENING CHILDREN.

Happy those little ones who have ever near them loving arms with whose magic circle the oncoming of the cruel fit of terror is instantly checked, giving place to a delicious calm!

How unhappy those children must be who, timid and fearsome by nature, lack this refuge—who are left much alone to wrestle with their horrors as best they may, and are rudely repulsed when they bear their heart-quakings to others. I would not venture to say. Still less should I care to suggest what is suffered by those unfortunates who find in those about them not comfort, assurance, support in their fearsome moments, but the worst source of terror. To be brutal to these small, sensitive organisms, to practice on their terrors, to take delight in exciting the wild stare and wilder shriek of terror, this is perhaps one of the strange things which make one believe in the old dogma that the devil can enter into men and women. For here we seem to have to do with a form of cruelty so exquisite, so contrary to the oldest of instincts, that it is dishonoring to the savage and to the lower animals to attempt to refer it to heredity.

To dwell on such things, however, would be to go back to a pessimistic view of childhood. It is undeniable that children are exposed to indescribable misery when they are delivered into the hands of a consummately cruel mother or nurse. Yet one may hope that this sort of person is exceptional—something of which we can give no account save by saying that now and again in sport Nature produces a monster, as if to show what she could do if she did not choose more wisely and benignly to work within the limitations of type.—Popular Science Monthly.

JUST A FEW OBJECTIONS.—"I proposed to Miss Gladys Beautigirl last night." "Ah! and she accepted you!" "Well, no-o-o, not exactly, but she came so near doing so that a great deal of the sting was taken out of her refusal. She said she would have accepted me if I had plenty of money and a perfect disposition, and my eyes were brown instead of blue, and my hair curly, and I was two inches taller, and was winning fame in my profession, and possess personal magnetism, and came of an old and blue-blooded family, and would always let her have her own way, and never smoked, nor wanted to stay out late at night, and did not belong to any lodge, and would keep a stylish turnout and plenty of servants, and really wanted her mamma to live with us, and a few other things which I have forgotten. But if a fellow must fail in an undertaking it is encouraging to him to think he came very near winning."—Harper's Bazar.

THE OLD, OLD STORY.—Although Lee Jones lives in Alamanda he is devoted to his club, and his devotion frequently costs him the last boat. Of course he always explains the matter next day at dinner. Within the past few days Mrs. Jones's pug dog has been running off and staying away for half a day at a time. Monday evening he disappeared and Tuesday morning he was still among the missing. Mrs. Jones became anxious about her pet and at the breakfast table asked her cook:

"Maggie, where do you suppose Pug is? He was away all night."

"I don't know, mum, but I guess he missed the last boat," was the prompt response.—San Francisco Post.

Our Work.

We make, or mar, our life by touches light
Of veriest trifles; shaping its soft clay
With heedless fingers, or with pressure firm,
As best accordeth with our changeful mood
That changeth with the years.
The plastic clay
Doth stiffen slowly. Evermore we add
Some strange new thing, as in our eyes seems good.
We do not know that our poor eyes are veiled,
And see not clearly what a wild, weird shape
Our hands have fashioned. See—as through a mist
That giveth beauty—all the lines grotesque,
Or grim, or hideous, that our hands have pressed
On the soft clay about us.
At the last—
When hands are folded idly, and their work
Is ended, over—death shall tear the veil
From off our eyes, and we shall see ourselves
Even as we are seen. * * *
The thing that we have made from out our lives
Doth go to judgment with us, fair or foul;
A thing our living hands alone can shape
For glory or for shame. The final touch
Is given by Death's angel; crushing clay
Down to the dust with stern, compelling hand,
Or lifting it as marble for the shrine
Of immortality.

EAST-SIDE CHILDREN DANCING.

New York has many dancing schools. Schools of the smart set, where the Fifth avenue belle just learns the one, two, three of the waltz, the enlivening two-step, the stately minuet and other popular and fashionable dances; schools of another class where the salaried man is first taught the pleasure of the lancers and where he becomes imbued with the hope that the knowledge derived there may some time, if fortune favors, stand him in hand at the Patriarchs'. There are besides innumerable schools where "Chimmy" and "Mame" learn to "trip the light fantastic," but if you want to see the dancing schools of the people in summer go down on any of the asphalt streets below Eighth and between avenues A and B on pleasant evenings.

There you can see, at any rate, the dancing school of the great East-side. With the sky for a ceiling, with the asphalt pavement for a floor, a hand organ or a peripatetic piano for an orchestra, every-day dresses for ball gowns, the East-side belles, of from 5 to 10 years, take the first lessons in the one pleasure that makes all flesh kin. And from the doors, windows and fire escapes an appreciative audience of Poles, Jews, Italians and Germans looks down on the crowd of romping youngsters.

The man at the piano turns the crank, and immediately, to the strains of "Her Golden Hair was Hanging Down Her Back," jigs, clogs and skirt dancing become popular. Here are two girls, one probably 6, the other 9, hand in hand, skipping and kicking in a manner and with a finish that would cause the average variety soubrette to turn green with envy. And it's all natural—no dancing master is engaged down there, and the sole education in the "step" is observation and the natural instinct of rhythm and harmony inherent in our music-loving foreigners.

The piano man's assistant passes the hat, and perhaps he gets a nickel, perhaps a dime. Then the tune is changed and a cheap imitation of an air from "Rigoletto" comes out of the piano with a rush and whirr. It's mechanical, every note, but the children don't mind, and they grab each other around the waist and in and out they go whirling up and down the street.

Do they enjoy it? It is not necessary to ask them the question, for the face of every one plainly says, "This is my time for fun, and I am having it." Dirty, ragged, unkept little tots! Perhaps they have had a small crust for supper, perhaps not, but what do they care for anything substantial. The intoxication of the dance has dulled their hunger, and their music-loving souls now are nourished with an inspiration from an old worn-out hand piano.

The hat is again passed, the piano is moved up the street, the children following. Reinforcements from the avenues are added to the small army of dancers, and a new audience looks on with pleasure and approbation.

"Boulangr's march" comes from the piano in quick, wheezy notes. A procession is formed and a grand march begun. A young "Hully Gee," and perhaps a future understudy for "Maggie Murphy" lead, while the children of "the best families" of the particular district fall in behind. Sometimes a boy and a girl side by side, again two girls, but even the boys choose partners from their own sex and join in this formal gathering.

The march is now changed to a two-step; the procession is broken and away they go recklessly, carelessly, bumping into one another with no apologies, with no thoughts but for the pleasure of the moment. The piano stops, the owner collects a few stray cents, wheels the cart on to another street and the festivities are transferred.

Did you ever wonder, as you admired some new local star doing her "turn" on the boards of a popular concert hall, where she first learned the steps? Go down the East-side any evening and the schools you will see may enlighten you on that subject.—New York Press.

THE FEAR OF THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

Girls who are terrified by thunder and lightning lose a great deal of enjoyment during the summer, when we have storms as sunshine. It may not be quite possible for everyone to help being afraid when the sky is black with clouds and the lightning flash, but it is within the power of most people to control the expression of fright. Once or twice having resolutely refrained from showing your terror, you will be surprised and pleased to find the terror itself lessening.

I know persons who go through life in a sort of bondage to f

Considerable comment is heard about town concerning the small license fee paid by Ringling Bros.' circus, $15. The facts are that the advance agent of the circus misrepresented the matter to the selectmen, telling them that it was only a small show and did not do much business. The circus belongs in the west and has never been east before, so no one had heard of it and knew nothing about it. It is safe to say that if it ever visits Palmer again it will contribute more than $15 to the running expenses of the town.

Mrs. Mary O'Keefe, 70, died Sunday morning of heart disease at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Henighan, on Central street. The funeral was held from St Thomas's Catholic church Tuesday morning, high mass being celebrated by Rev. Fr. Donoghue. Mrs. O'Keefe leaves a son, John, living at Thornkike, and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Moran, living on the road to North Wilbraham, Mrs. Maria Hatch of Springfield, and Mrs. Elizabeth Henighan of Palmer, with whom she had lived for the past 17 years, also a large number of grandchildren to mourn her loss.

The Norwich line of steamers announce an excursion to New York and Coney Island for to-morrow, at the price of $3 for the round trip. Tickets are good returning until Tuesday afternoon of next week, or passengers may leave New York Monday morning at 10 o'clock by the magnificent steamer City of Lowell, connecting at New London that evening with the Block Island train for Brattleboro and intermediate stations, and enjoying a sail by daylight through the Sound.

Cupid has appeared in various forms, but never as a sweet pea until this season. Springfield is to have an exhibition of sweet peas next Tuesday and Wednesday, and "Cupid" is the name of one of the new sorts that promises well and will be shown in all its best surroundings. It is wonderful what an advance has been made in sweet peas during the last few years, and the Hampden Horticultural Society deserves much credit for its part in developing the interest and culture in this charming summer flower. The show opens July 30th, at 12 o'clock noon, and closes at 10 o'clock p. m, the following day.

The Boston and Albany road will run one of its popular excursions to Boston and Nantasket Beach next Friday, a special train leaving Palmer at 7.05 a. m., and returning leaving Boston at 7.20 p. m.; tickets will be sold at all stations from Indian Orchard to Brookfield, inclusive, and the rate for the round trip is only $1.45. At Boston excursionists have the choice of a sail down the harbor to Nantasket Beach, Downer Landing or Bass Point, Nahant, or admission to the ball game between the Bostons and Philadelphias at the south end grounds. Only a limited number of tickets will be sold, and persons intending to go will do well to secure them in advance.

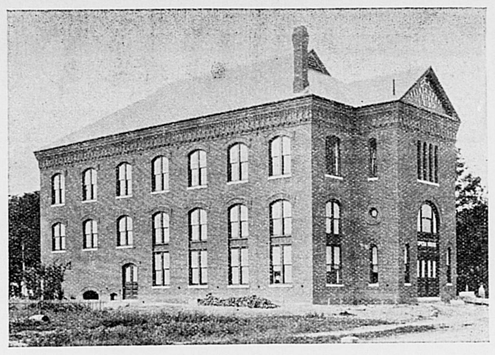
The Palmers will play ball to-morrow afternoon on the Agricultural Park grounds with the St. Josephs of Thompsonville. Larkin and Grace will be the battery for Palmer, and Leander and Connor for Thompsonville; Dillon and Delaney will umpire. The Thompsonvilles are one of the strongest amateur teams in this vicinity, and have played two games with the Palmers, the first a tie and the latter a 13-inning game, won by the Palmers; a good exhibition of ball may be looked for to-morrow. In addition to the ball game there will be a 100-yards race between Lester Winters of Palmer and Dan Malone of Springfield for $50 a side. The admission is 15 cents, ladies free.

The Rogers-Osgood Hat Co. is making active preparations for next season's business, and men are hard at work getting new machinery into place for the manufacture of a line of samples. Among other new machinery are eight hydraulic presses, which will be used on the finer grades of hats, the manufacture of which the company will engage in extensively next season. By these presses a pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch can be put on a hat, giving it a finish which is impossible with the other presses. When these are in running order the works will be fully equipped to handle any class of work. A full line of new shapes will be put on the market next year, in addition to which the company will retain all the past season's shapes.

A man of about 70, giving the name of Horatio N. Warner, and claiming to be a graduate of Yale College, arrived in town last week Thursday night and stopped at the Converse House. He paid for his lodging, but had not the wherewithal for a breakfast. He fell in with congenial spirits, however, and absorbed so much "enthusiasm" that he was arrested later in the day. In court Saturday morning he claimed to be a lawyer and newspaper man, having been engaged in New York, New Haven and Omaha. He was assessed $3, but was finally allowed to go without payment. It may have been that he was intoxicated with delight over his release, but at all events he was "full" again before he could get out of town and was gathered in once more, and Monday morning was given two months in the house of correction. William Lamont of Monson paid a fine of $10 Saturday morning for drunkenness. Michael Kennedy of Norwich paid $5 Tuesday for the same offense, and John O'Brien was sent to the house of correction for one month in default of the same sum. A hearing was held in relation to the liquors seized at Ernest M. Lord's place in Three Rivers the night of the third, and they were declared forfeited.

The contract for the Walnut street sewer has been awarded to Bramble & King, Franklin Bramble of Ludlow and Albert King of Palmer, their bid being about $75 below the nearest competitor. The sewer is to be about 1400 feet long from Main street, a 12-inch pipe running from Main to Park street, 10-inch from Park to Converse avenue, and 8-inch from Converse avenue north. The pipe is to be salt glazed Akron, laid to grade furnished by the town engineer. There are to be manholes at the intersection of Converse avenue, Park and Walnut streets, and possibly one at Main street, four feet wide at the bottom and two feet at the top. Seven catch basins are to be put in. The contractors are to employ Palmer labor, if such as they require is to be found here, at a price not less than 15 cents an hour. The bidders and their figures were: Sackett Bros.—12-inch pipe, 98 cents per lineal foot; 10-inch pipe, 82 cents; manholes, $30 each; catch basins, $15 each. J.W. Brainerd—pipe, 60 cents per lineal foot; manholes, $40 each; catch basins, $40 each. G. W. Lyman—pipe, 59 cents per foot; manholes, $40 each; catch basins, $22 50 each; Y branches, $1 each. C. A. Brown & Co.—pipe, 65 cents per foot; manholes, $41 each; catch basins, $24 each; Y branches, $1.10 each. Bramble & King—pipe, 48 cents per foot; manholes, $32.50 each; catch basins and connections, $16.35 each.

Sunday was one of the hottest days of the season, and the most uncomfortable. Hardly a breath of air was stirring, and the sun had an unhindered opportunity to make the people feel his power. In the evening the air was little better, until about 11 o'clock a thunder shower came up, and after muttering and growling over the matter for half an hour concluded to let things loose on the sleeping town, or such of it as had been able to reach the arms of Morpheus. Then their repose was of short duration. Such an aggregation of lightning, thunder and wind is seldom found in these latitudes. The lightning flashed in streaks, sheets and combinations of the two until it seemed as if the whole town was full of the stuff. Telephone and electric light wires crackled and snapped, both on the poles and in the houses, and timid people wondered if they would ever live through it. In several houses large balls of fire were seen, but no serious damage was done. And such thunder! It didn't die out with a long roll and mutter to itself as it usually does. It let all its energies loose on the first crack, and fairly seemed to jar the shingles on the houses from their fastenings. And the rain came down by bucketsful. It filled the gutters full and ran over the sidewalks, the sewer openings proving too small to carry it off as fast as it fell. In some places the roads were washed quite badly.



THE ODD FELLOWS' FINE NEW BUILDING.

THE ODD FELLOWS' NEW HOME.

Dedicated Tuesday Evening. Description of the New Quarters.

The new hall erected on the corner of Central and Pleasant streets by Palmer Lodge, No. 190, I. O. O. F., was dedicated Tuesday evening by Grand Master Henry E. Ruggles of Franklin, assisted by officials of the Grand Lodge. After introductory music Martin M. Thomas, Noble Grand of the lodge, addressed the Grand Master, inviting him to dedicate the hall to the business and purposes of Odd Fellowship, and delivered to that official the keys of the premises. The dedicatory services proceeded in accordance with the usual formalities of the order in an impressive manner, and were followed by addresses from Grand Master Ruggles, Grand Warden W. S. Nevins of Salem, Grand Conductor C. B. Perry of Millbury, Grand Instructor Joseph York of Wollaston, Grand Marshal C. P. Harding of Medway, Grand Representative Louis A. Cook of South Weymouth, Grand Guardian W. E. Nasen of Franklin, Deputy F. R. Sistare of Springfield, Chairman of the building committee Charles E. Fuller, Dr. William Holbrook and George Robinson. The Grand Master returned the keys to Noble Grand Thomas, the Grand Marshall made the customary proclamation, and the services concluded with the singing of America by the audience. An impressive feature of the occasion was the presence of the venerable and beloved Grand Treasurer, Julius L. Clarke of West Newton, who was compelled by illness of his wife to leave by an early train. Many years since Mr. Clarke was an associate editor of the Springfield Republican, and has never lost his interest in Western Massachusetts. Excellent music was furnished by a quartette consisting of Charles B. Fiske, George W. Ely, E. B. Taylor and Fred O. Royce. About 200 were present. Grand Master Ruggles while in town was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Cotton. It is expected that the lodge may hold a general housewarming later and invite the public.

The quarters of the lodge are in the upper story, the lower being occupied by the opera house, which has already been described in these columns. Stairs at the front of the building lead to the hall, and at the right is the parlor, a pleasant room 20 by 22 feet, with windows on two sides; beyond this is the regalia and preparation room, of the same size; at the farther end of the building and extending across its entire width is the lodge room, 40 by 50 feet, with high ceiling. At the left of the hall at the head of the stairs is the kitchen and banquet hall, the latter communicating with the lodge room through an ante room. The rooms are all carpeted, and are to be handsomely furnished. Electric lamps furnish light, the lodge room having a handsome electrolier in the center, besides nine lamps on the desks of the various officers.

Base Ball.

Much interest is shown in the Palmer-Thorndike game, which takes place on the Palmer driving park Aug. 3d.

Dark, the Thorndike catcher, may not be fast enough for the Palmer club, but the Thorndikers think him a good man.

With Gay and Bordreau away on their vacation, the club will be greatly handicapped in the game with Westfield to-morrow.

Riley will be in the box to-morrow for Thorndike, and if he proves to be up to the mark will probably be the one who will pitch for Thorndike Aug. 3d against the Palmers.

The members of the home team are so sure of winning the $50 from the Palmer club on Aug. 3d that they have contributed part of the stake themselves. They claim that Larkin will be an easy mark, and their reason for thinking so is simply that they scored about 36 hits off him on Memorial Day.

The Warrens drew out the largest crowd of the season last Saturday, and it was a game well worth the price of admission. Broshnan proved invincible, and the Warrens could find him for only three hits, with a total of four. Collins and Dugan played a good game for the visitors, but were given poor support.

One thing sure about the game with Palmer, there will be no fear of getting anything but a square deal from the umpire, whoever he may be, as the selection has been left with Mr. Fitzpatrick of Palmer, and knowing as he does the feeling between the two clubs, he will secure none but a square person to umpire the game Aug. 3d.

THORNDIKES 9—WARRENS 3.

The game here on Saturday last between the Warrens and the home club was looked forward to with much interest, and although a one-sided affair, it was marked with many good features, which made it interesting for the spectators until the end. Brosnahan, an old Thorndike boy, was in the box for the home team, and proved too much for the visitors, who are considered strong and heavy hitters; however, they could get only three hits with a total of four off his delivery. The Thorndikes hit the ball hard in the second inning and gained a big lead, which the visitors could not overcome, although they tried hard at times, and were retired without a run once or twice when the bases were filled and a hit meant two runs. Brosnahan and Dark put up a good game for the home team, as did Dugan and Collins for the visitors. The playing of Gay, Kelliher and Coughlin, and the hitting of Shuegrue, Brosnahan, Bordon, Gay, Murphy, Chapman and Kelliher are worthy of mention. Kelliher's running catch of a foul fly in the last inning was one of the catches often read about but seldom seen. The score:

Miss Lucy Graves, employed in the drawing-in department of the mill, is taking a vacation of several weeks' duration at her home on Baptist Hill.

To-morrow afternoon the nine which played the Belchertowns last Saturday will go to Holyoke to cross bats with the team there. As the team has been doing good work it is expected that they will bring home the laurels.

Miss Anna Murdock has opened a candy, fruit and ice cream store in the building which Mrs. George P. Bell used for the same purpose, and as she has all the qualities of a pleasing saleslady, she will doubtless receive a generous patronage.

One of our young men, who for several weeks has been making his own pastry and taking the consequences, is getting tired of the undertaking. In this village he has hunted in vain for a cook. Thorndike might be a better place in which to search.

Last Saturday afternoon the cloth and weaving room nines had a game of ball on the old grounds for a five dollar stake. The cloth rooms won by a score of 20 to 16. To-morrow afternoon they will play again. This will be the first of a series of five games which are to decide the championship and who is to have the stake money, $10.

Many people ask why the free show men, who so thoroughly canvassed the town, did not make their appearance on the appointed time. The show really came off in the afternoon. They had imbibed too much of the ardent, and therefore could not wait till evening. After indulging in a fight free for all, they took French leave.

Charles Orcutt is again able to walk about after the accident which befell him last week. He was standing on a high stepladder putting ice into a refrigerator. One cake was obstinate, and in the struggle which followed both cake and man fell to the ground. Orcutt was the most injured, receiving internal injuries in the fall. But a week in bed has restored him, and he is again prepared to meet his foe.

Let our young men take a lesson from the experience which two of their representatives had the other evening. They had invited a couple of young ladies to take ice cream with them. The orders were being prepared when one of the gallants thought it was wise for him to see how much cash he had. He reached into his pocket, but only a cent rewarded him for the trouble. He gave his companion the hint, but he was hardly any better off, having four cents. The ice cream was not served.

A Challenge for Bicycle Riders.

Walter Russell challenges any novice bicycle rider in the town to a race or a series of races, for any distance.

A False Alarm.

On one of the sultry afternoons this week Officer Manning's siesta was somewhat suddenly disturbed by Mrs. Cadieux, who came to tell him that tramps were milking her cow, which was grazing in a neighboring field. She also said that for several days she had noticed that the animal did not give the usual measure of lacteal fluid. The officer having prepared himself, proceeded to march against the supposed robbers. But a surprise was in store for him, for instead of tramps two respected citizens were there, picking berries. The tin pails and the close proximity to her cow had given Mrs. Cadieux the impression that they were after spoil other than fruit.

A Little Trouble.

Last Sunday night there were two contemporaneous storms in this village; one in the heavens, the other on the front piazza of the hotel. C. Consigny was the cause of the trouble on the piazza. He swooped down upon a party of a dozen persons who were taking the "cool" on the steps, and seizing a chair tried to decapitate Ernest Lord with it. Lord retaliated with some hot words, which Consigny immediately followed up by a volley of stones. This was too much for Lord, who thought it was about time for the law to take its course, so he accordingly took his course for Officer Manning; and it did not take long for Lord to find him, either. When Manning had heard Lord's story he thought that Consigny must surely be drunk, but such was not the case. Consigny was never of sounder mind; he told the officer that Lord was on too intimate terms with his wife, and said that he knew he had not taken the right means for adjusting affairs, but he simply couldn't stand it any longer. There was no more disturbance that night, and Consigny left town the next morning. He came back Wednesday morning with a shotgun, and further developments are awaited.

PROBABLY the most laughable piece of news of the past week was

Tickets may be procured at the usual places.

Ed. Journal:—The story recently printed in the Boston Globe about frogs being in abundance in our water reservoir must have been the visionary dream of some correspondent who desired to add to the penny-a-line fund. I was at the reservoir to-day; the water is clear, can see the bottom of the well, and the only visible thing in the well except water was a fine trout. If the parties who write about the well would tell the truth it would save the rumors too gladly circulated of poor water, etc., while the state board of health and the people of the town know that we have one of the best, cleanest and purest water systems in the state. PURA AQUA.

July 23, 1895.

If a sufficient number of pupils can be secured, it is Miss Idella Anderson's purpose to open a kindergarten September 3d. The tuition fee will be 75 cents per week, this price including the cost of materials. She would be assisted in her plans if parents who intend to patronize the school would send in names of pupils before August 9th. Miss Anderson, who was a teacher at No. 8, resigned last November to devote her time to the study of the kindergarten system, and she will doubtless be as successful in this new field as she was in the primary school.

The body was found only a short distance from his home.

Several cows and horses in the barn belonging to John Stadler were saved, but a large quantity of hay and 24 hogs belonging to Mr. Stadler were burned. Henry R. Gould also lost about $50 worth of hay. The barn was insured for $800, but there was no insurance on the hay.

A Wedding That Didn't Materialize.

A case of true love that didn't run smooth has recently come to light in town. It seems that a carpenter from a neighboring town who has been working for a Belchertown farmer fell in love with the maid of all work, proposed, was accepted, and preparations were made for a wedding. The day was set, and the refreshments for the day ready, but the girl's parents knew nothing of the matter until Monday, and when they were told utterly refused their consent. Tears and entreaties were of no avail, so the matter had to be given up. The disconsolate bridegroom-elect tried to mend matters by proposing to a member of the family in which the girl lived, but the offer was not accepted.

One of the constant sights from day to day is the toiling of Rev. G. W. Davis in his garden, and the question is, what is a bachelor minister to do with so much garden "sass."

E. C. Sherman is contemplating a trip to England. He has been in this country 36 years, and now desires to once more see his native home. He will be gone about two months.

The ladies of the M. E. church held a meeting on the lawn at Mrs. Ira Nelson's last week. About 50 were present, and a very fine time was enjoyed. Several out-of-town guests were in attendance.

A. E. Freeman had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday. He slipped and fell down stairs in H. A. McFarland's barn, going under the feet of Mr. McFarland's driving horse, and would have been trampled to death but for the assistance of other men present. As it was, the horse stepped on one ankle, and his arm and shoulder were injured.

Mrs. Kent gave a party Saturday to Miss Rosie Lucy in honor of her 14th birthday. About 20 young men and misses were present. The afternoon was spent in playing games and swinging. An Aged Native Passes Away.

Hosea Sprague, who had nearly reached the age of 102 years, died at Homer, N. Y., last week Friday. Mr. Sprague was born in Brimfield, December 28, 1793. His boyhood and youth were spent at his birthplace. He was one of a family of nine children and all his brothers and sisters have long since passed away. When he was 11 years old his parents moved to Vermont, but he remained in Brimfield with Col. Ischa Brown until he was 22, when he went to Coleraine and there learned the carpenter's trade. In 1821 he went to East Homer, which was settled about 30 years earlier. He lived there with his brother-in-law, Samuel Sherman, and worked on Mr. Sherman's farm and at his own trade in that vicinity. He built many of the houses there. He later bought half the Sherman farm and lived there until 1853, when he went to Homer, where he has since lived. In the same year he married Miss Ann H. Hobart of Homer, who survives him at the advanced age of 85 years. They had no children. Mr. Sprague worked at his trade for many years, and acquired a competency by industry and frugality. Up to his 100th year he was remarkably vigorous, and though he retired from active pursuits many years ago, up to that time he was almost daily on the streets, cared for his own garden, split his wood and cleared his walks in winter. Several times during his residence at East Homer and Homer before the days of railroads or a stage line he had walked to his boyhood home. Up to last fall with one exception he had voted at every general election since he became a voter.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Alice Perry is out again after several weeks' sickness with scarlet fever.

Rev. and Mrs. Van der Pyl will hie themselves to the seashore Monday next.

Rev. F. S. Hatch of Monson preached in Grace church last Sunday in exchange with Rev. N. Van der Pyl.

Harry Ellis has recovered from the scarlet fever, and is now on a visit of a few days with friends in Brookline.

Two bicyclists appeared in town about eleven o'clock Monday forenoon on foot, the man with a 44-pound ladies' machine on his back, and the woman pushing her escort's wheel, all the result of contact with a fence near Stevens's corner.

Some of the members of Grace church Sunday school are very desirous of having a picnic in the near future, and some of the young ladies prefer tally-ho accompaniment. The subject will probably be agitated at the next session of the school.

The ball game between the Y. M. C. A. of Northampton and the North Wilbraham nine last Saturday was the prettiest contest seen on the home ground this season. The visiting team won in the ninth inning; score 7-6. The two teams will play at Northampton to-morrow.

Two ball teams in North Wilbraham. The rival team is composed in part of seceders from the regular nine, in addition to other well-known players in town. Their positions as far as known are as follows: G. Murphy, c; Lynch, p; W. Murphy, 1b; Goss, 2b; Friend, s; and perhaps J. Murphy on third base, with Ruppel, Bressette, T. Scott in the out field. It is reported that Joseph Bergman is to be manager of the new aggregation, with Goss for captain. They have grounds on the hill.

A Child's Arm Broken.

Roy, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Edwards, had his left arm broken by being thrown from a carriage Sunday afternoon. Mr. Edwards was taking care of a team which had driven into his grounds, and had placed his two boys on the seat to give them a ride to the barn, but while after the tie line in the back part of the carriage it is supposed that one of the children touched the horse with the whip, when the animal started through the garden, overturning the buggy and throwing out both boys with the result as stated above. Had the ground on which they fell been hard, the accident might have been more serious.

HAMPDEN.

Mr. Blakeledge and daughter of Chicago, together with his sister, Mrs. Howe of Springfield, were the guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. William Loach.

Mr. and Mrs. Alanson N. Chaffee of Springfield were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson last week, also Mrs. David and Mrs. Samuel Davis of Somers, Ct.

The delegates and others who attended the Christian Endeavor convention at Boston gave reports of their doings in the Methodist church Sunday evening, which proved very interesting to all.

The town was visited by two heavy showers late Sunday night and early Monday morning. The rain fell in torrents, leveling corn and small vegetables to the ground, thus doing much damage. The roads were badly washed in some places.

The body of Deacon John Langdon was brought here for burial last week Tuesday from his home in Windsor, Ct, where he has lived for the past twenty-five years. He was a native of this town, and spent over sixty years here, always retaining a lively interest in the town of his birth and making frequent visits at the home of D. B. McCray, whose stepmother was his first wife. His second wife was Emily Stebbins, a woman of fine intellectual powers, whose leaving town was much deplored, and who died a few years since. Mr. Langdon leaves two children, a son made deaf and dumb by scarlet fever, and a daughter who has devotedly cared for parents and brother. Mr. Langdon was eighty-seven years old, and his funeral was attended by Rev. Calvin Stebbins of Worcester, as he requested.

A Successful Raid.

Officers from Palmer, reënforced by Springfield specials, swooped down on this little hamlet early Sunday morning, and great is the excitement that has since prevailed. The little affair began about 12.30 a. m., when Deputy Sheriffs Northrop and Studley of Palmer and Officer Murtagh and Special Officers Kennifick, Rainger and Chapman of Springfield started out with a four-horse team bent upon mischief. The first place visited was John Keyser's dwelling house, but before entering the party was divided into two squads. There they found three kegs of beer, 40 bottles of beer and some whisky. So unexpected was the raid that there had been no attempts at concealment. Then the second division started out to visit John Ryan's and see how John was progressing in his trade, but the alarm had been given and a team dashed by the officers on the way and reached Ryan's just before them. There was a scene of great confusion there, and Ryan and his friends hustled, but it was all in vain, for the officers were close upon them, and met Mr. Ryan bearing two demijohns of whisky to a place of safety. Ryan soon found himself in the officers' arms and wilted. The goods he surrendered consisted of five kegs of beer, 50 bottles of the same drink, two gallons of gin and two of whisky. The officers then visited the store and dwelling of Mrs. Vinica, widow of Elbridge Vinica, and though they found none of the ardent there, they did find Clark Goodell, a prominent citizen, who was making a social call on Mrs. Vinica. Owing to the lateness of the hour the officers took exceptions to the circumstances of his call, and Goodell was gathered in with the many jugs, demijohns and bottles to be brought before the court in Springfield. It has been known for a long time that liquor has been sold in Hampden, and it is claimed that the authorities knew of the circumstances, but would do nothing to prevent it.

The people of Patagonia

are not the ones we wish to talk to, but the people of Palmer and vicinity. This is the picnic season, and our leader just now is Sugar Cookies, four pounds for 25 cents; hardly believe it, can you? we can't ourselves. A rival manufacturer says the maker must have stolen the flour; that's nothing to you as long as the goods are first-class and you get so much for your money.

And right here let us suggest that we carry a couple of dozen kinds of cakes and cookies just the thing for picnics.

If you don't like to bake this hot weather, or run short unexpectedly, we have bread, cake, cookies, etc., fresh every day from the Domestic Bakery at Ware; they're as good as can be constructed; almost like home-made.

If you're canning, we give 20 pounds Revere granulated sugar for your dollar, Have the cans for the fruit, too, and can send 'em up with the sugar; "Mason" and "Lightning" kinds.

25 cents a peck is all we ask for new potatoes.

Lots of other things; glad to show 'em and sell 'em; sell 'em if you want 'em, don't feel hurt though if you look and don't buy.

Nothing but Dirt is taken away by Pearline. It won't make black white—it gives you a clean black, instead of a dirty black, that's all. Colors are restored and freshened by it, and look just as they did when new. They are cleaned, but they are never altered or changed. Safety comes first in washing.

The easiest and cheapest way to get things clean safely is to wash them with Pearline.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 395 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Railroad Man, The Clergyman, The Business Man, and all other men who have to look neat while at work, should know about "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. They look exactly like linen, wear well and being waterproof do not wilt down with heat and moisture. They do not soil easily and can be cleaned in a moment by simply wiping off with a wet sponge or cloth. Do not confuse these in your mind with composition goods. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Ask for these and refuse anything else if you wish satisfaction. Remember that goods so marked are the only waterproof goods made by coating a linen collar with waterproof "Celluloid," thus giving strength and durability. If your dealer should not have the "Celluloid" send amount direct to us and we will mail you sample post-paid. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs, 50c. pair. State size and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-months-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. MARLOW, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the Remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemeyer House, Middleburg, N. Y., on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain This same Remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism.

Never mind if the doctor did say so—your case is not hopeless. Blood Wine, the Great French Hospital Remedy, has cured more so-called hopeless cases in the short time it has been in the N. Dorothy's Opinion.

Mamma has bought a calendar,
And every single page
Has pictures on of little girls
'Most just about my age.

And when she bought it yesterday,
Down at the big bazaar,
She said, "What lovely little girls,
How true to life they are!"

But I don't think they're true to life,
And I'll just tell you why;
They never have a rumpled frock,
Or ribbon bow awry.

And though they play with cats and dogs,
And rabbits and white mice,
And sail their boats and fly their kites,
They always look so nice.

And I am sure no little girl
That ever I have seen,
Could play with dogs or sail a boat,
And keep her frock so clean.

Getting Acquainted.

I got acquainted very quick
With Teddy Brown, when he Moved in the house across the street,
The nearest one you see.

I climbed and sat upon a post
To look, and so did he;
I stared and stared across at him,
And he stared back at me.

I s'posed he wanted me to speak,
I thought I'd try and see—
I said, "Hello!" to Teddy Brown;
He said "Hello!" to me.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CROWN.

In the tower of London is kept the queen's crown, the diadem used at her coronation in 1838. It is composed of very ancient relics, but is a modern composition, having been made by the firm of Rundle and Bridge, and completed in the year 1838.

The crown is constructed of jewels taken from old crowns, and other stones provided by her majesty. It consists of emeralds, rubies, sapphires, pearls, and diamonds. The stones, which are set in gold and silver, encase a crimson velvet cap, with a border of ermine, the whole of the interior being lined with the finest white silk.

Above the crimson border on the lower edge of the band is a row of 129 pearls. Round the upper part of the band is a border of 115 pearls. In the front, stationed between the two borders of pearls, is a huge sapphire, purchased by George IV., set in the center of valuable pearls. At the back, in the same position, is another but smaller sapphire.

The sides are adorned with three sapphires, and between these are eight emeralds. Above and below the sapphires, extending all round the crown and placed at intervals are fourteen large diamonds, the eight emeralds being encircled by clusters of diamonds, 128 in number. Between the emeralds and sapphires are sixteen ornaments, each consisting of eight diamonds. Above a circular band are eight sapphires, set separately, encircled by eight diamonds. Between each of these eight sapphires are eight festoons of eighteen diamonds each.

In front of the crown is a diamond Maltese cross, in the center of which glistens the famous ruby given to Edward I. by Don Pedro the Cruel. This is the stone which adorned the hemlet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt. The center of the ruby is hollowed out, and the space filled, in accordance with the Eastern custom, with a smaller ruby. The Maltese cross is formed of seventy-five splendid diamonds. At each of the sides and at the back is a Maltese cross with emerald centers, containing respectively 132, 124, and 130 sparkling diamonds.

Level with the four Maltese crosses, and stationed between them, are four ornaments shaped like the fleur-de-lis, with four rubies in the center, and surrounded by diamonds, containing eighty-five, eighty-six, and eighty-seven diamonds. From the Maltese crosses spring four imperial arches, composed of oak leaves and diamonds. The leaves are formed of 728 diamonds; thirty-two pearls represent the acorns and fifty-four diamonds the cups.

From the upper part of the imperial arches hang suspended four large pendant-shaped pearls set in diamond cups, each cup being formed of twelve diamonds, the stems from each of the four hanging pearls being incrusted with twenty-four diamonds. Above the arch is the mount, which is made of 438 diamonds. The zone and arc are represented by thirty-three diamonds. On the summit of the throne is a cross, which has for its center a rose-cut sapphire set in the center of fourteen large diamonds.

Altogether the crown comprises one large ruby, one large sapphire, twenty-six smaller sapphires, eleven emeralds, four rubies, 1363 brilliants, 1263 rose diamonds, four pendant-shaped pearls, and 273 smaller pearls.

It is the heaviest and most uncomfortable diadem of any crowned head in Europe.—New York Sun.

NEW AT THE BUSINESS.

Scene in a dry goods store which has lately added a cigar department:

Salesman (transferred from linen stock, to customer, an old smoker)—"Ah, good morning, sir! What can I show you to-day? Here are some lovely Henry Clay perfectos—from the same house, sir, that send us the Clay worsteds, which you will find at the cloth counter."

(Customer looks surprised.)

"Yes, sir, and just look at this pretty bunch of imported Manila cheroots! We have them in all shades and sizes, sir. And the ribbon around this bunch exactly matches your four-in-hand."

(Customer glares.)

"Or perhaps you would like this sweet meerschaum pipe? It is warranted not to change color or show smoke marks."

(Customer gets red in the face.)

"Chewing tobacco, sir? Yes, sir. Will you have a yard or two yards?"

(Customer explodes into violent language and salesman faints.)—Buffalo Express.

STRICTLY BUSINESS.—"George," said the beautiful girl, as she nestled close to him, "the last time you called you proposed."

"I did, sweet one."

"And I accepted you."

"You did, love."

"I presume, George," she went on in her most fascinating manner, "that you looked upon me as merely a foolish, thoughtless girl, but—but—"

"How can I think so, pet?" he interrupted.

"But," she went on in a more businesslike way, "I have something of the business instinct of the new woman in me, and—and—I shall have to ask you to repeat the proposal again to-night. The last time you called it was Sunday, and contracts made on that day, I learn, are not legally binding."—Chicago Post.

UNMOVED.—"It's no use," she said dejectedly, "I've simply got to suffer." "What's the matter?" "Young Mr. Slogo called last night. I endured his society patiently until in self-defense I was forced to remark, 'Really, Mr. Slogo, I'm very much afraid it is getting late.'" "And what did he do then?" "He simply smiled and said that women are naturally timid."—Washington Star.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware. Regular size 50c and $1.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malaria poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

COULDN'T THINK OF THE WORD.

A hotel clerk told this story to the Louisville Courier-Journal: Three men from the country came into the hotel and registered for lodging, and a few minutes later two of them went out to see the town. "I will stay here," said the third, "and look at things," and he took a seat near the door. At 10 o'clock, a half an hour later, the man who was left went to the clerk. "I want to remain," said he. "All right, sir," answered the clerk. The man stood and looked at the clerk, and finally went back to his chair near the door. He sat still another hour and returned to the desk. "If you please," I'll remain," he said. "That's all right, sir," was the response. "We hope you'll be with us some time." The man hesitated and went back to his chair. It was away after midnight when he went up to the desk for the third time. "I think I'll remain, sir," he said. "We have no objections," answered the man behind the desk. The guest did not go back to his chair, however, but stood still. Shortly afterward another guest came up and asked the clerk for his key, "and I'll retire—" "Retire! Retire! That's the word I've been trying to think of for three hours. For Heaven's sake, let me retire," interrupted the man who had so desired to remain, and he was at last happy.

WHY WE SNEEZE.

The Boston three-year-old had sneezed two or three times.

"Oh, mamma," he cried, "what makes me blow that way?"

"That isn't blowing, my child; that's sneezing."

"And what's sneezing?"

"Sneezing, my child," responded the mother lovingly, "is a reflex nervous action, and it is brought about by mechanical irritation of the ends of the nerve fibres, which occur in the tissue of the nose. When this irritation occurs, whether it be due to a foreign body, or to a change of temperature, affecting the tissue of the nose, a nerve impulse is transmitted to the brain, and certain nerve centers in the medulla oblongata are affected; this results in certain impulses being transmitted along the nerves to the muscles controlling respiration. By this means, the egress of air during expiration is delayed, and the various exits are closed. When the pressure, however, reaches a limit, the exits are forced open, a powerful blast of air is expelled, and the person sneezes."

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed the child, clasping his little hands with delight and gazing into her gentle face, "how beautiful."—Detroit Free Press

"What is that place down there?" asked she (on her voyage). "Why, that is the steerage," answered he. "And does it take all those people to make the boat go straight?"—New York Mercury.

CATARRH

Is strictly a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of sudden climatic changes.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is acknowledged to be the most thorough cure for Nasal Catarrh, Cold in the Head and Hay Fever of all remedies. It opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils, is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. The results that follow catarrh, due to the dropping of poisonous matter into the throat, are irritation of the bronchial tubes and soreness of the lungs accompanied by a cough. In all such cases we recommend Pineola Balsam to be used in connection with Cream Balm.

PINEOLA COUGH BALSAM will be found excellent for all throat and lung inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Price of Cream Balm, 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25c. In quantities of $2.50 we will deliver free of express or postage on receipt of amount.

A Hindoo Poem.

A Hindoo died—a happy thing to do—
When fifty years united to a shrew.
Released, he hopefully for entrance cries
Before the gates of Brahma's Paradise.
"Hast been through Purgatory?" Brahma said.
"I have been married!" and he hung his head.
"Come in! come in! and welcome, too, my son!
Marriage and Purgatory are as one."
In bliss extreme he entered Heaven's door,
And knew the bliss he ne'er had seen before.
He scarce had entered in the garden fair,
Another Hindoo asked admission there.
The self-same question Brahma asked again:
"Hast been through Purgatory?" "No. What then?"
"Thou canst not enter!" did the god reply.
"He who went in was there no more than I."
"All that is true, but he has married been,
And so on earth has suffered for his sin."
"Married?" 'Tis well, for I've been married twice."
"Begone! We'll have no fools in Paradise."

A VACATION OF REST.

A Sermon-Essay, by Rev. H. F. Moulton, Pastor of St. Paul's Universalist Church.

And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart unto a desert place and rest a while."—St. Mark vi: 31.

The Master not only had a knowledge of man's spiritual needs, but as well recognized man's physical and mental needs. The apostles had been sent out two by two to preach that men should repent of their sins and live holy lives. They had been faithful to their mission. After a few months they "Gathered themselves together unto Jesus and told him all things, both what they had done and what they had taught." Doubtless these apostles at this time of their return were tired from their travel, and weary from preaching and healing. Like a noted preacher of recent years, they were not tired and weary of their work, but tired and weary in their work. Christ recognized their need of a vacation to renovate their bodies and to give new strength to their minds. Such a vacation would enable them to do more thorough and efficient work. This was the Master's common sense view of their condition. Body, mind and heart work are intimately connected; injure or disease body or mind, and heart work is affected. Jesus, therefore, commanded the apostles to leave their sacred duties for a short time, to withdraw from the multitude to whom they had been ministering, and to depart from this western and populated shore of the sea of Galilee to a desert place at the foot of a mountain in Bethsaida a town situated on the northern banks, where the Jordan river enters the sea, and there "rest awhile." Travelers tell us that this desert place was not hot and barren as we usually think of such a named locality; rather it was an uninhabited section, a quiet retreat near the shores of a beautiful lake, at the base of a majestic mountain with a full view of the Jordan river and within short reach of a small village. An ideal country for a vacation of rest.

It seems fitting at this time that we should reason together about a vacation of rest. It is a subject which has been very near to some of our own lives, one which many of us have considered with anticipation during these last days of July.

First of all. We should say that a vacation of rest has utility; that is it is useful, beneficial of good results. Action, thought, care cause the pulse to beat faster and increase the volume and intensity of our life currents; thus our vitality, the tissues of life, are worn away as a piece of steel or iron before a file or on an emery wheel. Health, vitality, strength of body and mind are only generated and stored for our use by nourishment and rest; deny our centers of life these two needful and all-important means and we have as results,—muscles losing in strength, nerves growing weak and diseased.

A day of rest such as Sunday should be has utility. In the Holy Scriptures through which God has spoken to his children, we are commanded to imitate the example of our Creator and Heavenly Father, who "rested on the seventh day from all his works which he had made, and God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it." Then, too, the Lord through Moses says to us, "Six days thou shalt do thy work and on the seventh thou shalt rest." We cannot, we must not overlook the positive teachings of these commands. Obedience to them is not unwise, nor attended with fruitlessness. The seventh day, set apart by our God as a day of rest, must of necessity have a value to us all who "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." "The seventh day," once said Beecher, "is no more for religion than any other, it is for rest; the whole seven are for religion and one of them is for rest, for instruction for social worship, for gaining strength for the other six."

Not only is there profit in a day of rest, but also in a season of rest there is gain. There are times as surely as the days come and go when man's physical and mental powers become used up from labor. In such a state of body and mind a day of rest—even a week of rest is not sufficient to regain force enough to warrant a sure pusuance of his labors. A young man enters the arena of life. His funds—material and mental—are necessarily small; competition is large, he is industrious from early morning until late in the night with hands and brain. Some thoughtful friend, noting his pale countenance and languid step, advises him to take a vacation of rest. He smiles as he replies, "I will when my business or profession is well established and my bank account is large enough to back it up." A few days rapidly go by; alas, Tuesday comes along; he is not in his office or study; a physician has been sent for, he has diagnosed the case and said:

"'Tis nervous prostration,
'Tis fever within;
You call it sickness,
I call it a sin."

George McDonald once said, "Certainly work is not always required of man. There is such a thing as sacred idleness, the cultivation of which is fearfully neglected." A season of rest has the utility of renovating our physical bodies, if not too badly exhausted. It weaves new tissues of life into muscles and nerves; it gives to the pulse a healthy and tempered beat; it stores new treasures of fire and energy in the brain. Therefore all of us who are obliged to perform manual or brain work, under a heavy pressure, should once every year breathe the invigorating air, partake of a change of food diet, and seek the sweet sleep which a vacation of rest demands and secures. Let us never forget the lines which have a lesson for each of us:

Too little rest, too little sleep,
Too many hours to sow and reap,
At last disease and pain;
The strongest rope parts strand by strand,
Beneath a ceaseless strain."

Secondly. A vacation of rest has the greatest utility when it is taken intelligently. It is a fast, well established from observation and experience, that the way in which many people try to find the benefits of rest is unwise The Sabbath, according to the Old Testament, was to be kept in a restful way. We see David going to the "House of God with the voice of joy and praise, with the multitude that kept the holy day." This condition of things has somewhat changed. True, large numbers now go, like the "Sweet Singer of Israel," to the House of God on Sundays "with the voice of joy and praise" in their hearts. However, they go not, as the Hebrew did, "with a multitude." Sad to say, yet true. The multitude are not in our churches on Sunday (or Thursday) to attend the services of social worship. Where are they? Perhaps like Peter, "they go a fishing." A-fishing for news in the Sunday newspaper, well filled of almost everything,—murders, scandals, advertisements, and a few pious words to catch the patronage of religious people. A-fishing for repose with a Sunday excursion party to some beach, lake or mountain, where excitement like that seen at a merry-go-round prevails and where poor deluded souls think they can worship "God in nature." Considered,—unbiased,—such ways as these,—and others which might be named,—are not intelligent ways of spending the hours of the first day of the week if we want rest of body and mind. Sunday should be spent as a day of rest. We should become as free as possible from our daily work. Its twenty-four hours should be wisely used—not less than eight in sleep; two of its morning hours should be spent in social worship in some church; other hours of the day should be spent with family life in the home, eating and drinking, talking and singing, reading and meditating, —with an occasional walk or drive. Perhaps another hour can be taken with profit—in the early evening for a social service of praise, prayer and conference, either in our parlor or the chapel of our church.

All of this leads us to observe that our seasons of rest should be used intelligently as well as our days of rest. In the "Star Papers," written by Beecher, there is a letter which he wrote from his quiet, hill-top vacation-town in Connecticut to his friend, Dr. Storrs, who was in Newport, Rhode Island. "Pray tell me," writes Beecher, "Whether there is in Newport such a thing as quiet? Do you ever get rid of noise, or crowds, or excitements? You only exchange hot and dusty excitements for excitements with sea breezes." These words well express the way many persons seek a vacation of rest; they merely exchange the locality of their existence, but still continue with their "society manners," "dress parties," "late suppers," "sleepless nights." Truly, "there is no rest for the wicked."

No, this is not an intelligent way to take a vacation of rest. Rather we should seek quieter places—a desert place as it were—where we can throw off some of the society manners, dresses, parties, and float like a mote in the sunbeams—refreshed by pure air, strengthened by nourishing foods eaten at regular hours, with boating over the glistening waters of lake and sea, with walks and drives through fields and meadows or over hills and mountain. Such a vacation of rest as this, with its nightly hours of health-giving sleep, brings "Rest to the limbs and confers quiet on troubled minds." One can say of such a vacation:

"'Tis Thy presence only
That make me blessed,
Heal my unquiet mind;
And tune my soul."

Thirdly, a vacation of rest can have its utility increased not only by using its time in an intelligent way, but in a Christian way. We should carry into our days and seasons of rest, as well as into our days and seasons of work, the spirit of the Master, the spirit of Christianity. Can another be found like Jesus? Take up your perspective glass of science or history and sweep around the horizon of the world, and the greatest, brightest and most perfect image of God will be found in Christ. Do you believe in him? Do you believe that he spoke words of truth? If so, listen to his words; speaking to us through the gospel of St. Mark, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." This was the Master's idea of Sunday. It was created for our good, why use it for evil? What use are the unchurched making of it in this hour? God knows if we do not know. "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." We who weep over our failures to reach the unchurched can have the consolation that God will not fail. As He in "the Kingdom of Heaven" whips them as it were, into obedience to holiness by loving vengeance upon their sin, many non-church-goers and desecraters of the Sabbath will find awaiting them, "In the land of departed spirits," remorse for wasted opportunities of soul building, repentance with scourgings for this sin. It will be after this—perhaps long after—before there will be revealed to them the full glory, peace and happiness of "The Heaven" prepared for the penitent and righteous, the pious and godly.

The Christian way to spend Sunday is to free ourselves as far as possible from our daily labors, attend social worship in the church of our choice in the forenoon, and remain with our families a larger part of the afternoon and evening. Business and pleasure call men altogether too much away from their wives and children—so much so in some cases that the sacred bonds of marriage and affection for child-life are becoming broken. Sunday should be a home day—a religious home day,—when husband, wife and children are seen together in their church, their religious home. Then, too, it should be made a domestic home day, when husband, wife and children should be seen together in their house and garden, or walking or driving. This way of spending Sunday would save many tears from wives and children; it would strengthen the ties of family love, sacrifice, and peace. Oh! men, husbands, do not let your wives and children go to church alone; don't stay away from them—unless absolutely obliged to—on Sundays. Be to them what God longs for you, and commands you to be. Make home life your club-room life on Sundays. Worship and reading, laughter and music, food and exercise, sleep and health, should fill their hours.

Our seasons of rest should likewise be spent in a Christian way. We should talk and walk as Christians; we should never forget what we profess to be, and that we have no right to be anything in our vacation for rest which we would not be at other times. We should be examples of humility, truthfulness, honesty, purity, faith and hope. Surely much can be done by mere Christian example for the furtherance of Christianity. One conscientious, consistent Christian—although poor and humble—can do more to convert men and women by example than a dozen who testify of their sanctification, and live in their daily lives as if hypnotized by Satanic power. Oh, if all Christians lived as well as they know how they ought to live, what a power christianity would have from the side of example to redeem the world from sin.

The example of going to church in our vacations for rest is a good one. Christians should not forget the claims of the church when away from home You should not say in your vacation, as persons sometimes do when their minister is away on an exchange, "Our minister is not here to-day, so we can stay at home." Let me tell you, God knows that they are at home. He knows when people stay away from His church because "The minister is away," or "Its too hot;" or "It is too cold;" or there is so much of that convenient "Sunday headache". If people were all Christian Scientists they could not make this last excuse for non-church-going. These peculiar people,—in fact we are all peculiar in some ways,—these people do not believe in the reality of aches or pains. However this may be, this is certain, God notes neglect of duty when we stay away from church and make petty excuses,—in our vacation days as well as at other times.

The truth which each of us should take home with us this morning is this: Days and seasons of rest for body and mind have utility,—utility which is increased when this rest is taken in an intelligent and Christian way May each of us—in our vacations of rest during the coming month—find some quiet, cool and healthful retreat where an experience will be ours which will verify these true, sweet lines of Wordsworth's:

"One moment now may give us more
Than years of toiling reason;
Our minds shall drink at every pore
The spirit of the season.
Some silent lows our hearts shall make,
Which they shall long obey;
We for the year to come may take
Our temper from to-day."

Maximus.

I hold him great who, for love's sake,
Can give with generous, earnest will;
Yet he who takes for love's sweet sake,
I think I hold more generous still.

I bow before the noble mind
That freely some great wrong forgives;
Yet nobler is the one forgiven
Who bears that burden well and lives.

It may be hard to gain, and still
To keep a lowly steadfast heart;
Yet he who loses has to fill
A harder and a truer part.

Glorious it is to wear the crown
Of a deserved and pure success;
He who knows how to fail has won
A crown whose luster is not less.

Great may he be who can command
And rule with just and tender sway;
Yet is deviner wisdom taught
Better by him who can obey.

Blessed are they who die for God,
And earn the martyr's crown of light;
Yet he who lives for God may be
A greater conqueror in his sight.
—Adelaide Proctor.

A GENUINE FAITH CURE.

It was a beautiful day in May. The sun shone warm on the vivid, green grass, on trees blossom—laden, on the red buds of the maples and the graceful tassels of the birches.

How lovely all nature was, and how cruel it seemed for everything to look so radiant when human hearts were breaking.

So, at least, thought little Stella Wynn, as she lay among the tall green grass in front of the tiny white house, half hidden by the woodbine that clambered over it.

In and out among the honeysuckles flew the yellow bees, making the air drowsy with their humming, and one went close to Stella's ear, and poising himself on a flower near her buzzed loudly. The child raised her head a moment to listen. "Oh!" she cried, eagerly. "He is telling me good news! I hope it is about papa!"

But when a sadder sound came from within the house, a groan of pain, Stella's tears flowed again. For her father was very ill, perhaps dying, and no one knew what to do for him.

Just seven miles away, in the city, lived the great doctor who did such wonderful cures. Stella, in the innocence of her heart, had asked her mother why he did not come and cure papa. Her mother had answered with some bitterness, "He cures rich people, my child. It would cost more dollars than we have cents to get his help. Poor people have to die when they fall sick, because they have no money.

Stella wished she could find some money or that she had something of her very own that she could sell and get the money to pay the great doctor. "Jo, in 'Little Women,' sold her hair for her father when he was ill," thought she. She looked at her own little yellow pigtail in disgust. "It wouldn't bring twenty-five cents!" she said aloud.

In stories the heroines' grandmothers always left them some valuable jewels, which were sold for great prices in time of need; or the old family Bible suddenly disclosed bank bills of large denominations. But her grandmother had nothing to leave her, and she had searched the leaves of the Bible.

No, there was nothing she could do for him Oh, if Christ were only on earth! She would walk hundreds of miles and beg of Him her father's life! Following this thought came again that of the great doctor. Indeed, she had hardly ceased to think about him all day. She never once doubted that he would cure her father if he only came to him.

"Oh," thought Stella, "if mamma would only let me go to him! I know he would come, for surely a man who can cure everybody must be a good man, and must love to do it."

She thought of her good, kind father, who loved her so well, and of the walks they used to take together, when he held her hand in his firm, strong grasp and told her stories as they walked along, or explained the names and uses of the flowers along their way. What could she and mamma and baby do without him if he died?

Just then her mother came to the door looking pale and anxious. Stella sprang up and ran to her.

"How is he?" she asked eagerly.

"No better," replied her mother dejectedly.

"Do you want me to take baby?"

"No, he is good and his father doesn't notice him now," replied Mrs. Wynn, the tears flowing down her cheeks as she spoke.

"O, mamma!" cried Stella, clasping her hands, "do please let me ask him to come!"

"Ask who to come?"

"The great doctor; mamma, do let me go to him."

"But we've got no money, child!"

"I will tell him so and beg him to come. I'll pay him when I am a woman."

The mother hesitated, for the child had imparted some of her own faith to her.

"Perhaps," she thought, "he may come for a child; but then it isn't likely, yet it will satisfy her to try."

"It is so far," she objected; "you will get too tired, and it would be too late to come home alone again."

"Oh, the doctor will bring me with him," said Stella, confidently.

Mrs. Wynn smiled sadly. "Don't be too sure of finding him," she replied, "or of his coming if you do find him."

"Well, if I don't find him I'll stay with Annie Bell."

"Go, then, dear, and God be with you," said her mother solemnly.

Stella ran joyfully to get ready. Her heart was light as a feather now; for was she not going to bring some one who could make her papa well?

She washed her face, hands and little brown feet in the brook near by and put on her clean dress and white sunbonnet. She took a few cookies in her pocket for lunch and started off.

The child felt quite happy now and enjoyed the sunshine, the songs of birds and the flowers along the way. She ran briskly on, she was so eager to reach the city and find the doctor before her father grew any worse. She laughed as the light breeze stirred her hair and she mocked the birds as she tripped along. For a while the houses were frequent. The air was cool and the sun not too hot Stella longed for a drink of water, but would not stop to get any because of the delay it would cause her.

The houses gradually grew less and less frequent, and the road led over a treeless plain where the sun shone hot overhead. Our little traveler was very tired. She had not thought of her lunch or realized that she was very hungry.

When the plain was passed she came to a thick wood where the rays of the sun hardly penetrated. About in the centre of this wood she espied a man lying beside the road—a dirty, ragged fellow with an evil face.

Stella's heart stood still for a moment. How could she pass him! "But it has to be done," thought the child. "I must do it for papa." She walked bravely on toward him, without looking in his direction. But just as she was about to pass him, he arose suddenly from the ground. Thrusting his face close to hers he put out his hand to seize her. She eluded him and sped away like the wind. He followed a short pace, but was soon outdistanced by Stella's swift feet.

And now the weariness began to weigh on her spirits so that for the first time she began to consider that the doctor might be away so that she could not see him. "But I'll wait till he comes home," she said, aloud.

She had nearly reached the city when out rushed a big, savage-looking dog from behind a farm-house and stationed himself directly in the road, growling fiercely. The brave child had no thought of retreating. 'I hope he will not bite me," she thought, "but I must pass him even if he does."

Great was her joy when she got near him to find that he was chained and could not reach her. "Just like the lions in 'Pilgrim's Progress,'" thought Stella.

At last the doctor's house came in sight.

She walked up to the door and rang the bell with a trembling hand. A servant answered her summons. He looked so tall and grand that she thought it must be the great doctor himself. He smiled at her timid question. "No," he replied, "what do you want of him?"

I want to see him on business," the child replied.

"I'm afraid you can't, he is very busy this morning and is going out soon."

"Please let me see him for a moment!"

"I can't possibly."

Stella flung herself down passionately on the broad steps and burst into tears. "Oh, do let me see him! I've walked seven miles, and oh, I want to see him so bad!"

The man had little girls of his own, and the sight of the child's distress touched his heart.

"I'll see what I can do," he said. He went up to the doctor's office and told him that there was a little girl below who had walked seven miles to see him.

"She certainly deserves to see me," replied the doctor," bring her in."

When Stella really stood before him and felt that the haven of her hopes was reached her courage suddenly left her, and not one word of the little speech she had been repeating to herself all the way could she remember. How tall and stern he looked as he towered above her!

But the thought of her father lying there so ill unloosed her tongue, and, clasping her hands, she cried: "Oh, sir! My father is dying, and I want you to come and cure him. Oh, do come. I asked God to let you all the way. We haven't any money, but I'll work and pay you all when I am a woman!"

Dr. Reynolds knew very little about poor people, and cared still less, but the child interested and touched him.

"Perhaps I couldn't cure him if I went," he said. "Oh, yes, you will," she replied. "You are so good and so great. You cure everybody."

The doctor winced. He had his own private opinion about his own goodness.

Stella had passed through a great deal that day, and as she waited for his answer with her heart in her eyes she grew white, tottered, and would have fallen if the doctor had not caught her in his arms. He remembered remorsefully what his servant told him. The child felt herself gently lifted from her feet. She hardly dared breathe when she realized that the great man was holding her in his arms. He carried her into a more beautiful room than she had ever dreamed of before, and laid her on a white bed.

"I shall go with you," he said, "as soon as I can. Lie and rest till I am ready, then I shall call you." He left her, and soon after a motherly-looking woman brought her such a dainty lunch. Stella ate it eagerly, for she was very hungry. She lay for a while looking around the beautiful room, then her eyelids closed and she fell asleep.

When she awoke the doctor stood beside her, and his face wore a look she did not understand. He would not let her walk, but took her in his arms again and carried her to his beautiful carriage.

Somehow she lost all fear of him during that ride; she told him all the adventures she had on her way, all about her home life and her father's illness. He drew her closer to him when she told him how the tramp had followed her.

Great was the neighbors' surprise to see such a handsome carriage stop before Mr. Wynn's door, and to see the great doctor step out.

Mrs. Wynn was too anxious about her husband to be awed by his presence. She received him with a quiet dignity which pleased him.

He examined Mr. Wynn carefully, asked many questions, then said: "It is a critical case, but I think we can save him."

And they did; never did man have better care than he, and when the leaves on the maples were red and gold he was well again.

Dr. Reynolds had learned many things. Stella had grown very dear to him, and he could not bear to have her loving confidence in him shaken. So it came about that many poor people were attended by the great doctor, while some rich ones were neglected.

He gained less money by the change, but more of a sweeter, truer joy than he had ever known before.

Stella often visited him in his handsome house, and later on became very fond of the beautiful lady he chose to be its mistress. His little children learned to love her, and to look for her coming.

One day, when she was sitting on his knee, she put her arms around his neck and said: "I love you, my doctor, because you cured papa." He kissed her softly on the forehead and he replied: "Indeed, Stella, I think you had as much to do with the cure as I did. It was on your part, a Genuine Faith Cure."—Budget.

AN INGENIOUS WAY TO RAISE WATER.

"One of the most interesting and ingenious methods of raising water from a river I saw recently on a visit to Green River," said Assistant Engineer Gilcrest. "It was a contrivance arranged by Charles McPherson at that place. It consists of a wooden wheel two and one-half feet in diameter and armed with paddles, which were set in motion by the current of the river, into which it was placed between two old scows. At one point in the circumference of the wheel is an offset with an opening in it. As the wheel revolves the water is forced through the opening into a coil of pipe in the body of the wheel, which is arranged like a snail's shell. The coil terminates in the axle of the wheel, which consists of a gas-pipe two and one-half inches in diameter. A perpendicular standpipe rises from this axle five and one-half feet above the center of the wheel, and through this pipe the water is forced in a continuous stream.

All of the work on the wheel is rough and ready, but the principle of the thing was new to me. The maker of the wheel told me that a wheel eight feet in diameter would raise water through a two and a half inch pipe to a height of 20 feet. The height to which it is raised depends upon the number of coils in the interior of the wheel. The wheel I saw was covered with Russian iron sheeting, so as to make it air-tight except for the opening at the offset, and I suppose that compressed air has much to do with forcing the water so far above the surface. A good feature of the wheel is that it need not be permanently fixed anywhere. It is set between two scows, and therefore rises and falls with the current. It was well worth while going a good distance to see it work."—Cheyenne (Wy.) Leader.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 2, 1895.

REV. DR. EDWARD BEECHER, brother of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, died at New York Sunday morning, in his 92d year.

THE first consignment of American armor plate to a foreign country was made Saturday from Philadelphia, when 13 plates of side armor were shipped to St. Petersburg, each plate weighing 52,000 pounds.

A CONNECTICUT man has discovered a gold mine near the town of Ashford in Windham county. Samples of the gold-bearing rock, which have been assayed, yielded from $11 to $19 a ton. A company will be organized to work the rock.

THUS far the Defender has fulfilled all the expectations of her builders and an extremely interested public, and has beaten everything which has come her way. Here's hoping she keeps up the same gait next month in the contests with the Valkyrie, which sailed last Sunday for our shores.

THE trip of the United States cruiser Columbia, one of the finest of the new war vessels, from Southampton, Eng., to New York, will be watched with interest by all Americans. She left there last Friday with orders to test her speed across the Atlantic, and some fast time for war vessels is expected.

RUMORS of A. P. A. opposition to Governor Greenhalge having a third term and denials of any action being taken in the matter are revolving about each other with a considerable degree of regularity. Massachusetts is pretty well satisfied with its present executive, however, and the patriotic orders may as well make up their mind to address him as Governor Greenhalge another year.

THE Boston Transcript gives some good advice in the following:

There is nothing for the Republicans of Massachusetts to fear from the Democrats this year, as a Republican nomination is almost everywhere equivalent to an election; but the Republican party has very much to fear from the aspirations of certain men within its own ranks. When everything is all one way, then is the time when the good citizen should take a hand in politics. Where the two parties are pretty evenly divided, each party is forced by the dictates of policy to put up reputable men; but when anybody in a party can get elected who receives a nomination, then is the time when the scum comes to the top.

THERE seems to be a difference of opinion in labor circles about the much-flaunted boycott of national bank notes, ordered by Master Workman Sovereign of the Knights of Labor. He is boasting that it is spreading like wildfire, and that workmen all over the country are approving it. President McBride of the American Federation of Labor says that it will hurt labor more than it will help, and hasn't the least idea that the proposition will be carried out. Meanwhile the country at large is losing very little sleep over the matter.

IT would seem that the chances for the Corbett-Fitzsimmons prize fight coming off in Texas are slim. The attorney general has ruled that both prize fighting and aiding and abetting a prize fight are forbidden by law, and Governor Culberson has issued a proclamation forbidding anyone violating the law regarding such fights. The sporting element insists that the "mill" will come off as announced, and it remains to be seen whether the governor is making a "bluff" or means business; it is hoped the latter is the case.

A PECULIAR state of affairs seems to exist in the little town of Hampden, which voted no license last spring but which seems to have been pretty nearly free rum. The selectmen are charged with being blind to obvious selling, and the prosecuting committee appointed by them have done little or nothing, although it has been plainly apparent that a great deal of liquor was being sold in the place, and the $500 appropriated by the town for the suppresion of illegal selling remains untouched. Private citizens finally took the matter in hand, resulting in the successful raid of two weeks ago.

THE Palmer selectmen have taken hold of the delayed grade crossing matter and have written to the Central Vermont officials to know why the changes ordered at the Ferrel crossing near Three Rivers are not made. Failing to get any satisfaction from them, the matter will be taken into the courts. It may not have struck the average citizen, but the present board of selectmen appear to be possessed of a rigidity of backbone vastly in excess of that of any recent years. Not all of their doings have been made public, but they are looking closely after the town's interests and the wishes of the voters as expressed in the town meeting.

THE selectmen and prominent citizens of Wilbraham are making a move to straighten the highway between North Wilbraham and Springfield by doing away with the two crossings of the Boston and Albany tracks some two miles west of that village—one over and the other under the tracks—and carrying the road south of the tracks the entire distance, about a third of a mile. It is understood that the railroad is willing to contribute a neat sum toward the expense of the changes, which should meet the approval of every voter of the town. When these changes are made and the state highway is built over the new route, Wilbraham people will have a drive which few towns of its size can hope to surpass.

NAST is drawing cartoons for the Harpers once more, and his work is as striking as ever. An effective picture appears on the last page of the Weekly for August 3. Since the enforcement of the excise laws in New York city and the practical closing of the saloons there on Sunday, many of the papers have protested loudly against the action, which they claimed was driving thousands of dollars out of the city every Sunday, the Herald of July 10th saying "We're not the only sufferers, though; for the loss goes far beyond us." Nast's drawing represents an archway in the background labeled "Hell Gate," while the closed and locked gate is marked "Brewery;" in the foreground, on the edge of the infernal regions, stands the brewer, with a look of rage on his face, pointing down into the depths, from the smoke of which hands innumerable are reaching up toward him.

THE list of trustees for the new state hospital for consumptives, appointed by the governor, was made public last Friday morning, and before night the business committee of the Palmer Club had written the chairman of the board in regard to Palmer as a possible location for the structure, which is yet to be built, the trustees having to select the site and construct the necessary buildings. Palmer has several sites which would be ideal ones for such a hospital, and the record of deaths in the town shows that it is unsurpassed for general healthfulness. The death rate for the past five years has been less than 2 per cent, while the deaths from consumption have been only about seven-tenths of 1 per cent; this is counting the town as a whole. In the village of Palmer during the past three years (the records do not designate the different villages previous to that) the death rate from consumption has been only slightly over six-tenths of 1 per cent of the deaths occurring in the village. Cases of consumption originating in this village are rare, and asthma is almost unknown. Persons thus affected coming from other localities are invariably benefitted, and many have been induced to take up their residence here on that account. For atmospheric conditions favorable to consumptives, probably no better location could be found in the state than Palmer.

The trouble was all caused because Minnie Dominia's mamma objected to her keeping company with Alfonse. Minnie is 17 and lives in Three Rivers, and her mamma thought she was too young to receive the attentions of Alfonse Dimeaux of the Four Corners; but Minnie and Alfonse thought differently. So Minnie left the maternal roof and her place in the mill and secured employment at Thorndike. Then she went with an officer to get her clothes; but Mamma Dominia said no, and wanted her daughter to come back, which request was declined, if not with thanks at least with emphasis. Then the mother appealed to the strong arm of the law, and Minnie appeared before His Honor in the district court Wednesday as a stubborn child. There she stated that she thought much of Alfonse, who was possessed of a kindred feeling, and coupled her remarks with the assertion that she would have the man of her choice at all hazzards. Mamma Dominia seemed impressed with the ardor of the young people, and evidently thought it would be better to allow the match, for she agreed to offer no opposition after a due period of probation. Minnie promised to return home under those conditions, the court imposed a fine of $5.14, the costs in the case, Alfonse hustled around and secured the needful, and the reunited and happy-all-around familydeparted for home.

Rev. Dr. C. H. Eaton Married.

Rev. Dr. C. H. Eaton of New York, formerly pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church in this place, was married Wednesday noon at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., to Miss Emily Stuart, niece of George M. Pullman. The ceremony was performed in the reception-room of Castle Rest, Rev. J. K. Mason of Buffalo officiating, assisted by Rev. R. H. Pullman of Baltimore. A reception followed the ceremony, and breakfast was served by local caterers Dr. and Mrs. Eaton left in the afternoon on an eastern tour. The wedding was rather a quiet one, on account of the illness of Mrs. George M. Pullman at Long Branch, which also prevented Mrs. Pullman's attendance.

James McLaughlin of Stafford Springs, publisher of the Press at that place, died suddenly of heart failure this morning. He arose apparently as well as usual, but after a few moments fell to the floor and expired at once. Mr. McLaughlin was at one time one of the proprietors of the JOURNAL, being associated with its founder, Gordon M. Fisk. At that time the Stafford News-Letter was published from this office, but it was bought by Mr. McLaughlin and an office established in Stafford, he retiring from the JOURNAL at that time.

A Small Burglary.

Some time Sunday night or Monday morning the Palmer Bakery was entered by someone in search of plunder, but they got little booty for their pains. Entrance was effected through a window on the east side which was open, being protected only by a screen, which was easily removed, and so no damage was done in getting in. A small amount of money was taken, and a quantity of food.

The solicitors for memberships in the cemetery association expect to make the rounds of the village next week. The payment of a dollar makes one a member of the association for one year, but no limit is placed on the amount which individuals may contribute toward the work of the association, which is purely philanthropic, none of the members receiving any recompense for the time they put in. There is much which needs to be done in the cemetery, and it is hoped that the donations will be generous.

A young lady living on Park street noticed when she went to retire Monday night that a man was looking into the window of A. J. Northrop's house; he approached the window several times, and was evidently watching Mr. Northrop, who was in the room reading. As there were no men in the house she waited until the head of the family came home and informed him. An officer was procured, but no trace of the fellow could be found. It is thought that the fellow was looking over the ground with the intention of entering the house later, as Mr. Northrop had been paid a considerable sum of money that afternoon, the payment having been witnessed by others than the parties directly interested.

The loose dirt at the top of Commercial street has been washed down the hill by rains until the roadway at the upper end of the railroad bridge has been filled in at least a foot above the original roadbed. There was never any too much space between the ground and the bridge there, and the present order of things needs attending to at once. It is the old story of carting earth in at the top of the street after a heavy shower, and carting it out from the foot shortly after. Enough money has been expended this way to permanently repair the strip half a dozen times. Why not save money for future time by macadamizing the hill with about six inches of trap rock, after turnpiking it so that the ditches instead of the center of the road shall carry off the water which falls upon it?

In view of the fact that Hi Henry's minstrels will be one of the attractions at the new opera house, it will be of interest to know that this company will travel in a fine new car now being completed, to be called "The Clipper." This car is trimmed outside with solid bronze rails and guards, handsomely flowered and figured, over five hundred pounds of bronze being used. All this work was designed and cast especially for this car. The interior is elegantly fitted in artistic linerusta decorations and panels, in imitation of antique rare woods. Electric bells and speaking tubes connect handsome offices, finished in polished mahogany and cherry. The car is finished in state rooms, each containing four berths, each person having a single berth. Two private baths, a handsome dining room and a perfect cuisine complete the outfit. The parade will be a sensation, all superb gold band instruments and gold canes, everything the property of the management.

The Palmers will be somewhat handicapped in their game with the Thorndikes to-morrow, as two of their players, Holbrook and Murphy, center field and change catcher, are away; in addition it is uncertain whether Doyle can play, as his eye, which he had split in the Thompsonville game, is hardly well enough to admit of his entering the game. The boys will do their best, however. The following will be the make-up of the team, as near as it is possible to tell to-day: Larkin, p.; Grace, c.; Cross, 1b.; Doyle, 2b.; Rooney, ss.; Nelson, 3b.; Roche, lf.; Shearer, cf.; Hastings, rf. A new series of games has been arranged between the Palmers, Thorndikes and Warrens for the championship of Central Massachusetts, and the game to-morrow will be the first of the series. The clubs will play for the best two in three games, the two winning clubs to play one game for the final. The Warrens and Thorndikes have each won a game in the odd series, and will play the final on the grounds here the 17th. The admission to the game here to-morrow will be 15 cents, ladies free.

An accident to the belt on the incandescent dynamo which runs the Warren and Palmer lights deprived these villages of their electricity Monday evening. The belt was a cemented one, 12 inches broad, running at one point within four inches of the floor; the end where it was sliced started up, and it didn't take long for the whole thing to go to pieces, as the dynamo was running about 1070 revolutions a minute. Every time the end which had started up came around and struck the floor the trouble was made worse, and in about five seconds the whole thing was a wreck. A smaller dynamo stood directly in the rear of the one being used, and the end of the belt in its revolutions stripped all the trimmings and projections from this machine as if they had been chaff blown off by the wind; a hole was also knocked through the side of the building back of the pulley on the main shaft, and pieces of splinters from the wood were found 100 feet away showing the immense power of the blows from the broken belt end. J. E. Hancock, the engineer in charge of the works, had been sitting in a direct line with the belt only a moment before it broke, and had a narrow escape, as a slap from the belt would have meant instant death.

District Court.

These civil cases were entered last Saturday: Oliver & Howland of Springfield against George Roberts and trustee of Palmer; First National Bank of Franklinville, N. Y., against G. W. Sherman of Brimfield; both actions of contract.

In the criminal court Saturday John Wright, Jr., paid $5, and his continued case of drunkenness was dismissed; W. H. H. Ryder paid a fine of $5 on a charge of drunkenness which had been hanging over him for the past 18 months, and another of recent date was continued until August 31st; Maxim Poro's term of probation had expired, but as he had recently had a toe amputated which had been frozen last winter, he was again probated, until August 31st. John Woods of Palmer was sent to the state farm at Bridgewater for a year because of drunkenness; he had finished a six-months sentence only a month before, had spent two months in the house of correction previous to that, been fined three times before that and probated once without sentence,—in all seven times,—and the court thought he needed time for reflection.

On Monday Lorenzo Pierce of Monson yielded up $4 for having been drunk, and promised to have the other dollar assessed him in a day or two. Everett Newport of Monson, a gentleman of color with a penchant for having in his possession property belonging to others, was brought from the Springfield jail, where he had just finished a six-months sentence, and charged with stealing a harness from the barn of Isaac Ramsdell; he pleaded guilty to having the harness, but not to stealing it, claiming to have bought it for $1, and exhibited a letter from the seller, dated in Ohio; the court suggested that as the charge was for larcency from a building it was one which could not be sentenced here, but that a plea of guilty to simple larceny would be accepted and sentence passed. Newport was anxious to know what he'd get, but His Honor declined to state, and the prisoner finally pleaded guilty; a fine of $10 was imposed, and the prisoner thought he could raise it, but while on the way back to the cooler concluded that he'd as soon board at the expense of the county in Springfield as hustle for a living during the hot weather, and was brought back for a jail sentence, getting three months.

On Tuesday Cornelius Leary of Thorndike paid $5 for drunkenness. Fred Brown of Three Rivers was charged with failing to support his family, but agreed to pay the costs in the case,—$15.08, —and furnish his family $3 a week.

Yesterday Thomas Cook and his wife were charged with drunkenness, and their cases were continued until the 17th.

Sugrue of the Thorndikes played a splendid game with the Bondsvilles at Pittsfield on Thursday against the crack Stanley team, accepting eleven chances, making one run and two hits, without an error.

The following will constitute the team which Thorndike will present at Palmer tomorrow for the $50 a side game: Dark, c.; Riley, p.; Kelliher, 1b.; Murdock, 2b.; Bourdoro, 3b.; Gay, ss.; Sugrue, lf.; Chapman, cf.; Longtine, rf.; subs, Murphy and Roche.

The biggest bargains in silk waists that we've had to show this season are those top-of-the-style things of silk striped surah at $4.60.

We sold the first lot at $5, thought them as good as any we had seen at $7.50, but they came low enough to go at $5. This last lot is a big one. Had a chance to get them low enough to go at $4.50, and we gobbled up all there was to be had.

We've made a window of 'em—$4.50 as long as they'll last. Better come soon—that's a warning.

The people of Patagonia

are not the ones we wish to talk to, but the people of Palmer and vicinity. This is the picnic season, and our leader just now is Sugar Cookies, four pounds for 25 cents; hardly believe it, can you? we can't ourselves. A rival manufacturer says the maker must have stolen the flour; that's nothing to you as long as the goods are first-class and you get so much for your money.

And right here let us suggest that we carry a couple of dozen kinds of cakes and cookies just the thing for picnics.

If you don't like to bake this hot weather, or run short unexpectedly, we have bread, cake, cookies, etc., fresh every day from the Domestic Bakery at Ware; they're as good as can be constructed; almost like home-made.

If you're canning, we give 20 pounds Revere granulated sugar for your dollar, Have the cans for the fruit, too, and can send 'em up with the sugar; "Mason" and "Lightning" kinds.

25 cents a peck is all we ask for new potatoes.

Lots of other things; glad to show 'em and sell 'em; sell 'em if you want 'em, don't feel hurt though if you look and don't buy.

Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery. Why is Pearline the mark for every soap powder, or so-called washing compound, which is brought out? Everything is called "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline. None of them say "better"—they cannot. They should not say "as good as"—they are not. The simple fact that Pearline is so largely imitated would be enough to prove it the best.

And when a poor washing compound can do so much damage, do you want anything but the best? 369 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

THAT'S QUEER!

You say a collar and cuff that are waterproof?

Yes.

And perspiration will not affect them?

Yes.

And when dirty you need only wipe them off with a wet cloth or sponge?

Yes.

Wonderful! How are they made?

A linen collar covered on both sides with waterproof "CELLULOID." Looks exactly like a linen collar.

Is it the only waterproof collar and cuff made?

No, but it is the only one made with the linen interlining and consequently the only one that can give entire satisfaction, because it is the best.

How can I know that I get the right kind?

Because every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Inquire for that and refuse anything else, or you will be disappointed.

Suppose my dealer does not have them?

He probably has, but if not, send direct to us, enclosing amount. Collars 25c., Cuffs 50c. State size, and whether collar wanted is stand-up or turned-down.

THE CELLULOID COMPANY,
427-29 Broadway, NEW YORK.

"Artemus," she cried, hysterically, "I feel that something has come between us." "Alice," he said, "it is my tooth brush. It's forever getting down in my vest lining."—Detroit Tribune.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily commend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn.

A Summer Medicine.

Unquestionably the only remedy that can be taken safely during the warm weather. Compounded without wine or alcohol and consequently does not heat the blood. Its action is cooling and curative. It will dispel the languid summer feeling and keep you strong and well. By all odds the only medicine that is strictly an all-the-year round remedy.

Specked Apples.

Old Farmer Grump, with thrifty care,
Had safely stored away
For winter use his apple crop—
Enough to last till May.

"We'll not begin," said Farmer Grump,
"To eat 'em yet awhile;
They've got to last the winter through—
There's none too big a pile!"

And so they lay, 'neath lock and key,
Till the ripest showed decay
"Begin on 'em," then the farmer said,
"Begin on 'em ri_ht away!

"We'll kinder sort 'em out," said he,
"And use for sass the wust,
And every one who goes for 'em
Must take the specked ones fust."

And so they used the specked ones first,
As Farmer Grump had said,
But though they ate some every day
The specked ones kept ahead.

And they not only ate them first,
But all the winter through;
If that's their way, I've naught to say,
And naught, I'm sure have you.

Now, Farmer Hearty also had
A well-filled apple bin,
But as he stored them up he said
"Now listen; we'll begin

"To eat the best of 'em right off,
And keep on so each day,
For some of 'em will not keep long,
Though some will last till May."

And so his household, one and all,
Enjoyed the fruit while sound;
And eating still the ripest first,
Had some when May come round.

Now, boys and girls, it's out of date
To hitch a moral on—
I'll leave it to your common sense
To see if there is one.

Young Tutter—"Miss Clara, suppose that to-morrow evening I should call again, and having nerved myself up to it, suddenly, while we were conversing, I should without a word throw my arms around your neck and deliberately kiss you—what would you do?" Miss Pinkerly—"Oh, Mr. Tutter, don't ask me to look so far ahead."—Brooklyn Life.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Last Parade.

I.

They were days to be remembered,
When at sound of trumpet call,
Young recruits we left the village,
Bent on glory one and all.
And the music round us flashing
Made us feel that evermore
Our lives were worth the living
As they never were before.
I remember the day
When we rode all away,
To the dreams that the music made;
And our hopes, one and all,
When the old trumpet call
Rang out clear for our first parade.

II.

It was glorious while it lasted,
But the years went by too soon—
Youth should stay a little longer
When a lad's a bold dragoon.
Then, like shadows from us drifting,
Comrades fell in foreign land;
Home again! the roll call found us
But a broken little band.
As we rode down the street
To the old measured beat
It was tears the music made,
And it seemed like a prayer
For the lads who would ne'er
Stand again by our side on parade!

III.

But the marching days are over
Veterans! now at ease we stand,
Till the order comes for marching
To the last and restful land.
Only when the troops are passing,
Our ninety years we all forget,
And the old familiar music
Makes us feel we're soldiers yet.
And we're young once again
As we hark to the strain,
Till the sounds in the distance a-t;
So we wait one and all
For the last trumpet call
That shall sound for the last parade.

JUST ONCE TOO OFTEN.

The usual little game of poker was running at Schweinmagen's and the players were all betting very freely. An unusually large jack-pot was in the center of the table, and as the cards were being dealt out old Schweinmagen remarked:

"Vell, shentlemans, I guess I'll win dis hot."

It was duly opened, and there was a raise or two all round. Schweinmagen drew one card, another player drew two and two stood pat. The betting was brisk, and every time it came round to Schweinmagen he raised. Suddenly his 4-years-old boy exclaimed:

"Oh, look; pap's got four cards all alike!"

"Shut up your mouth!" roared Schweinmagen, but it was too late. None of the other players would call his last raise. Schweinmagen took the boy upstairs. He returned in five minutes red in the face and resumed the game with the remark:

"You pet, I shank dat poy goot."

Half an hour later, when all were trying to win a big pot, Schweinmagen's 6-years-old girl exclaimed:

"Papa has got four cards and all just alike."

Again every one dropped their hands. Schweinmagen pocketed the cash and the 6-years-old was led upstairs.

When a few minutes later the grocer's 8-years-old son said: "Papa has got four all alike," one of the players studied his hand an unusually long time, scratched his head, studied the grocer's face and then called.

"What have you got?" he demanded.

"What have you got?"

"I called. Show down your hand."

Schweinmagen spread down a pair of deuces. The grocer didn't take the boy upstairs, but whipped him on the spot for lying.

"Dot boy might have fooled some of you shentlemans," he exclaimed.—San Francisco Post.

PAPER SAILS NEXT.

An innovation in yachting circles is now being talked of, nothing less than sails made of compressed paper, the sheets being cemented and riveted together in such a way as to form a smooth and strong seam. It appears that the first process of manufacturing consists in preparing the pulp in the regular way, to a ton of which is added one pound of bichromate of potash, 25 pounds of glue, 32 pounds of alum, 1½ pounds of soluble glass and 40 pounds of prime tallow, these ingredients being thoroughly mixed with the pulp. Next the pulp is made into sheets by regular paper-making machinery, and two sheets are pressed together with a glutinous compound between, so as to retain the pieces firmly, making the whole practically homogeneous.

The next operation is quite important, and requires a specially built machine of great power, which is used in compressing the paper from a thick, sticky sheet to a very thin, tough one. The new, solid sheet is run through a bath of sulphuric acid, to which 10 per cent of distilled water has been added, from which it emerges to pass between glass rollers, then through a bath of ammonia, then clear water, and finally through felt rollers, after which it is dried and polished between heated metal cylinders. The paper resulting from this process is in sheets of ordinary width and thickness of cotton duck; it is easier, air tight, durable, light, and possessed of other needed qualifications to make it available for light sailmaking.

The mode of putting the sheets together is by having a split on the edges of the sheet or cloth, so as to admit the edge of the other sheet. When the split is closed, cemented and rievted or sewed, it closes completely and firmly.

A PROBLEM.—Among the many slaves upon the plantation of a distinguished Southerner during the late war was a blind and decrepit old woman known as Aunt Idy. Aunt Idy, for some reason best known to herself, thought to better her condition by taking the oath of allegiance.

One of the younger members, hearing what had taken place, went to "ole miss" to get the solution, and after being told her friend had sworn to support the Constitution of the United States, exclaimed, "Fo' de Lohd! I don't know how Aunt Idy is gwine to s'port the United States, when she can't s'port herself."—Harper's Magazine.

Tom—"If you had the privilege of kissing a pretty girl on the right or left cheek, which would you do?" Dick—"It would be hard to make a choice, but between the two I should probably find a way out of the dilemma."—Boston Transcript.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with la grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a trial of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A REMEDY AGAINST FLIES.

"I never use window screens," said a wise housekeeper the other day, "because I have a fancy they shut out the air in hot weather, and besides they serve to keep the flies in the house as well as to keep them out."

"But I never see a fly in your house," said her friend. "How do you manage it? For my part, I must confess that, screens or no screens, my summer means to me one long battle with the little pests."

"My remedy is a very simple one," said the good housekeeper, and I learned it years ago from my grandmother, when I used to watch her putting lavender flowers around to keep the flies away. My method is simpler. I buy five cents' worth of oil of lavender and mix it with the same quantity of water. Then I put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the rooms wherever flies are apt to congregate, especially in the dining room, where I sprinkle it plentifully over the table linen. The odor is especially disagreeable to flies, and they will never venture in its neighborhood, though to most people it has a peculiarly fresh and grateful smell."

"I shall certainly give it a trial," said the other woman.

She—"Have you ever been kissed by a girl before?" He (blushing)—"What a question! Of course I haven't."—Judge.

TO TAKE THE BREATH AWAY.

Uncle Jerry Rusk, when Secretary of Agriculture, met a friend in Fifteenth street Washington, one day. The friend looked puzzled and somewhat depressed.

"What's the matter with you?" asked Mr. Rusk.

"I'm in a quandary about an important matter," said the friend. "Maybe you can help me out."

"I don't know," said the friend, "whether I ever told you that I am subject at intervals to the wildest cravings for beefsteak and onions. It has all the characteristics of a confirmed drundard's craving for rum. This craving struck me a few moments ago, and I at once determined to gratify it when dinner time came. Then I suddenly recalled that I had promised to call this evening on some ladies who are here from my home, and I must keep that promise. Yet my stomach is shouting for beefsteak and onions, and I am wavering between duty and appetite."

"Can't you wait until after the call?" asked Uncle Jerry, solicitously.

"Never," said the friend earnestly.

"Can't you postpone the call?"

"Impossible," said the friend.

"Well," said Uncle Jerry, "I'll tell you what to do. When dinner time comes you go up to John Chamberlain's and get your beefsteak and onions, and eat 'em. When you get the check it will be so big that i will take your breath away."

CATARRH

Is strictly a LOCAL DISEASE and is the result of sudden climatic changes.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is acknowledged to be the most thorough cure for Nasal Catarrh, Cold in the Head and Hay Fever of all remedies. It opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils, is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. The results that follow catarrh, due to the dropping of poisonous matter into the throat, are irritation of the bronchial tubes and soreness of the lungs accompanied by a cough. In all such cases we recommend Pineola Balsam to be used in connection with Cream Balm.

PINEOLA COUGH BALSAM will be found excellent for all throat and lung inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their cases to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Price of Cream Balm, 50c per bottle; Pineola Balsam, 25c. In quantities of $2.50 we will deliver free of express or postage on receipt of amount.

Richard or Robin?

The man whose own indomitable will
Can calmly meet an unforseen disaster,
And, single handed, grapple it, until
Triumphantly he crowns himself its master,
Commands our admiration, and presents
"A Man" superior to his accidents.

While he who yields to sensuous inclinations,
Thus deadening all his intellectual gifts,
Will sacrifice his noblest aspirations
As down the stream he indolently drifts,
And they who helped him once his burdens shoulder
Quietly pass him by as they grow older.

The one peers through the clouds with eagle vision,
And gets a glimpse of life beyond the stars;
The other, with idiotic indecision,
Drifts shamelessly behind sin's prison bars.
And thus in contrast these two lives are seen,
One grandly noble, and one abjectly mean.

Thus man, we learn, from these two illustrations,
Can by the power of character control
The scource from which shall come the inspirations
That shall forever save or damn his soul.
It is for us to choose between the two;
What shall the future register for you?

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

VI.

Old Centre Epochs.

THE GENESIS.

During years untold the lordly pines had dominated over the little valley which nestles between King's Hill on the west and Cedar Mountain on the east. Bears and wolves had held their lairs in its coverts, undisturbed as the slow ages passed on. Even the dusky dwellers of the forest seldom or never found their way through this sylvan retreat, for their wily paths led them by routes better suited to their needs. But at last the spell of silence and solitude was broken, when about 1725 white men appeared upon the scene to trace out their claims to lands so long guarded by the untamed prowlers of the wilds.

The new comers wished for ample room, so only four pioneers ventured at first upon the virgin domain, viz: Duncan Quinton, John Moores, James Lamberton and William Crawford. Rude lodges were quickly constructed in a narrow circle within a stone's throw of each other, not far from where the church was afterward erected. They were formed of the rough timber at hand, and served to house the families until the coming sawmill could turn out boards for enclosing. Soon the smoke, as it curled above the treetops, told of a new settlement in the primeval forest. It was not long before these hardy woodsmen had a wide opening, and as soon as the fallen timber could be burned the seed was put in which was to furnish food for the household. The first summer and autumn came and went; the scanty crops were garnered, but the clearing continued to widen and the cheerful sunshine came into nooks where it had not shone for unreckoned years.

There were other settlers within the present precincts of Palmer, but they were scattered and at some distance from these families of whom we are writing, and when the old-time winter swept down with its snows and searching cold, one can well imagine it was not a gala day with our pioneer quartette; but the clearing went steadily on just the same, summer and winter; work, work, as months of heat and cold came and went. It must be hard work for all if plenty was ever to be attained; but the settlement was a fact, a nucleus for the coming Centre.

THE SUPREMACY.

Ten years went by; the cabin of Duncan Quinton had been replaced by a respectable framed house, called a tavern, standing on the present site of the old Frink tavern. It is also probable that the three other neighbors had framed houses furnished with the huge stone chimney and gaping fire-place of those days, for the saw mill at Pottaquattock Pond had begun to furnish boards for building purposes. William Crawford's house stood near where the future meeting-house was placed; James Lamberton's house was just east, on the brow of the hill above the present schoolhouse; and John Moore's house completed the circle near where the road starts for the carpet mill.

Since the coming of the first emigrant—John King, in 1716, the various parts of the district had been filling up, so that in 1735 the settlers numbered some eighty families. During the latter part of this time religious services had been held at the houses of several citizens until it became a burden to them, so it was decided to build a house of worship. Then came the burning question of location; there were as usual in such cases, several rival sites for the meetinghouse, so the people agreed to draw lots to determine the matter. "Then the lotts being made by the clerk, the Rev. Mr. Harvey was sent for; and then voted, that the Rev. Harvey shall draw the lott, and the spot which is entered upon the lott or paper which he shall draw, shall be the determinall spott whereon to set the meetinghouse. After solemn prayer Mr. Harvey drew the lott, whereon the spot on the knowl near Crawford's house was entered." This decision determined the future of our little settlement for many coming years. The Old Centre was now a fact in name as well as in position. The little meeting-house was built and dedicated in 1735, and became the one religious center of the Elbow district. It was 30x36 feet, one story high, severely plain, without ornamentation save a large board in the gable with a typical device. This house also became the place for town meetings, for it was the property of the town.

About 1737 the Centre had a new comer in the person of John Thompson, who built a second tavern just south of Quinton's, which soon became a popular resort at the time of the town meetings and during the noon intermissions on Sunday in the cold season, for there was no means of warming the church.

Time wore on apace; new families were slow in coming; even the schoolhouse did not materalize until 1764; the minister, in the persons of John Harvey and Robert Burns, lived six miles away to the east, and Mr. Baldwin for fifty years lived in the east part of our present village. Green fields of grass and grain and other crops waved over the little village of the Centre while they waited for the populous village to come, which never came. The dark days of the Revolution came and went, during which the Palmer people met often in the little meetinghouse to vote men and means for the cause. Our John Thompson of tavern fame became a captain in the army and deserved well of his country, but before the close of the century his hostelry had gone to ruin and his family moved away; the Quinton tavern still survived, but the pioneers whom we first introduced had gone to their rest in the cemetery in the rear of the meetinghouse, and their places were occupied by others.

In the closing years of the last century a new era seemed to have dawned upon the Old Centre, and many thought the dream of earlier days was about to be realized. Actuated by this spirit of revival the little old meetinghouse was discarded and a new and commodious church was erected in 1798. The real cause of the revival of prosperity at the Old Centre was the inauguration of the first turnpike in Massachusetts, extending from Warren to Wilbraham through the Old Centre in 1796. For many years prior to this the same route had been used by post riders from Boston to New York; but now, when the road had been put into condition for stages, a new impetus was given to enterprise. In 1795 the old Quinton tavern gave place to the new one, since known as the Frink tavern, and about 1800 Asa Ward built another tavern on the opposite corner, where Mr. Samuel Brown now lives. About 1790 William Tupper opened the first store of which we have an account, followed by Converse Brothers, who sold out to Hamilton & Upham, later Hamilton (Col. Amos); this store was located where Mr. Thornhill now lives.

Col. Hamilton became a man of wealth for these days; soon after 1800 he built the house where Mr. Naylor lived. At first the stock in trade at the store consisted of common groceries,—including rum,—and in later years a few varieties of dress goods. It is said that when a lady came to examine the dress patterns Col. Hamilton would point with his yardstick to the different goods, asking if that or that suited, but would not take down a piece to be examined, and if nothing suited he would say, "Well, I can keep it if you do not like." His was then the only store nearer than the one in Monson, so he could affect to be independent. About 1805 Theophilus Knight built the house where Mr. Horace Hamilton now lives. The little townhouse about twenty-five feet square was built in 1805 and given to the town by Aaron Merrick, and was located where the schoolhouse now stands. The post-route was established about 1805, and the post office in Palmer established with Col. Hamilton as postmaster, which office he held many years. In 1804 the Old Centre was favored with another turnpike extending from Norwich to Athol. In 1824 T. B. Knight added another store, which stood in the right corner of the road as you go to the carpet mill, which he continued in company later with John Ward till the decline of the prosperity at the Centre. Deacon Ralph Green, a cabinetmaker, came in 1814; among other articles he made coffins, and supplied the town with that article for many years; they were made of pine boards, painted and varnished, and were sold for two or three dollars; on the occasion of the death of Col. Hamilton he made a coffin of black walnut and charged the unheard-of sum of eight dollars, which amount astonished people as a great extravagance. Moses Barnes located opposite the present house on the poor farm, and made shoes for Palmer people. About 1815 Joseph Moody located at the Centre in the present Naylor house, and made saddles and harnesses. Anson Moody was the first physician to establish the practice of medicine at the Centre, which he did in 1819 or earlier and lived where Dr. King afterwrads located, followed by Dr. Aaron King in 1824. Dr. King remained in practice till his death in 1861, at the Centre. For many years Asa Ward was the resident sheriff there; he was noted for his cleverness, and woe betide the unlucky wight who fell into his hands. He was famous for collecting debts. At that time the law allowed a man one hog exempt from attachment; Ward was given a bill to collect for a man who had no visible property subject to attachment, but he had a fine fat hog, so Ward persuaded him to accept a small pig as a gift from himself. The next day Ward placed an attachment on the hog, as he then had two of the sawie persuasion, and by this shrewd move collected the debt. The only lawyer who practiced his profession at the Centre was James Stebbins, who graduated at Williams College in 1807 and came to the Center in 1813, remaining there till 1835; his office was opposite the store of Mr. Knight. The earliest carpenter of whom we have any account at the Centre was Moses Shaw son of Deacon Joshua, who married in 1797 and worked there at his trade for many years. About 1830 John Barber had a blacksmith shop at the Center, near the Davenport Shaw house.

It was from 1830 to 1839 that the Old Centre enjoyed its greatest degree of prosperity. People who owned the real estate there did not care to sell unless they could realize a large price. The turnpike from east to west and north to south was alive with the coming and going of stages each day; often there were nearly a dozen stages in line from Boston. The taverns were crowded with guests, business was booming, and the prospect was fair that the Old Centre would hold its supreme position in Palmer for many years to come.

The Old Centre, as well as the rest of Palmer, had little in the way of amusements save the spring and fall training, but in 1835 the first circus came to the Centre and pitched its tent on the fields north of the church; old people who recall the occasion say it was a great day for Palmer; the Centre was thronged by our own townsmen and those from all the surrounding towns. The crowning attraction besides the wild animals was the equestrian feats of Lady Banks, who astonished everybody by her wonderful performances. Occasionally for a dozen years after this the circus enlivened the Centre. There was one event, which occurred during the pastorate of Mr. Baldwin, which I had nearly overlooked. The notorious Stephen Burroughs was granted the privilege of preaching one Sunday; he was dressed in scarlet and made a dashing apperance. Miss Polly King, then, a spruce maiden lady, afterwards related that she was so struck with his appearance that in trying to rearrange her bonnet she thrust the pin through a portion of the skin on her neck, but she sat through the service and then when she withdrew the pin considerable blood came with it, but she was bound to look smart in the presence of such a remarkable man. The true character of Burroughs was revealed not long after, when the Palmer maidens no longer sighed for him.

THE EXODUS.

There came a day when all the wheels of life seemed to stand still at the Old Centre. The denizens of the little hamlet listened in vain for the accustomed winding of the stageman's horn from the valley of Cedar Mountain brook the echos were silent which so often had voiced the coming and going of the full-freighted stages. The new factor, steam, had entered into the system of transportation and operated on a new route, leaving the Old Centre in the cold. This first blow to the prosperity of the Center came in 1839, when the Western Railroad was opened through the southern part of the town, when its business interests began at once to be affected, for stores and taverns were opened in each of the new villages, as well as post offices. Neither was the Centre any longer the sole religous point of interest, for in 1832 a Baptist church had been established in Three Rivers, and in 1847 a second Congregational church had been organized at the Depot village and the First church had removed to Thorndike, leaving the Centre church, which had been used since 1735, desolate. The Knight store was vacated and moved to Thorndike about 1848, was for many years occupied by E. G. Murdock. Mr. E. Brown bought the old Hamilton store of the heirs and put in a stock of groceries about 1846, and conducted business there about a year, but finding the tide had turned in another direction he moved the store to Thondrike and converted it into a tenement house; it is now owned by a Mr. Riley, leaving but a small ell of the store at the Centre. Moses Barnes moved his house to Thorndike, where it still remains. The Ward tavern, then occupied by Rufus Fuller, was burned May 30, 1848, and he bought the old town house which had been vacant since 1846, when the new one was built at Four Corners, and converted it into a dwelling house by making additions, placing it on the site of the old tavern. The ell of the Frink tavern was cut off and moved out beside the road to Palmer, and was for a long time the residence of Mr. Warriner. One of the wings of the Frink tavern was moved away and is now the residence of Mrs. Burpee. The Lawyer Stebbins office was moved to the Depot village and became the office of Judge Allen, and is now the salesroom of the bakery on Church street. Two other dwelling houses were moved by Elisha Converse to the Depot village, one now being occupied by Mr. Shumway, and the other by Timothy Fuller on School street. John Barber, the blacksmith, moved his business to Thorndike.

Thus as early as 1850 town and church affairs and business had been transferred to other parts of the town. Burdened with all these adverse circumstances the Old Centre seemed relegated to the dead past. Dr. King, however, remained on the old homestead till the close of his busy life, and for a short time religious worship was revived at the old church when the Catholics dedicated it for their use, to serve them until better quarters could be secured; then the old church was forsaken forever and fell a prey to ruin, and was finally sold at auction and torn down, which fate closed the tragedy of the exodus.

THE PRESENT.

Standing on the brow of the hill where 165 years ago the home of James Lamberton was located, a scene of peace and rural quiet lies spread out before us; green fields wave in the breeze as they have done for five generations. Just before us reposes the schoolhouse, one of the last of its class in our rural districts; near at hand is the whilom town house, with additions, long the home of Rufus Fuller, Robert McMaster, Lambert Allen, and the present owner, Samuel Brown; to the south lives Timothy Crimmins, where Rev. Mr. Backus and Rev. M. K. Cross resided during their pastorates here. Down on the Palmer road Lawrence Brothers occupies the once ell part of the Frink tavern; next comes the old Davenport Shaw house, once the parsonage, where pastors Sweet and Ware lived, now occupied by St. John; on the opposite side Daniel Crimmins lives; the next house is Daniel Mahoney's; then comes Mr. Thornhill's store and residence, standing on the site of the old Hamilton store; the next building contains the one industry of the Old Centre of to-day, the wagon shop of Packard Trumble, once the building where Frink housed the stages; Packard Trumble's residence is in the rear of this shop. We next see the historic Frink tavern, now owned by Alfred Trumble, retired on its laurels of a hundred years. The next house was once the cabinet shop of Deacon Green, and later of Joel Stebbins, now the house of Mrs. Rufus Bacon; then comes the present elegant home of John Newman, pleasant for situation, overlooking the reposeful scene of the Old Centre. This house was built in the most substantial manner by Deacon Ralph Greene about 80 years ago, and has recently been handsomely refitted by the present owner. Mr. Newman is quite a connoisseur in art, and has decorated his walls with many fine specimens from local and other artists. Mrs. Burpee lives in what was once one of the wings of the Frink tavern, with Richard Wright for next neighbor. Across the street from the Frink house resides Horace Hamilton in the time-honored Knight homestead, while its twin counterpart is occupied by William Smith; Mr. Corey is spending his declining years at the next door; the ruins of the once pleasant King homestead meet us next, with nothing but the outbuildings and the ancient kitchen to remind us of the past; just beyond is the old homestead of Dr. Moody, the first resident physician of the Centre, now occupied by Reuben Lamb; beyond, encircled with green fields, smiles the new and pleasant home of Horace Stimson, which has arisen phenix-like from the ashes of the olden home. Last, but not least, beyond the crowns of crumbling gravestones we discern the home provided by the town for those whom Dame Fortune has deserted, presided over with such tact and success by Warden Lent.

Thus ends our survey of the living present of the Old Centre, but as we cast a lingering look to the right God's Acre comes to view, reminding us of the long list of Palmer's sons and daughters who repose there—ministers and physicians, and men who fought in the wars of Colonial, Revolutionary and Rebellion times, and women who staid at home and toiled to keep their husbands and sons in the field till peace should be declared. They all rest there together, men titled and untitled, who deserved well of their posterity, in graves overgrown with brush and trees, a sad commentry on the neglectful present. May the new century usher in a sentiment born of patriotism, which shall not leave a patriot's grave unmarked by honored remembrance, or left to sadden the beholder with neglect.

THE THREAT HAD NO TERROR.

A young minister settled over a small country parish was instructed by his parishioners to procure a piano for their use. He did so, telling the dealer to charge the bill for rental to the secretary of the parish. When the bill amounted to $25, the society being unable to pay it, as well as the salary of the pastor, the music dealer dunned the minister for the money, telling him that he assumed the responsibility. The latter replied that he never assumed the responsibility of another, having all he could do to pay his own bills, whereupon the dealer threatened to sue him.

A short time after, our friend received a letter from a New York collection agency, to which, as well as several following, he paid no attention, until the following short but definite letter came:—

"Dear Sir: Unless you remit at once we shall publish you all over the country as a Delinquent Debtor."

To which he replied:—

"Gentlemen: Ever since I entered the ministry I have been struggling for the title of D. D. Go ahead."—Boston Budget.

HE KNEW HOW A WOMAN THROWS. The small son and heir had been sent into the garden to fetch a stick with which he was to be punished. After some delay he returned, saying, with a sigh, "Couldn't find a stick, mover; but here's a little stone you might frow at me."—Editor's Drawer, Harper's Magazine.

"What was that explosion I heard a few moments ago?" asked the head of the house. "One of Miss Charlott's pneumatic sleeves was blown up too tight and burst, sir," replied the servant. "I've just telephoned for two surgeons, the ambulance and seven reporters."—Judge

Maud Muller—Up to Date.

Maud Muller, on a summer day,
Calmly fanned the flies away.

The judge came riding down the road
And checked his horse near Maud's abode.

"How is it, Maud," he slowly spake,
"That you are out without a rake?

"Why don't you do as in the lay,
And 'rake the meadow sweet with hay'?"

"The meadow, hay and even the rake,"
She sighed, "are but the poet's fake.

"We fin de siecle maids, I wot,
Rake nothing but our Psyche knot."

The judge, with idol smashed in twain,
Proceeded on the road again.

AN INTERESTING CORNER OF THE WORLD.

Lake St. John, and Roberval, P. Q.

ROBERVAL, LAKE ST. JOHN, P. Q., July 31, 1895.

Editor Journal:—Some time since there appeared in your columns a very interesting letter upon the "Saguenay." Since noticing it I have had the trip on my mind, and this year determined to see for myself and not take a letter as the only means of information. So we covered the trip and find all you said to be true and much more, for words make very poor pictures of the vast and rugged beauties of the Saguenay. No one can tell how beautiful and grand it is,—nature and nature alone.

You have told this story so much better than I can that I will leave it, but as I do not remember that you wrote of Lake St. John and Roberval, I will tell a little of what is here,—a long lake about 25 miles in diameter, at the head of the Saguenay river and about 200 miles north of Quebec, quite the limit of civilization. Nothing north but Indian hunting grounds, about which I will write more soon. A very fertile soil, but so short a season that the crop is limited mostly to oats, wheat and potatoes. It must have been very nearly uncivilized before the Quebec & Lake St. John Railroad was built here; now there are some few signs of civilized life, but not many. A few new houses have been built in something of the modern style, and a lumber mill erected on the lake, which with the hotel recently built by the railroad makes all there is here at all modern. All else is one-story, mostly unpainted, log huts, skirting the south shore of the lake for some 20 or 30 miles. There are several very large stone and wooden churches, disproportionately elegant compared with the surroundings; a few convent schools, and lately I understand some government schools. This covers the various items that go to make up this section of the world, but if one has a little appreciation of nature in her quietest and most primitiev moods, almost untouched by art of man and his life, then a walk a half-mile or so to the north to a little eminence gives a wonderfully extended and beautiful view of the lake and the mountains skirting the horizon. As we saw it to-day, alternating between sunshine and shower,—bright and sparkling at one time, then inky black,—we could not repress exclamations of wonder and surprise, and when we thought that beyond was a vast wilderness, we were just a little awed by the feeling of the immensity of nature and the extensive plain upon which worlds are built.

But about the Indians. We took a stroll of about five miles northward to the Indian reservation. These lands,—for about four miles on the lake front, running back three miles,—are reserved for a tribe called Montagnais Indians. Then go north in the winter and hunt and trap, and return in the spring with their furs. They are fitted out by the Hudson Bay Company in the summer, and in about a month they go north; on their return the Company takes their furs, and what is due the Indians above the amount furnished the fall before is then paid in cash or supplies from the store.

We visited the station of the Company and were much entertained by the agent, a Scotchman named Thomas Rose, who exhibited some trained dogs and muskrats. The muskrats were not very well trained, and bit the man somewhat severely, but he seemed to be much interested in them, and I suppose they must be much company during the long winter. This agent had one clerk and one servant,—no family,—and was expected to be at his post the year around. We did not apply for his job.

There was a government school which interested the teacher in our party very much. She went in and examined the school as well as she could, there being no English spoken. She tried to talk with the teacher a little, and reported some evidence of modern methods in the school.

There were services being held in the English church by a missionary, who comes a few times during the summer while the Indians are on the reservation. We attended and were much interested. The services were the usual Episcopal services, and for the sermon a bright looking elderly Indian acted as interperter and repeated it to the Indians in their language. We were much interested, and voted this one of the most interesting days of our trip. As the rain was beginning to come more frequently we could not face the walk of five miles back very well, and so our host, the genial Scotchman, arranged for a carriage for us to the hotel. The carriage, too, was a feature of this section,—a two-seated buckboard with a carriage top over the rear seat,—called a caleche.

The time for the train approaches, and with reluctance we leave this interesting corner of the world, and shall carry with us many memories of this interesting borderland of civilization. W. W. L.

PALMER NEWS.

A YOUNG LADY DROWNED.

The Body of Miss Emma Buell Found in the Quaboag Near Three Rivers Last Saturday.

About 3 o'clock last Saturday afternoon the body of Miss Emma Buell of Newton was found in the Quaboag river near Three Rivers by Willie Squires, Philip Story and Fred White, who were searching for it. Miss Buell had been a guest at the home of O. B. Sikes, and had been missed about nine o'clock in the forenoon, indications leading her friends to think that her body might be found in the river. Whether her death was accidental or the result of suicide will never be known, though if the latter it must have been done while mentally unbalanced. Miss Buell was about 30 years old, and formerly lived in Three Rivers, her father being paymaster for the Otis Company in their mill. Mr. Buell was advanced to the position of auditor for the Bliss Fabyan Co., and moved his family to Springfield, later going to Newton. Miss Buell was a graduate of Monson Academy, class of '84, and then attended the school for kindergarten teachers in New Haven; she also taught for a while in that city. About six years ago she suffered an attack of typhoid malaria, and nearly lost her life; she had never been well since, although she taught for a time in Woburn and Boston, but for the past two years had been unable to teach. Something like a year ago she suffered another illness.

About two weeks ago Miss Buell came to Mr. Sikes's to see if the change would not benefit her health, and on Thursday of last week wrote her parents a most cheerful letter, stating that she was feeling stronger, that her appetite was increasing, and that she would like to stay there all summer. On Friday evening there were callers at the house and Miss Buell did not go to her room until between nine and ten. She had been in the habit of sleeping late mornings, and so when she did not appear at breakfast nothing was thought of the matter until about nine o'clock, when Mrs. Sikes thought she would see if the young lady was ill, as she had complained considerably about her head the day before. She went to Miss Buell's room and found that she was not there and that the bed had not been occupied, although it was thrown open, and evident preparations for retiring had been made. Search was at once made, and a track was found leading across the field toward the river, to a point Miss Buell had visited the day before. Here the grass was matted down as if some one had sat there a considerable time, Miss Buell's handkerchief was found near by, and there were marks of shoe heels on the edge of the bank, where some one had slipped into the water. The water here is about four feet deep close to the shore, and deepens rapidly, the current being quite swift and the bank steep. Agent Newell of Three Rivers was at once notified, and the river was searched with grappling hooks, but the body was found floating about a mile further down stream. Mr. Buell was telephoned to at Boston, and reached Palmer on the 1.17 p. m. train.

In Miss Buell's room the door leading from the sitting room to the chamber, which was the one commonly used, was closed. Another door communicated with the parlor, and had a commode set against it. This had been opened during the day for the purpose of airing the room, but had been closed again and the commode moved back into position. This had been moved, however, and the door into the parlor was slightly open. From the parlor a door leads out of doors. This had been locked, and a screen door hooked on the inside; both were unlocked, and it was evident that Miss Buell had left the house by this way. After reaching her room she had changed a pair of low shoes for high boots and rubbers, and had thrown a cape over her shoulders, but wore no hat. Only two theories can be advanced. One is that on account of the trouble in her head she thought she would go out and get the fresh air, and that after sitting for a time by the river bank she arose to return to the house and slipped on the edge of the steep bank and fell in, being unable to get out; the other is that the trouble in her head increased in intensity until, in a fit of temporary insanity she took her own life. That she could have committed the deed unless insane is scouted by all who knew her. The funeral was held Monday, the burial being in Oak Grove cemetery in Springfield.

Palmer's Chances for a State Road.

Chairman George A. Perkins and Mr. McClintock of the state highway commission came to Palmer Tuesday morning to look over the strip on which it is hoped they will decide to build a section of state road. They were met at the station by Selectmen Twiss and Brainerd, County Commissioner Brainerd, District Attorney Gardner, Town Counsel Kenefick, Judge Robinson and others, and a barge was taken for a trip over the road. As none of the state road is built in the villages, the plan as drawn by the county commissioners contemplates the beginning of the road at Pearl street on Park, and continuing east to the Warren line. It is the two miles east from Pearl street which it is hoped the state commission will grant the town of Palmer. A ride to the Cooley Crossing bridge over the railroad tracks was had, Messrs. Perkins and McClintock making many inquiries as to the present nature of the roadbed, the abundance of material for the construction of the road, the amount of travel over it, etc., and taking notes of all they saw and heard. Some of the teams which do the trucking for the Wales mills were met en route, and a fair specimen of the heavy travel was thus seen. Returning to the rooms of the Palmer Club the matter was discussed somewhat, and then the commissioners took the 10.22 train for Wilbraham, where it is proposed to build a section of road.

It is understood that Palmer's chances of getting a strip of state road this year are not of the best. The money at the disposal of the commission is all appropriated, and they some time ago decided to build the strip in Wilbraham, commencing at the Springfield line. It has been said that the selectmen of Wilbraham wished to have the matter put off until another year, until certain changes in the highway could be made, and if they are anxious for this Palmer may get a piece of road after all, the commissioners stating that if the Wilbraham piece was not built this year there is no reason why work could not be begun at once on the Palmer strip. At a town meeting in Wilbraham yesterday it was voted not to contract with the state for the construction of the road. While this will not necessarily prevent the building of the road, it may have some effect on the commissioners, and Palmer's chances are no worse than before. One thing Palmer has the promise of, and that is two miles of state road next year if none is built this.

The Thorndikes Win.

The long-looked-for game of ball between the Palmers and Thorndikes took place last Saturday, and the Palmers were not in it. They put up a horrible exhibition of the national game, Doyle's playing being particularly pathetic; he seemed utterly unable to get his hands on the ball and make them stay. The Thorndikes were first at the bat and scored one run, which was tied by the Palmers in their half. Thorndike got another run in the third, four in the fourth, one in the fifth and four in the sixth; then they took a rest until the ninth, when by a bunching of hits and a multiplicity of errors on the part of the Palmers they scored nine runs, all of the team getting a run except Bordoro, and Longtine getting two. After the first Palmer did not score until the fifth, when five runs were secured, nearly tying the score; five more came in the ninth, but the lead was too great to be overcome. The full score:

Gay Times at Forest Lake.

Forest Lake has been a jolly place during the past week, a large number of young people being in camp there. At one cottage are Miss Rogers of Palmer, Miss Peabody of Washington, D. C., two Misses Richmond of Indian Orchard, Miss Harvey of Winsted, Ct., and Miss Wassum of Palmer; at another are Misses Effie and Annie Shaw of Palmer, Misses Mabel and Nellie Smith of Forest Lake, Miss Dickinson of Springfield, Messrs. Harry and Albert Shaw and Freeman Smith; W. E. and J. A. Breckenridge of Palmer, Mr. Peterson of Springfield, Mr. York of Winsted, Ct., Mr. Gay of Belchertown, Homer Beebe of Monson and Messrs. Frank and Fred Edgell occupy another; Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Flynt and Miss Hattie, with three younger children, are at another cottage, while on "Fish's Point" are Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. Hendee, Miss Hendee, Misses Blanche and Phoebe Hastings, Miss Helen Converse and Calvin Hastings of Palmer, while George Holden, Guy Stanchfield and Edwin Gardner have been spending the nights there. The moonlight nights of the past week have been most delightful for boating, and the party have spent many hours on the water. Monday evening the boats were taken over to the river and eighteen floated down to Thorndike. Tuesday evening Miss Shaw gave a quiz party in the casino, J. E. Breckenridge winning the first prize and Freeman Smith the booby. Wednesday evening there was a sewing and hair-curling match for the gentlemen, they also taking part in a relay race in skirts; Fred Edgell proved the most expert in the sewing contest, Mr. Beebe carried off the honors at hair curling, and Frank Edgell won the relay race. Last evening the gentlemen gave a german, and served light refreshments.

The Merchants' Excursion.

The committee appointed by the Palmer Club to arrange for an excursion and picnic of the townspeople have perfected plans for a day's outing at Watch Hill on Tuesday, the 20th. A special train will leave Palmer at 7.50 a. m., running to New London without stops, thus making the trip an unusually comfortable one. At New London the excursionists will take the fine steamer Block Island—which will be reserved for the Palmer party that day, no other excursion being taken—for Watch Hill, a delightful sail of an hour and ten minutes, arriving there at 10.55. Four hours and a half—until 3.30 p. m.—will be spent there, giving ample time for examining the beauties of the place, salt water bathing, and the procuring of a shore dinner. Returning the boat reaches New London at 5, and a special train will at once bring the party home, arriving about 7.30. The fare for the round trip will be only $1; children half price. It has been arranged to take in the other villages of the town, and the rate from Three Rivers and Bondsville will be the same as from Palmer. Excursionists from Bondsville will take the regular train at Barrett's Junction at 7.15, and those from Three Rivers the regular train there at 7.18, then taking the special at Palmer. Thorndike people will take the regular train in the morning to Palmer, and at night a special train will be run from Palmer to Thorndike on the return of the excursion train; the fare from Thorndike will be $1.18. A canvass of the business places in this village has been made, and all the merchants save one have agreed to close their stores all day the 20th. This should assure a large number on the excursion, and with pleasant weather no doubt a most enjoyable time will be had.

Lord in Trouble Again.

Ernest M. Lord of Three Rivers, who a short time ago was found guilty of illegally keeping liquor, is once more in the toils of the law. Deputy Sheriff Studley visited his place last Saturday night, armed with a search warrant. Nothing was found in the room occupied by Lord with his bar and pool table. The basement of the block, originally one room, has been divided by a board partition into two rooms, and a doorway placed opposite the end of Lord's bar originally connected the two. This doorway has been sheathed up with pine sheathing, but in looking it over the officer found a loose panel, about three or four inches wide by a foot long. Taking hold of it he found that it would easily come out, and inquired who occupied the other room; Lord said that Mrs. C. Consigney lived there, and the officer thought he would give her a call. When he approached the building there was a bright light in this part, but now all was dark, and it was a long time before he could arouse anyone. He finally managed to, however, and a small boy appeared at the door. He was told what was wanted and the officer stepped into the room. On a bed on the floor beside the door before spoken of lay Mrs. Consigney, who pretended at first to be asleep, and then objected to being aroused; but she was made to get up, and a search of the bed revealed a gallon jug half full of whisky under her pillow.

A Christian Endeavor excursion, under the auspices of the Willimantic Christian Endeavor Union, will be run over the New London Northern road on Saturday of next week to Watch Hill and Block Island, from Brattleboro and stations south to Willimantic. A special train will leave Palmer at 7 a. m., and the fare for the round trip will be $1.35.

The members of the Palmer Cemetery Association are requested to meet the selectmen in the reference room of the public library next Monday evening at 7.30, in reference to the proposed addition to the cemetery. A plan of the proposed addition, on a new basis from that at first offered, will be ready for inspection.

One of Palmer's young men went to Brimfield one evening last week to escort a young lady bicyclist to Palmer. When half way back the tire of the lady's wheel collapsed and the young man carried the wheel to this place, the lady meanwhile pushing her escort's wheel, as she wasn't attired in the bloomer costume and couldn't ride the diamond frame wheel.

A Palmer young man who went to Springfield to work in a printing office remained there just half a day. He dropped a form during the forenoon, making the proverbial "pi" of the whole matter, and had to get some of the other hands to reconstruct it for him. When he returned at noon he announced that he had received a letter stating that his mother had broken a leg and that he was needed at home.

The cemetery association has arranged to have the fallen and unlevel headstones in the cemetery straightened up, and workmen are now employed on the job. Many of the stones had become partially or wholly tipped over, the majority of such however being in the old part of the ground, and in many instances there are no relatives left to look after the matter. Some filling in of paths has also been done, and low places on lots have been graded up.

A Palmer young lady got rather the best of a would-be "masher" at a summer resort a few days ago. She was visiting friends in the place, and while walking alone one day passed the hotel, on the piazza of which were a number of young men. Her dog had accompanied her on her stroll, and just about this time she missed him, so whistled to call him. One of the young men approached and remarked: "Did you call me, Miss?" "No, I whistled for another puppy," was the quick reply.

John Cobleigh, a veteran of the late war, died at his home on Thorndike street Sunday at the age of 55 from cancer of the face and neck. He enlisted in the 51st Massachusetts Regiment from Southbridge, where he was born. He was a member of L. L. Merrick Post of the Grand Army, and had lived in Palmer for a number of years. He leaves a widow and two daughters, one living in Brimfield and the other in Warren, also a sister, Mrs. Craw, of Palmer, and a brother in Connecticut. The funeral was held Monday in charge of the Grand Army, and burial was at the Four Corners.

At a meeting of some of the agricultural society directors yesterday afternoon it was decided to increase some of the premiums offered on horses, as follows: Pairs of draft horses weighing over 2500 pounds, from $4 and $3 to $10, $6 and $4; pairs farm or work horses, from $4, $3 and $2 to $10, $6, $4 and $2; pairs matched carriage horses, from $4, $3 and $2 to $10, $6, $4 and $2; single carriage horses, from $3, $2 and $1 to $6, $4 and $2. This increase in premiums it is hoped will be productive of a larger show of horses in these classes than in past years.

The regular monthly meeting of the Business and Social Club was held last Friday evening, and one new member was admitted. The membership is limited to 100, and there are nearly enough applications now in to reach that number. The business committee of the club made a report, showing that it had been doing some work among manufacturers and others who might be induced to locate in Palmer. The matter of a general picnic of the merchants of the place was discussed, and a committee consisting of D. L. Bodfish, C. T. Brainerd, J. A. Hawkes, W. R. Milligan and A. E. Fitch appointed to make arrangements for such an outing at Watch Hill on the 20th.

For some time complaints have come to the selectmen of the dangerous character of the highway at Blanchardville, where it passes under the railroad tracks. The cut is so deep and the tracks curve so at that point that it is almost impossible for a traveler to tell when a train is coming, and one is liable to shoot out over the unwary at any moment and without the slightest warning. The selectmen on Monday visited the officials of the railroad to see if arrangements could not be made to have a gong at either end of the cut, some distance from the bridge, which shall sound some little time before the arrival of trains at the bridge. No decision was reached in the matter.

The occupants of two carriages returning from the ball game last Saturday afternoon got to racing their horses on South Main street, and when passing over the railroad bridge one attempted to pass the other on the right, the result being that the carriage slid down the incline coming off the bridge and struck the curbing in front of Mrs. Lawrence's residence; the three occupants of the carriage went out as if hurled from a catapult, and those who witnessed the accident thought they must be badly hurt at least, but they picked themselves up and proceeded to take the carriage—which by the way had three wheels left—to the repair shop, one holding up one end of the axle, one drawing the vehicle, while the other followed with the horse.

E. D. Tufts of Palmer and Eugene Shaw of Monson made the trip to Boston and return on a tandem Tuesday. The attempt was to make the trip in 24 hours, and they succeeded in getting through in 21, the start being made at 3 o'clock Tuesday morning, Palmer being reached again at midnight. They rode a Rambler wheel, fitted with two-inch tires. A saddle gave out at West Brookfield on the down trip, and the rider had to make the best of the saddle post to Spencer, where the damage was repaired after some delay. Then a detour of about five miles had to be made there on account of repairs to the highway. At Framingham the wrong road was taken, so the cyclometer registered 101 miles before they reached Boston and dinner, at just noon. After a rest of two hours the start on the home trip was made. About 180 miles was covered on the trip.

There was a merry time in Harwood's Central street restaurant yesterday noon with Sam Ferry's large pointer dog. The animal strolled in and wandered out into the kitchen, where a cat with a family was located. The maternal instinct for the protection of its offspring was strong in the feline breast—or some other portion of the animal's anatomy,—and it landed on the dog's back with all claws sharpened and in working order. The dog was naturally somewhat surprised, and made a sudden dash for the open; it didn't matter that the screen door was not open when he started, it was soon, for the dog went straight against it and took it along with him into the street, disconnecting the hinges from their fastenings by the impetuosity of his movements. There he left it and departed for safer quarters with somewhat diminished by no less evident haste.

S. W. Stanchfield received severe injuries to his back Tuesday evening by being thrown from a wagon while returning from the poor farm, where he was at work. When nearly opposite the house of Michael Woods the kingbolt of the wagon broke and threw him forward; the horse jumped before Mr. Stanchfield struck the ground, and as he held to the reins it twitched him so that he fell on his back on a heap of stones. He was badly hurt, but clung to the reins until the horse reached the house of Otto Smith, where the animal was stopped. Mr. Stanchfield then attempted to rise but found that he had lost the use of his limbs. Mr. S. Leach fortunately came along just then and with his assistance Mr. Stanchfield was gotten into the wagon and brought to his home. It was at first thought that he had sustained internal injuries, but fortunately he did not, and though pretty lame for a day or two will be about again in a short time.

Austin of New York; Fred W. Thompson against W. P. Hegeman of Palmer; John Wilson of Three Rivers against George P. and Mary B. Bell of Three Rivers; F. F. Marcy against the same defendants. A default was entered against the defendant and trustee in the case of Oliver & Howland of Springfield against George Roberts of Palmer.

He had a permit from the county commissioners allowing him to be at liberty during the remainder of the time for which he was sentenced. There is a statute providing that where a man is imprisoned for non-payment of a fine, if the imprisonment is over three months he must at the expiration of the time be brought before the court and be discharged; if the time is less than three months no action by the court is necessary.

The Thorndike Ball Club Objects.

Editor Journal:—The recent challenge made by the Palmer base ball club to us through the columns of the Springfield Union has come to our notice, and we wish to make a few remarks in reply.

Before the recent game with Palmer, which was for $50 a side and which we won, we had played them two games, winning and losing both games on their grounds. In trying to arrange a final we were informed—by no means politely—by their manager that we were "too cheap a team for his club to play." Then as we noticed that they were to play another club for the championship of Central Massachusetts, and feeling that it was first necessary to defeat us, we challenged them to play for $50. We were then told that it was necessary for us to bring our money to Palmer before anything could be done. We did so, and played the game on their ground. Now that we have played the final game and won,—slow though they be admit such a thing,—if they wish to play again it will be necessary for them to bring to Thorndike as much money as they are willing to risk on such an uneven contest as it would prove to be. As soon as this is done our manager will meet the manager of the Palmers in a conference and make further arrangements. Players will be signed as in the recent game, and should any of our men be unable to play it will not be necessary for us to send out of the village for a player, because we have men in town who are ready and willing and we feel sure are capable of playing such a club as the Palmers. THORNDIKE BASE BALL CLUB.
J. A. Farrell, Manager.

There is one man in Belchertown who may be said to have had his full share of mishaps, William Belding, 76 years old. When seven years old he had part of the fingers of one hand cut off, and later in life had the bones of one ankle smashed. Then he was caught by the mouth on the sweep of an old-fashioned cider mill and several stitches had to be taken to draw that organ back to a normal size. A horse fell on him next and broke the bone of one leg above the knee; then he fell and had his ribs on one side broken in; a sandbank caved in on him and buried him next, breaking his limb again, which was considerably shorter than the other when it healed. Last winter he fell and shattered his kneepan. However, when over 60 years old nature replaced the teeth on his upper jaw with a new set of double teeth, a partial atonement for his other mishaps. Mr. Belding still accomplishes a good deal of work, in spite of his mishaps and infirmities.

Considerable discussion was had, and a vote was taken against the acceptance of the offer. Mrs. Eliza Shaw then offered a site, an acre of land in the rear of her residence, east of the residence of C. M. Thompson, and the voters were favorably impressed with it. It was voted to bond the town for the construction of the new building, the bonds being issued for 20 years and a sinking fund being provided for. These sinking fund officers were appointed: A. A. Hubbard for three years, J. H. Loudon for two years, H. E. Shaw for one year.

BRIMFIELD.

A party of about a dozen alumni and alumnae of the Hitchcock Free High School are planning to spend next week at Alum Pond in Sturbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hitchcock, Miss Adella Adams and Miss Marion Wild are camping out for two weeks at North Pond, Brookfield. The party was joined on Tuesday for a stay of two days by Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Brown.

Loses An Eye.

While John Cunningham, a farmer living in the Dunhamtown district, was leading a cow yesterday morning, the animal attacked him, and managed to hook him in the right eye, making a frightful wound, the socket of the eye being badly torn and the eye itself completely collapsed and destroyed. The accident happened about six o'clock in the morning, and Mr. Cunningham was not intending to send for a physician, insisting that he could see out of the eye. His housekeeper finally, about 9 o'clock, hailed a passerby and told him to send a physician from Palmer. Dr. Holbrook visited the man about noon, and later in the day returned with Dr. F. W. Ellis of Monson, by whom the eye was removed and the wound dressed.

The Morgan Family.

During last week many members of the Morgan family were brought together in Brimfield, descendants of Dea. David Morgan, a grandson of Miles Morgan. Dea. David Morgan, with other Springfield planters, was one of the original proprietors of the town of Brimfield. The oldest of the Brimfield representatives of this branch of the family is John W. Morgan, who was for many years a well known fresco painter in Springfield, and whose work is seen in some of the finest buildings in Worcester county, as well as in the Connecticut valley. Another well-known citizen is Thomas J. Morgan, one of the trustees of the Hitchcock Free High School, and long identified with educational matters and public interests. His son, Edward H., is the only living representative of the next younger generation in Brimfield. George Byron Morgan, a prominent business man of St. Louis, and family, and his two sisters, Mrs. Chauncey Bean of Binghamton, N.Y., and Mrs. D. L. Halbert of Kansas City, have been the guests of their brother Thomas at the old home in Little Rest. At John Morgan's there have been two descendants of Maj. Abner Morgan, Mrs. George A. Lawrence of New York and Appleton Morgan, the well-known writer and president of the New York Shakespeare society. Charles Morgan, one of Worcester's most influential citizens, and his son Ralph, visited their Brimfield relatives Tuesday, joining Appleton Morgan to go over the old Maj Morgan house now in the possession of Mrs. M. A. Tarbell. This house, one of the oldest in town, was built by Maj. Abner Morgan in 1783. He was the first to practice law in Brimfield and was an advocate of more than local reputation. He served nearly through the Revolutionary war with an honorable record, and at its close returned to his native town to render prominent service in the affairs of town and state during the rest of his active life. In the meantime, the struggle for independence over, he had built the most aristocratic mansion in town, which possesses features of unusual strength and dignity, and reflects in a marked degree the individualfty of the builder. His grandson, Appleton Morgan, though not a native of Brimfield, cherishes an affectionate pride in the old town and his ancestral home, and his visits, aside from renewing family connections, was a pilgrimage to the house where his father was born, and which his distinguished ancestors built so well that, although 112 years old, it shows no signs of decay, and bids fair to withstand the wear of time for another century. There is probably no one so well versed as Mr Morgan in the history of the extensive family bearing that name, and during his stay at Brimfield he has added to his knowledge of this subject and other local history from legends, landmarks and inscriptions on the tombstones in the old burying ground. On Wednesday Steerage Rock was visited, a spot of great historic as well as picturesque interest; for across the mountain north of the rock, following the great Indian through trail, lay a route traversed by the early white settlers of the Connecticut Valley on their way to and from the settlements of the Bay. Recent evidences points to the use of this path by the pioneers at an earlier date than that assumed by some historians. So it is not improbable that the "unique bridal party" described in the history of Springfield passed this way 250 years ago. In that city of homes there stands to-day a large statue of Miles Morgan, who was a leading man in the early days of the plantation on the Connecticut River. On the voyage across the sea, so the story goes, he had won the affections of a maiden who settled with her family in Beverly. Having pushed inland to the Agawam plantation, he there built him a house, and then returned eastward to claim the maiden for his bride, accompanied on the journey by two neighbors and an Indian gaide. Miles and his attendants walked all the way back to Springfield, his newly-wedded wife, with "some household stuff," being borne on horseback. It is easy to imagine how this ancestor of the Morgan, the dauntless Miles Morgan, may have shown to the wondering gaze of his bride, from the sightly eminence of Steerage Rock, the distance ranges of the Western mountains, rising like blue clouds one above another and bounding their new horizon, and its nearer wilderness of hill and forests which lay between them and the home he had ready for her on the banks of "long river."

WARE.

Two fires the past week; the third one will be where?

John W. Lambert has purchased the Puffer House on Water street for $2000.

A few Ware bicycle riders expect to enter the road race at Warren next week.

The marriage of William Metcalf and Mrs. Mary Dean is announced to take place next Monday.

The telephone exchange is being boomed, and a few new subscribers have been secured.

It is expected that there will be horse races on the driving park August 31 and September 2.

Jeweler G. H. W. Smith has engaged E. A. Messier, of Keene, N. H., to do his watch and jewelry repairing.

Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D. D., of Worcester, is to occupy the East Congregational church next Sunday.

It is hoped to complete the ventilating system in the school house on High street by the first of September.

Last Saturday's ball game between the Wheelwrights and Wares resulted in a score of 11 to 8 in favor of Ware.

Miss Mary E. Reilley gave a reception to about 40 of her young friends at her home on South street Wednesday evening.

Mrs. C. A. Sibley and Miss C. Della Sibley, who have been spending two weeks at their cottage at Sterling, have returned home.

The Ware lodge of the A. O. U. W. was visited officially on Thursday by Assistant Supervisor N. Crary, of Chicopee, and Deputy Twogood, of Three Rivers.

Proposals are being received by the superintendent of schools for the transportation of pupils in the out districts to the schools at Ware Center and this village.

The case of Anna V. Marsh vs. Charles W. Howard was entered at the superior court at Northampton on Monday. The plaintiff sues Marsh for $5000 for breach of promise, and $50 for money which she loaned him.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brown have returned from a three-weeks' vacation in Newport and Block Island. This island seems to be their favorite resort, they having been there nearly every season for a long time.

The funeral of Mrs. J. P. Campbell was held on Sunday at the house, and was largely attended by relatives and neighbors. Rev. A. M. Osgood officiated. The singing by a quartette was very touching, and the floral tributes were beautiful, a fine piece being from the ladies of the W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Campbell was a member. The interment was in Aspen Grove Cemetery.

An alarm was rung in at 11.25 Tuesday night for a fire in the barn opposite Snow's mill, owned by R. C. Snow. The barn was destroyed, and the contents, which was hay and straw, was badly damaged by water. There were two horses in the barn, but they were taken out by Dr. Etienne. The fire was no doubt the work of an incendiary, as a man was seen prowling around before the fire, and running away when the flames broke out.

"Good Spirits."

The words have different meanings to a spiritualist, a Kentuckian, and an average man. For the average man good spirits depend on good digestion. How to insure good digestion? A Ripans Tabule after each meal, that's all.

FORBES & WALLACE'S,

SPRINGFIELD.

10-cent Ginghams --for 5 cents a yard.

A fortunate trade chance gives us several thousand yards of the prettiest dress ginghams to sell at 5 cents a yard—regular 10-cent goods. Too many of 'em made—that's the reason and the whole of it. Had it not been so not a yard of these pretty things would ever have been seen for less than 10 cents a yard.

Mothers for themselves and children had better come. A few days' trading will end the lot.

Carpets.

It's a good time to see the new fall carpets—there won't be a better, perhaps. Most everything is here and there's not a new pattern closed out as yet.

We're enthusiastic over this new stock. Such another it would be hard to find anywhere, so much care has been taken in choosing the best things from among the best makers. You shall see how painstaking we are to keep up and intensify the reputation of careful, honest, artistic, carpet sellers which we won the past three seasons.

And it is a good time to see the new fall carpets just now, because there is hardly a cooler place in the city that you can come to than our carpet-room—swept by every breeze on three sides.

It is yours to see, ours to show, and the showing is no harder than the seeing.

The people of Patagonia

are not the ones we wish to talk to, but the people of Palmer and vicinity. This is the picnic season, and our leader just now is Sugar Cookies, four pounds for 25 cents; hardly believe it, can you? we can't ourselves. A rival manufacturer says the maker must have stolen the flour; that's nothing to you as long as the goods are first-class and you get so much for your money.

And right here let us suggest that we carry a couple of dozen kinds of cakes and cookies just the thing for picnics.

If you don't like to bake this hot weather, or run short unexpectedly, we have bread, cake, cookies, etc., fresh every day from the Domestic Bakery at Ware; they're as good as can be constructed; almost like home-made.

If you're canning, we give 20 pounds Revere granulated sugar for your dollar, Have the cans for the fruit, too, and can send 'em up with the sugar; "Mason" and "Lightning" kinds.

25 cents a peck is all we ask for new potatoes.

Lots of other things; glad to show 'em and sell 'em; sell 'em if you want 'em, don't feel hurt though if you look and don't buy.

Just a little Gumption,

in the matter of washing, will lead you to use Pearline. Look about you, and see the work of your friends who use it. Isn't the work easier? Isn't it better done? Can't you see that it must be easier and better without all that rubbing that tires out women and wears out clothes? Gumption is the seeing why and the knowing how. You can't know how to wash with the least work and the most saving, unless you use Pearline.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Give Me the Baby.

Give me the baby to hold my dear—
To hold and hug and love and kiss.
Ah, he will come to me, never a fear—
Come to the nest of a breast like this,
As warm for him as his face with cheer.
Give me the baby to hold, my dear.

Trustfully yield him to my caress;
"Bother," you say. What! A bother to me?
To fill up my soul with such happiness
As the love of a baby that laughs to be Snuggled away where my heart can hear.
Give me the baby to hold, my dear.

Ah, but his hands are grimed, you say,
And would soil my laces and clutch my hair.
Well, what would pleasure me more, I pray,
Than the touch and tug of the wee hands there—
The wee hands there, and the warm face here?
Give me the baby to hold, my dear.

Give me the baby? (Oh, won't you see?
* * * Somewhere out where the green of the lawn
Is turning to gray, and the maple-tree
Is weeping its leaves of gold upon
A little mound, with a dead rose near * * *)
Give me the baby to hold my dear.

This box isn't the regular size." said the woman who had purchased some strawberries. "That box, ma'am," replied the vender impressively, "is an achievement of statesmanship." "What do you mean?" "It's a compromise measure."—Washington Star.

Pennsylvania Farmer—"Cousin Jim, your place looks as if you didn't take care of it." Kansas Farmer—"Gosh, Peter, I hain't time to take care of it. It keeps me busy all the time log-rollin' bills for the benefit of the farmer through the darned Legislature."—Philadelphia Press.

"Well, Mrs. Parslow, I suppose you are doing as many other ladies do nowadays, taking lessons on the bicycle?" "No, Mr. Johnson, I am not. All the lessons I have had so far have been off the bicycle, but I hope soon to take them on it, as you suggest."—Harper's Bazar.

Mrs. Keegan—"Fer hivin's sake, Mrs. Casey, phwut is thot turrible smellin' shmoke?" Mrs. Casey—"It's Mrs. Dooney below wid phwut she calls dishinfectants." Mrs. Keegan—"Well, will yez plase tell her from me thot if she don't shtop it Oi'll complain to the board of hilth!"—Puck.

Tailor Jones—"How did you manage to get the young man to pay up so readily?" Tailor Smith—"I had it put in the newspaper that my daughter had one hundred thousand left her." Tailor Jones—"Well, did she?" Tailor Smith—"Yes; one hundred thousand cents."—New York Herald.

"Doctor," said the parlor elocutionist, "I fear that I am losing my voice." The specialist made a careful examination of the elocutionist's larynx, vocal cords and other instruments of torture. "Yes he said, "I think I can cure you—but you must never tell anyone that I did."—Cincinnati Tribune.

"Yes," sighed the Hammock, regretfully. 'it was my fault that those sweet young people fell out." "Never mind," rejoined the Bicycle Built for Two, with a merry twinkle in its nickel-plated spokes, "I shall see to it that they are much thrown together." Thus again a compensatory juxtaposition of natural forces were established.

"It's the difference in the business," said Dan knowingly. "On this side" (pointing to the iron furnace), "the owners pay five hundred men to work for them, and lose money on their work; but "on the other side" (indicating the saloon with his thumb) "the owner has five hundred men working for him, and they pay him for the privilege."

"I guess my hat's my own! I paid for it!" snapped the young woman at the matinee, turning round and addressing the two men who were making audible remarks about her towering head dress; and I paid for my seat, too!" "Put you didn't pay for all the space between your seat and the ceiling, my dear young lady," mildly observed the elder of the two men.—Chicago Tribune.

"My young friend," said the millionaire, frowning, "you admit that you are poor and you know that my daughter is very wealthy. Would you, a pauper, marry her, knowing her to be worth a million?" "Sir," said the young man, who was a person of intense resolution, "my affection is proof against such tests. I would marry your daughter if she was worth two millions."—Chicago Record.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Restored to Health

By the use of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The Great Blood Purifier.

Arthur Charpentier, who resides in the rear of Aspen St., Ware, Mass., testifies: "My wife and little son 5 years old, took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring, the former for female weakness and indigestion, the latter for loss of appetite. My wife was also troubled with pains in her back, sick headaches and dizzy spells. She could not eat substantial food without distress. She began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and since then she has not had any of those troubles, the sick headaches and dizzy spells have disappeared and she can eat without distress. My boy has also regained his appetite and Hood's Sarsaparilla has restored him to perfect health."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today. $1; six for $5.

SHAW BROTHERS, THREE RIVERS, MASS.

The Breakers.

A battle line, with tossing snow-white crests
And crystal spears that in the sunlight flash,
With reckless, suicidal dash
Upon the rocky beach their shining breasts.

Then baffled, flee away with dying roar;
But other crested hosts come charging on!
Thus endlessly hath raged from Nature's dawn
The war between the breakers and the shore.

Not doubtful is the issue. Slow but sure
Will fall the doom of idle, rock-mailed strength;
Its foes shall charge, until the shore at length
Shall yield, despite its rocky armature.

Despair not, O, thou striving human sea,
Though wrong still reigns upon his granite throne;
Each charge, though ending with thy baffled moan,
Brings nearer certain final victory.

DIDN'T LIKE THE RULES.

I heard the old couple in the room next to mine when they discovered the "rules" tacked up on the door. The old man was trying to work the transom when he caught sight of the card and exclaimed:

"By gosh, Lucy, come here! It says on this card that if we don't put our money in the safe they won't be responsible for it! That looks as if robbers was about, doesn't it?"

"Of course it does," she exclaimed in reply. "I told ye I didn't like the looks of this tavern as we drove up."

"No washin' did in the rooms," said the old man, as he read the next rule. "I didn't expect they'd furnish us with tubs and clothes lines, but that looks mighty stingy."

"No washin', eh?" queried the woman. "Waal, I told ye things had a queer look as we come upstairs."

"Meals sent to the rooms charged extra. That's some more o' their stinginess."

'I should say! They'd probably charge a dollar for bringin' up a plate of meat and taters. Samuel, we've got in a place where they'll cut our throats to get our money."

"All bills settled weekly and no discount from the regular rates," continued her husband.

"Hev we got to stay here fur a week before we kin settle our bills?" she anxiously asked.

"Looks a heap like it, Lucy. I was goin' to ask 'em to throw somethin' on account of my bein' overseer of highways, but I guess it's no use. Fire escapes at all the hall winders."

"For goodness sake! Then we are liable to be roasted in our beds. Samuel, if they wasn't afraid of fire they wouldn't hev fire escapes, and I wouldn't go to bed here tonight for a millyon dollars."

"Looks kind o' risky, I do declar'. Let's see. Gas burned after midnight charged extra."

"And do they expect we are goin' to set up till after midnight fur the sake of payin' extra? Samuel, we hev made a great mistake in gettin' into this tavern."

"I guess we have. All damage to rooms to be paid for by occupants. Hev we damaged anythin'?"

"No; except I knocked a cheer over. If they heard the crash downstairs they'll charge us $2 or $3 mabbe."

"Bolt the door and secure the transom before retirin'," read the old man, as he reached the bottom of the card.

"Where's the transom?" asked his wife

"Durned if I know."

"But what is it?"

"I never seed one as I know of."

"Samuel Parsons," exclaimed the woman, as she rushed across the room, "you help me pack our duds into this satchel and we'll walk right downstairs and outer the house. We don't wanter be robbed nor murdered, and if we get out ali ve I shall be one thankful woman. A transom, eh? They was goin' to wait till we got to sleep and let loose on us, but we will walk right out, and if anybody sez 'Boo!' to me I'll poke my umbrella right through 'em!"—Philadelphia Press.

FEEDING VALUE OF APPLES FOR COWS.

There has long been a practical opinion among farmers that while sweet apples might be fed to cows with satisfactory results, sour apples were very injurious to them; but this opinion has been founded upon very slight actual knowledge of the real feeding value of apples. Our experiment stations have so far given but little attention to analysis of the apple to ascertain its feeding value. At the Vermont station apple pomace, ensilaged, and used supplementary to and in part as a substitute for corn ensilage, was found to be relished by cows, and the result of four tests found it to be about equivalent in feeding value to corn ensilage. At the Massachusetts station Dr. Goessman found apples to to contain about 80 per cent of moisture, the apples having been gathered October 6. The further advanced apples are toward maturity the more sugar is found in them, and their feeding value depends largely upon the amount of dry matter which they contain. Laboratory tests show that the feeding value of apples is somewhat higher than that of an equal weight of turnips. Apple pomace is said to equal sugar beets, it being a somewhat singular chemical fact that the pomace is richer in nitrogenous matter than the apple from which it has been made.—Chicago Trade Bulletin.

FISH GET THE WRONG BAIT.

A fisherman who went down into Lake Keuka in ships of the skiff variety in order to fish, trailing a jug of bait behind the boat to keep it cool, was twice annoyed by having his jug broken, which, of course, put an end to his fishing for the day. On the second occasion when this occured the fisherman soon after saw a large fish swimming about near the surface in a lazy and irresolute sort of way. He rowed up to the fish, and to his surprise was able to pick it up in his hands. The fish was perfectly sound, but had rather more color than usual, and his breath smelled strongly of alcohol. This gave him an idea. Next day he trailed behind his boat a jug wherein the lure was cunningly commingled with opium. Hid in the stern of the boat while another rowed, he kept sharp watch. Presently he saw a number of monstrous fish approach, bearing on their noses a stone they had evidently rooted out of the lake bottom. One sharp crack from this broke the jug, when the thieves eagerly drank up the liquid as it mingled with the surrounding water. Shortly afterward a number of the finest fish ever seen on the lake, having floated to the top in their opium dream of bliss, and were captured.—New York Recorder.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with la grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a trial of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A REMARKABLE FEAT IN MINING.

In sinking shafts in mining districts such impediments as water and quicksand have oftentimes to be dealt with. In some instances the process of freezing the mass, prior to excavation, is resorted to, which forms a temporary dam and enables a permanent one to be constructed. A feat of this kind was recently accomplished under extreme difficulties at Vicq, France. It was really an attempt to freeze a gigantic, saturated, cylindrical, rocky mass, 21 feet in diameter and extending down into the earth a distance of 330 feet. Around the circumference of a circle large enough to include the shaft to be sunk, small holes were drilled to the above depth for the circulating pipes. The latter consisted of two pipes of different diameters placed one within the other and connected together at their bottom ends, while the upper ends of all the so sunk were connected to each other and with the ice refrigerating machine in such a manner that the cold fluid would circulate down into the interior tubes and return by the exterior ones. The mass was frozen solid in six months, when the miners proceeded to sink the shaft, working at the rate of 13 feet per day. The total length of piping required in the operation was about 10 miles.—Colliery Engineer.

THE SOUL IN THE FACE.—Beauty of soul and character is reflected in the features. Life's opportunities of nobleness, or even forty years of opportunity, if well used, are enough to make so much beauty within that it cannot help but come through to the surface in graceful habits of the nerve and muscles. The transfiguration of a pleasant, kindly lighting of the eyes, restful lines of self-control about the lips, pure shinings of the face as great thoughts kindle inwardly—these things no parent make inevitably ours, and no fitful week or two of goodness gives them, and no schooling of visage, either, but only habitual nobleness and graciousness within; and this will give them all.

"If our love were but more simple,
We should take Him at His word,
And our lives would be all sunshine
In the sweetness of our Lord."

FISH COOKED TO ORDER.—During the forest fires several weeks ago a remarkable shower of fish fell in the Kinsua Valley, in Pennsylvania. On the day when the fires were raging the fiercest, with the men worn out and almost dead from hunger, a dark cloud overcast the sky, and a heavy rain began falling. With the shower came hundreds of fish, ranging from three to eleven inches in length. In many instances where the fish fell upon the embers left by the fire they were cooked. In this condition they were found by the fire-fighters, who, after tasting them, ate with great relish.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

My Wife's a Winsome Wee Thing.

My wife's a winsome wee thing,
Wed twenty years or mair,
And aye the bonnier growing,
As baith mine eyes declare.
'Tis love that made her bonnie,
And love that keeps her sae,
In spite o' time and fortune,
On life's uncannie way.

Love scares away the wrinkles
From off her smooth white brow,
And duty done through good and ill
Aye keeps her conscience true—
And yields her happy peace of mind
If e'er the world goes wrong,
And turns the murmur of lament
Into a cheerful song.

The kisses gather on her lips
Like blossoms on the rose,
And kindly thoughts reflect the light
That in her bosom glows
As wavelets in a running stream
Reflect the noontide ray,
And sparkle with the light of heaven
When rippling on their way.

She is a winsome wee thing,
And more than twenty year
She's twined herself about my heart
By all that can endear;
By all that can endear on earth,
Foreshadowing things above,
And lead my happy soul to heaven
Rejoicing in her love!

FINNEGAN'S ABSALOM.

I knew him from the time his birth, twenty-four years ago, shook the nurseless and physicianless frontier community in Jack County, which was then on the foremost edge of advancing civilization, to its foundation.

Finnegan had been a respectable clerk in his native Ireland, at a starvation salary, and Mrs. Finnegan a poor dependant who acted as nursery governess and general slave and scapegoat in the family of a coarse, unfeeling, well-to-do relative.

They had loved each other long and faithfully, but timidly, and dared not venture marriage on poor Finnegan's pittance of salary. But things come to people — even so far off as Ireland — who wait patiently long enough, and do not die; and when this pathetic couple were middle-aged a legacy came to Finnegan — without apology for its tardiness—which enabled them to marry, and with which they immediately came to Texas, of all places, and bought of all, things, a cattle ranch.

However, Fate appears sometimes positively ashamed to be unkind to such innocents, when they are delivered over into her hands; and the Finnegans were as prosperous as most of their neighbors.

Their loneliness was despelled in the course of a year or two by the arrival of a son, the only child of this gentle pair, and the or'nariest baby that ever howled the roof off a shack. At two or three years old, when he got to be an expert on his feet and with his fists and his voice, he made the ranch-house so hot that the boys were glad to give it the cold shake, and be out on the range or in camp; and by the time he was four he ran the ranch, whaled and hit any one that interfered with him, and made himself such a terror that not a Mexican would stay on the place. Finnegan had to build a messhouse for the men, although the headquarters house had not long since been made large purposely to have them all together.

The foreman, who was myself, and the cowboys only stayed for love of Mrs. Finnegan—Aunt Mary, we called—her and I was always losing my best hands on account of the little cuss.

He was smart enough; he didn't lack enterprise and savory. He learned to ride—and ride like the dickens, too—before he was six. He used fairly to roar and carvort because the men would not stand still and let him rope them. He practiced on every animate and inanimate object about the ranch; and by the time he was eight he could ride a cutting pony that was just lightning, and rope a calf, or even yearling with the best of us.

In the course of a couple of years things got very much worse. Heretofore we had only to stay away from the headquarters house to be rid of him; but now, on his pony he haunted the camps, the outfits, and roundups, and was the most everlasting, lively, ingenious torment.

When he was about ten or twelve I remember he was in the camp one day when we were moving about, getting ready to go to a roundup. He had a new California rope he was awfully tickled with, and he kept riding up behind the men, roping them, jerking the noose tight around them, arms and all, so they were helpless till he got down whooping and laughing and slacked up on them.

I saw Frosty get out his big-bladed knife, as sharp as a razor, and when the kid, after awhile, threw his rope over him, Frosty slashed it smooth in two at the point where it lay for a moment on his saddle horn. Robbie went back almost out of his saddle, as he braced backward for the jerk that never come; and when he saw his new California rope cut in two he yelled with rage.

He ran his pony up to Frosty's and raised his quirt, blubbering like a great baby:

"You cut my ro—ope! I'll ki-i-ill you!"

"You little gadfly," said Frosty, catching his arm, "you touch me with that quirt and I'll pull you off your pony and wear you to frazzles with it. I'll stripe you like a zebra—I'll skin you. You'll get it once in your life, if I'm fired for it before sundown. Now cut loose and quirt me if you want to!"

But the kid didn't want to any more. He had had a taste of the sort of thing that would have cured him all along; and he went off as quiet as a lamb, and never did monkey with Frosty any more.

He followed Alex McRaven's outfit along one day—Alex was one of my wagon bosses—and kept up his usual tricks of roping the riders, stealing things out of the mess case, and charging into the middle of the remuda, scattering the horses in every direction.

Finally Alex, a slow, serious Scotchman, but as hard to turn as a buffalo bull when his blood is hot, jerked him off his pony and gave him a regular Scotch Convenantor thrashing.

Those who witnessed the spectacle say it was a most pleasing and diverting one—Robbie howled like a pack of timber wolves with grief, terror and amazement, Alex thrashing away conscientiously and methodically, almost with tears in his eyes, as he reflected that Aunt Mary would execrate him, and Finnegan fire him immediately; but determined to finish the Lord's work at any cost to young Finnegan's anatomy or his own feelings. When he had done, he hog-tied the bellowing victim, dropped him in the wagon like a pig, pulled the saddle off his pony and turned it into the remuda.

Toward evening the outfit came to headquarters, and Alex untied the entirely extinguished Robbie, set him out of the wagon without looking at him, and after putting the pony in the pasture and the saddle in its place, went to the messhouse.

Not a word was ever heard from headquarters about this awful, treasonable deed, any more than there had been about Frosty's little scrap with the kid, which made us all wonder if Robbie hadn't some decent points about him, and if plenty of thrashing might not, after all, make a man of him.

At sixteen the boy had a little brand of his own—all stolen except what his father had given him, for he was beginning to be the most audacious, skillful, and successful thief in the Panhandle. His earlier, and always his most extensive stealings, were from his father; and from them he graduated into a regular full-fledged rustler.

The boss of the Quarter Circle Z ranch met him one morning, skirting around their pastures with his rope and swinging, and Robbie had a very lame explanation of why he was there. He had always a branding iron in his boot or about his saddle.

He mavericked his father's calves more freely than any others, and under the very noses of the old man's cowboys; and it was this heartless ingratitude, and his poor old father's untiring love and inexhaustible admiration and fondness—a tenderness which followed and protected the young scamp from the consequences of his rascality, and which refused to see or hear anything wrong about the boy—that suggested to some one the descriptive title of "Finnegan's Absalom," which immediately stuck and entirely superseded his proper name. I don't believe half the people in the Panhandle—to which newly-opened country I had come to ranch for myself, and they had followed later, when he was about twelve—knew that his name was Robert Emmet Finnegan.

When he was about nineteen the old folks gathered him up rather suddenly and sent him to college. He had got to be a big, fresh-colored, rather fine-looking fellow, with an investigating blue eye, and a peevish under lip; the kind of fellow all the girls naturally go wild over, but no man could see without wanting to kick, unless his legs were paralyzed.

I knew the whole Panhandle to a man thirsted for his blood, and yet he was safe from bodily injury for the sake of his poor old father and mother. But everything could not be borne; the old man was gently but firmly offered an alternative; so off to college Absalom went.

An account I incidentally overheard one day ran like this:

"Say! Finnegan's Absalom's gone off to college."

"No!"

"Yes Country got too hot for him, and Finnegan sent him away."

"What was it?"

"Oh, they said he swung too long a loop for them, and they wasn't going to stand it any more."

And this was a clear statement of the case, in cattle vernacular.

He was two years at college, spending his vacations at San Antonio and other cities. Then they had to bring him home. In the first place, his prodigality was about to ruin them; the cattle wouldn't just hold out. Then, too, it was judicious to withdraw him when they did, instead of waiting for expulsion.

Shortly after Finnegan's Absalom was sent away to Austin, the Finnegan household had acquired a new member. This was a half Mexican girl of about fifteen, whose parents, attempting to cross the treacherous Canadian at night, when the river was up, had missed the ford, gotten into the quicksands and been drowned—a thing easy enough of accomplishment in the Canadian, even in daylight, and without an extra big stream.

Ysabel was the offspring of one of those strange, incongruous unions you see sometimes on the frontier, when such odd jetsam and flotsam from the great sea of life are drifted and tossed together in fantastical combination.

Her peregrinating father had long been a sort of institution in all north and west Texas in the guise of the harmless, necessary peddler.

A Yankee of the Yankees, selling patent churns, new-fangled household implements and recipes for making everything in the world you wouldn't want—in Texas—including all sorts of perfumes, marvelous cement, furniture polish and fancy temperance drinks. A man of iron muscles and tremendous will power, there seemed to be a lack in him that prevented him from using his remarkable and varied forces except to the most trivial ends. A crank, that lacked but a balancing touch to be a genius; full of strange contrivances and inventions, a devourer of all books and papers, author and admirer of all sorts of wild social, financial and political schemes.

Only a little weight, a touch of continuity, a little sequence in his ideas, persistence in any one line of thought or effort, and he might have been a statesman, a financier, a leader of men, and left his mark upon his time and place, instead of one of Fate's blank cartridges—an adventitious Bohemian, blown idly hither and thither by every little gust of destiny.

It was in one of his outbursts of reforming social conditions, wiping out prejudices and breaking down race distinctions, that Jason Tuttle married Felice Gomez.

This girl was of a Mexican family of some traditions, a little property in land and cattle, and much pride, refusing to associate upon terms of equality with the run of poor Mexicans in the country, and insisting apoplectically upon Castilian blood whenever such a matter was broached. They had some teaching, and a few old Spanish books which they read persistently; and not one of them could be got to confess to the understanding of an English sentence by so much as the turning of an eyelash.

The funny part of the matter came in the attitude of the Gomez family toward this marriage. They were furious. They proceeded to regard the connection as little better than a disgrace, and to cast Felice off, in the most correct and edifying old Spanish manner.

And so it came about that when, sixteen years later, Tuttle and his Mexican wife were drowned in the greedy, faithless Canadian, that has stolen away so many lives intrusted to it, their fifteen-years-old Ysabel was left as utterly alone and forlorn as a little woodpecker or squirrel, orphaned before yet old enough to leave the nest; and the kind-hearted Finnegans, hearing of it, went and got the child and brought her home. Her position in the household was a mixture of adopted daughter and petted, indulged servant.

Being the only child, Ysabel was much educated and trained, in the most singular, erratic and contradictory manner, by her strangely assorted parents; her mother watching and laboring incessantly to the end that the child should read and speak only Spanish, and grow up an ideal Spanish senorita; and her father feeding her active brain upon the most emancipated literature, and industriously pumping the most advanced of his radical ideas into her receptive mind. It spoke well for the girl's native force and judgment that she really found out some things, formed some ideas, and drew some conclusions of her own from this bewildering process.

When she first became a member of the Finnegan household she was a slender slip of a girl, quiet as a little shadow, but with ample promise of beauty if any eye had looked discerningly at her. And in the two years that elapsed before the son and heir came home, that promise bloomed into a most opulent fulfillment.

Her form was pretty and graceful; but it was a curious air of individuality, a strong personal and original note in her bearing, despite its still demureness, that piqued and attracted. And then, the rich red shining lambently through her creamy cheeks and breaking into open crimson on her full lips, the big black eyes, with their long fringes downcast, and the flashing white teeth that helped to make dazzling her rather rare smile—all of these were calculated to inflame the susceptible masculine heart.

All the unattached cowboys and cattlemen in all the adjoining counties cast approving eyes upon this glowing beauty, and some had endeavored to do a little covert sighing at her shrine, but the old people, who had come to be very fond of her, were now as careful and watchful of her as of a daughter; and Ysabel herself was a model of demure discretion.

When Absalom came home and found this enchanting creature in his house, his instinct was just to reach out and take possession of it—to have and please himself with it. Wasn't it the same as everything else on the ranch, his?

For once the old people opposed him stoutly and unflinchingly, and prepared to send her to a convent school at Trinidad. Upon the heels of a long and somewhat stormy interview with Ysabel, in which he found her as determined in her views as the old people, and entirely satisfied to go away to school, he flung in upon his parents with the announcement that he was going to marry her.

At first blush this seemed as terrible to them, with their strict Old World ideas of caste, as that he should entertain less honorable intentions toward her. But their resistance was, as usual when the boy wanted anything, short-lived, and their final capitulation entire.

Of course everybody's notion of the matter was that Finnegans had simply gotten another adoring slave; and squadrons and batallions of her masculine admirers, with their weapons and munitions of war all cleaned and primed, were breathing fire and waiting to defend her against the wrongs and insults they felt sure would be heaped upon her attractive little head, or avenge them in large quantities of the very best blood her wronger and insulter had about him.

Vain solicitude! Ysabel needed no defense.

As with all the women of her race and class, marriage made a great change in her. From being nobody, with nothing to say, she became suddenly very much somebody, with a great deal, entirely to the point, to say. The dignity of her titles, her possessions and position, was strong within her, and she showed herself entirely capable of managing not only Finnegan's Absalom, but Finnegan himself, in a daughterly and deferential manner, when he gently counselled her to a conciliatory policy toward the young bully.

Capable of managing Finnegan! She was managing Finnegan! She was only too able to manage the entire ranch, and could have run the whole Panhandle, financially, politically and socially, had she ever got any sort of cinch on it.

It was not for nothing that she was the daughter of her father, with her mother's balance-wheel of unpretending, dogged persistence. Finnegan's didn't know itself. The ranch was gradually metamorphosed, and run on a plan that came directly from behind those black brows of Ysabel's. And its transformation partook humorously of the dual strands intertwisted in her nature. Through her suggestion a live, hustling young business man was brought from Kansas City to do the clerical work, and the handsome stationary upon which he wrote with his typewriter the able and diplomatic letters evolved by himself and Ysabel in conclave bore a neat lithographed head which read: "Rancho del Santa Cruz. Graded Hereford cattle; Merino sheep; Imported Norman Percherons. Cattle and sheep grazed and herded on shares."

The cowboys used to assert that the cows on remote ranges were mysteriously aware of the stern regime, and forebore straying off to the Salt Fork for the purpose of bogging up as heretofore; that they came meekly in, unpersuaded, at branding time, and presented their calves to be monogramed; and that even the infrequent maverick—that Arab of the plains who owns no master—showed a chastened joy and pride in having Ysabel's rapidly-increasing brand—Y. T. F., over a Roman cross—singed on his unfetted ribs, and sported it thereafter as a decoration, not a badge of serfdom.

Absalom had his allowance—a liberal enough one—and was not permitted to overrun it; and the place emerged from debt as time went on. Ysabel's besom made a clean sweep of sweaters, loafers, shirks, abuses and all sorts of superfluities, which had accumulated like barnacles upon the easy-going old Irishman and his soft-hearted wife; and the Finnegans were on the road to wealth.

She relapsed, almost immediately after her marriage, into her beloved mother tongue, and compelled her husband, if he wished to hold communication with her, to speak and understand Spanish. It was as comical as it was amazing to see how she tamed him. When he sought, in the early days of his subjugation, to relieve his overstrained heart by abusing his father and mother, saying to them what he would not dare to so much as look at her, he met with a violent and unexpected check.

Ysabel was tenderly and gratefully attached to the old people. She would roll those great black eyes on him, fairly nailing him, and with her arm stretched straight out at him she would ejaculate in her sonorous Spanish:

"What, ungrateful one! Wilt thou speak so to my honored father and my beloved mother? Go hence with thy evil words! Take thy face away from me till I have patience to look upon it! Go!"

And Absalom would stand irresolute, evading those compelling eyes, making desperate efforts to get himself to the point of revolt; but always doing eventually as he was bidden. This fellow, the holy terror of an entire section, was thoroughly broke to all sorts of gaits and any kind of harness by a little, soft, plump scrap of a girl that wouldn't weigh more than a hundred pounds!

He that was bellicose is meek; he that was insolent is polite; he, the arch tyrant of Finnegan's, speaks civily to his inferiors; he that thought it brave to blaspheme, and witty to be profane and impious, goes to mass—ay, to early mass—of a raw and nipping February morning!

All these wonders were worked simply by the ascendancy of her strong, intent spirit over his noisy, ungoverned weakness.

If she doesn't convert the goods she has on hand into a man, it will not be from lack of skillful, intelligent and persistent effort in its evolution, development, manufacture, manipulation, and further, if she doesn't finally achieve her idea of a Spanish gentleman, it will only be because the stuff wasn't there.—Alice MacGowan.

The Land of Make-Believe.

I know of a dear, delightful land,
Which is not so far away
That we may not sail to its sunlit strand,
No matter how short the day;
Ah, there the skies are always blue,
And hearts forget to grieve,
For there's never a dream but must come true
In the Land of Make-Believe.

There every laddie becomes a knight,
And a fairy queen each lass;
And lips learn laughter, and eyes grow bright
As the dewdrops in the grass;
For there's nothing beautiful, brave, and bold
That one may not achieve,
If he once sets foot on the sands of gold
Of the Land of Make-Believe!

So spread the sails, and away we go
Light-winged through the fairy straits;
For the west winds steadily, swiftly blow,
And the wonderful harbor waits.
On our prow the foam-flecks glance and gleam,
While we sail from morn till eve,
All bound for the shores of the children's dream
Of the Land of Make-Believe!

CHINA A VAST GRAVEYARD.

The face of all nature is pimpled with graves. No farm is so small that it cannot afford at least one; no hill is so high (I speak of the Garden provinces of China) that it is not dotted with them to the top. No city lacks them, within and without its walls; only the compactest parts of the compact cities are without them. They vary in shape and form, as everything varies in China. The saying is that "in ten miles everything is different," and it certainly is so with the graves. Near Shanghai this eruption on the face of nature took the form of shapeless mounds of earth, perhaps six feet long by three feet wide and three or four feet high. There are coffins had been put on the ground and covered over with dirt. Farther along, toward Soochow and the Grand Canal, the graves were brick affairs, round-topped, and square at the ends. In the other direction, at and near Cha-pu, on the coast, they were often vaults of earth faced with stone and surrounded with a horseshoe or broken circle of earth-work. Some of these had three doorways, and looked like triple bake-ovens. But down Cha-pu way many of the graves were perfect little houses of brick, with tile roofs, and even with roofs whose corners were bent up in grand style. There are graveyards in China, family or village graveyards, that look like mere disturbances of the earth, where acres have been turned up into mounds or covered with brick ovens, and there are graveyards that are solemnly planted with a row of trees. But, as a rule, the farmers bury their dead in their rice and cotton fields or among their mulberry-trees, and the poor buy or lease a resting-place for their departed upon the acres of some wealthier man. I don't know whether it be true or not, but I was told that the graves are kept, or let alone, until a change of dynasty occurs, and when they are razed, and China begins over again to preempt a great fraction of her surface for her dead. If so, it is time for a change of dynasty, because a vast portion of the soil is lost to the farmers, who otherwise cultivate almost every foot of it. And the graves are in all stages of rack and ruin and disorder. At one time you see scores of tombs whose ends have been worn down by the elements or have fallen out so as to show the coffin ends or an outbreak of skulls and bones. There is nothing that is possible that you do not see, even to disclosures of great earthern jars full of bones, where the original graves and coffins have worn away. There the bones have been reinterred in pots, and these in turn have been exposed by the careless hand of time. You see bare coffins set out in the rice-fields because the mourners were too poor to brick them over, and you see tens of thousands of coffins merely covered over with thatched straw. You see the grand tombs of mandarins taking up half a mile of the earth. First there are the granite steps leading to a splendid triple arch all beautifully carved. Then follows the stately approach to the tomb—a wide avenue bordered by trees, and set with lions and warriors, horses and sages, all hewn out of stone. Finally the tomb itself, on a hill-side if possible, stares down the avenue at all these costly ornaments. But it must be that most of these monuments are to men long dead—perhaps to men of distant ages. Therefore most of them are falling to pieces. Some are merely beginning to crumble, some are waste places with broken suggestions of what they were, and some have been invaded by farmers and by the populace, with the result that you see portions of the once grand arch set in a near-by bridge or used as steps to a water-side tea-house."—Harper's Magazine.

FRED DOUGLASS.—Fred Douglass, though very sensative on the subject of any distinction drawn between negroes and mulattoes to the disparagement of the former, was always ready to crack a joke on his own color. He often laughed over a witticism of Mrs. Fred Grant's at his expense, when they met at the Chicago convention of 1888. "The convention had been in session several days, and there had been some balloting the day before," he said, relating the story to a friend. "I was sitting with Mrs. Grant and her party watching the balloting. To my surprise one vote was cast for me for President of the United States. It had no sooner been announced by the tellers than Mrs. Grant turned to me and with the most charming smile imaginable, said: '"You must be the dark horse of this convention, Mr. Douglass."' FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 16, 1895.

It isn't often that a man breaks into states prison, yet that's what a man did at Wethersfield, Ct, one night last week, and made off with the warden's horse and carriage.

There is hope that Massachusetts may sometime be rid of the gypsy moth. Miss Ormerod, an eminent entomologist who has been studying in Europe, writes that the moth has been exterminated in that country.

Things are sometimes divided most unequally in this world. A Palmer man who stole a six-dollar harness the other day got a month in jail, while the treasurer of South Dakota stole $350,000 and got two years. In which case did the "punishment fit the crime"?

A Fire department which cannot get a steamer out of the house and a quarter of a mile to a fire and get a stream in less than forty minutes is about as good as no protection at all, as the town of Warren has found to its sorrow. It would seem that the department there needs a pretty sharp overhauling.

When $60,000 can be raised for foreign missions in one day at one place, as Rev. Dr. A. B. Simpson of New York did at Old Orchard, Me., last Sunday, it shows that the seekers after pleasure and comfort these hot days have not altogether lost sight of their fellow mortals in less enlightened portions of the globe.

A Bookkeeper at Cleveland, O, was discovered to be $6000 short in his accounts the other day, and was arrested and taken to jail, where the thought of his disgrace had such a depressing effect that he died in a short time. There are too many persons whom wrongdoing never shocks until they are found out.

It has been proposed to take the Liberty bell from Philadelphia to the cotton exposition in Atlanta, but some of the citizens oppose the scheme and have got out an injunction against its removal. What objection there can be to allowing other portions of the country a sight of the historic bell it is hard to imagine.

There can be no doubt about the motive underlying the appointment of Mr. Herlihy for postmaster at Monson; it was for political services. Of two candidates, — either perfectly capable and both of undoubted fitness, — one has the indorsement of the great proportion of the business men and merchants, but has been no politician; the other has been a well-known party worker, and gets the place.

The Boston Standard, the organ of the A. P. A., has come to the conclusion that it has no further use for Governor Greenhalge, and after looking into the matter has discovered that no veteran, no temperance man, no citizen of Boston, no member of a patriotic fraternity, no broad-minded man, no farmer, no gentleman, can consistently support him another term. What a lot of inconsistency there will be loose in Massachusetts on the 4th of November!

The good work in behalf of the farming classes in the last Legislature by H. E. Wallis of Holland, who represented the 10th district and was chairman of the House committee on agriculture, has led many of that class throughout the district to hope that he might be returned this year, when his experience of last winter would materially aid in advancing the interests of the farmers at the coming session. And not alone in his own district have his abilities been recognized; letters have come to this office from those outside prominent in agricultural pursuits, which have expressed the wish that he might represent those interests again at Boston. Brimfield has been conceded the right to name the candidate in the 10th district this year, and it is not at all likely that the voters would be willing to take up a man outside their own town.

There would be little to criticise in the A. P. A. if it lived up to and not beyond the principles which Dr. Dunn, the head of the organization in Massachusetts, announces are those of the order:

> Restriction of immigration, extension of the time for naturalization, an educational qualification for the suffrage, one general non-sectarian free public school system, no public funds or property for sectarian purposes, the taxation of all property not owned or controlled by the public, the opening to official inspection of all the public schools, convents, monasteries and places of a reformatory charcter, no support given for any official public position to any person who recognizes supreme alligance in civil affairs to any foreign or ecclesiastical power, American lands for American settlers.

If these are the only intentions of the order, then many of its members are over zealous, and whole lodges and entire sections are acting on entirely different lines, going far beyond these simple and entirely worthy sentiments, and should be "called down" by the supreme body, lest they cast discredit on the order and give it a false position in the eyes of the public. But the above principles are only fragments of what the order is generally supposed to be working for, and indeed what the action of its members warrant one to suppose the aims to be.

A Convincing argument in favor of better roads appears in O. P. Allen's article on the life of the Old Centre of the town, published last week. In 1796 the place was on the decline, when suddenly it began to improve most wonderfully, and the historian says that "The real cause of the revival of prosperity was the inauguration of the first turnpike in Massachusetts," which ran through the place. The route had for some time been used by post riders, but "When the road had been put in condition for stages, a new impetus was given to enterprise." People could then travel in comfort, compared with the previous modes of conveyance What was true 100 years ago will be found equally forcible now. It is true that people do not go long journeys by stage in this section, but there is much travel for pleasure, and it is invariably in the direction which embraces the best roads and consequently the greatest comfort for the pleasure-seeker. The back-district town with rough and uneven roads gets few transient visitors, and attracts no business enterprise to its borders. After many years of delay Palmer has at last awakened to the benefits of good roads, and has instructed the official in charge of the highways to commence permanent road building this year. May another spring see the sum allowed this year for this purpose quadrupled in amount; it will be money in the pockets of the taxpayers in the long run.

While the majority of the wheelman are careful of the rights of others in the road, occasionally some fool turns up who thinks the earth and the fullness thereof belongs to him who rides a wheel, and an aggravated case of this kind materialized on West Main street a few evenings ago. A lady was walking near the Point of Rocks when she heard the rattle of a bicycle bell; thinking it came from a wheel which had just passed she paid no attention to it, when suddenly a rider came from behind and dismounting near her angrily demanded why she didn't get out of the way, at the same time asking in decidedly uncivil tones if she didn't know that the sidewalks outside the village belonged to wheelmen and that pedestrians were supposed to look out and not get in their way. The lady stated that she was not aware of such an order of things, but made no denial of his statements, he meanwhile continuing his abuse. It is a pity that the fellow isn't known, that a lesson in manners, as well as one regarding the laws of the road and bicycles, might be given him. The law prohibiting riding on sidewalks says that paths outside the thickly portions of the villages shall not be considered sidewalks, and while the place where the above occurred is not bordered by houses, the walk there is as much of a sidewalk as many places in more thickly settled portions of the village, and though wheelmen have been accustomed to use it without protest to avoid a bad piece of road, they have no right there, and are liable to get into trouble, especially if they use it as this fellow did. There are few of his class, however.

PALMER NEWS.

Trouble in the Fire District.

The warrant for a special meeting of the fire district is found in another column, the principal business being to see what action the district will take toward paying for hose bought for the use of the department. There seems to be a clashing between the prudential committee and the chief engineer. At the annual meeting of the fire district a sum of money was appropriated to buy hose to replace that which was worn out and worthless. Time went on and no hose appeared. At last Chief Engineer Bills, knowing that he would be crippled for the want of hose if he had a big fire to handle, ordered 300 feet of hose. The bill was presented to the prudential committee and they refused to order it paid. The decision of the district is now asked in the matter.

Mr. Bills, he chief engineer, states that it was suggested to him by one of the prudential committee that when he got ready to buy hose he consult with the committee; he did not consider this an official notification, however. At a meeting of the committee he was given permission to buy what small supplies he needed for the engine house, but was told emphatically by one member of the committee, in the presence of the rest, that he had no authority to buy hose; to this statement the other two members of the committee made no comment. Rumors came to the chief that the prudential committee had said that it should not buy the hose, not deeming it necessary. Mr. Bilis did not consider that he had enough hose to successfully handle a large fire, and knowing that he would be blamed by the property owners if caught with a scant supply, ordered the 300 feet.

The prudential committee says that the chief engineer was notified to bring in samples of hose when he needed that which the district had voted to buy, and consult with the committee. He made no move in this direction and finally bought the hose without mentioning the matter to them, the first they knew of it being when the bill was presented for payment. The committee has little to say regrading the matter, except that their side of the case and the whole matter will be brought to light at the proper time.

Ho For Watch Hill.

From present indications the Merchants' Excursion next Tuesday to Watch Hill will be a grand success. All appear to have taken hold of the matter in earnest, and a large attendance seems assured. On every hand through the business section appear signs which say "We close all day Tuesday, August 20th, to attend the Palmer Business Men's Excursion," and it is expected that every store in town will be closed on that day. The mills will not close, but any employe who wishes to go on the excursion can do so by asking off. This is the case in the other villages also, where most of the stores have agreed to close. A special train will leave at 7.50 in the morning, carrying the party without stop to New London, where a delightful sail of an hour will be had before Watch Hill is reached. There four hours and a half will elapse before the return of the boat to New London, giving ample time for a shore dinner, bathing, fishing, etc. A special train will bring the party back again, and a special train will take Thorndike patrons home on their arrival at Palmer.

A Good Record of Travel.

People who had occasion to drive past the farm of C. T. Brainerd on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday wondered what the boy who sat by the side of the road under the shade of an apple tree was doing He was sent there by the state highway commission to keep count of the teams and bicycles which passed over the road in either direction, the commission desiring to know how much travel there was over the strip where the town would like the state road built. He was on duty from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, and in the three days he was there recorded 283 light carriages, 65 express wagons and 118 bicycles; besides these there were many heavy loads, both single and double teams, but the exact number could not be learned. A careful record was kept of what the wagons were loaded with, and a good showing was made. In many places where a strip of state highway has been built the average is only about 25 light teams per day—here it was nearly a hundred.

A Heavy Sentence.

Ernest M. Lord of Three Rivers was before the district court Monday charged with keeping a common nuisance at that place. The evidence was that before given in the matter of the liquor raid at his place on the night of the 3d of July, when a crowd of men were found in the place, with one drinking at the bar, and a seizure was made, and the court imposed a fine of $75 and a jail term of three months. Between Lord's arrest in July and the date of his trial for illegal liquor keeping, he talked much about settling the case, but before the trial had developed a sudden streak and decided to fight it. He was more stubborn than ever last week when arrested for keeping a nuisance, and declined to give bail, going to jail to await trial on Monday; but he came down off his high horse after the court had imposed sentence, and gave bail for his appearance at the higher court, after appealing the case. His trial on the second charge of illegal liquor keeping will be held next Monday.

At last something is likely to be done about changing the grade crossing of the New London Northern road near the Ferrell place on the way to Three Rivers. One of the contractors of the town has been asked by the railroad official to put in a bid for doing the work, the request being coupled with the statement that they were ready to go ahead with the job at once.

At the annual town meeting it was voted to build a sewer in Three Rivers from a point above the station of the Athol road to the river. On looking over the ground the selectmen have found that the railway roadbed is an important factor in making the sewer necessary, holding the water back and turning it until when it is allowed to cross the track there is a considerable volume of it, and they have asked the railroad officials to contribute towards the cost of the sewer.

It is supposed that many are being used to preserve ketchup and bottle root beer, and the penalty is from five cents to $5 per bottle, or imprisonment from ten days to three months. Persons having such bottles should not make use of them, and should return them at once to some dealer.

A Bit of Autobiography.

Editor Journal:—A beautifully printed copy of the "History and Manual of the Second Congregational Church" of Palmer lies on my table, from Mr. O. P. Allen, clerk of the church, containing many names and records with which I was familiar in my early ministry, together with a sketch of the growth and development of the church for nearly fifty years.

One of the chapters gives a record of the music of the church, of which it says, "The music department of the church deserves more than a passing notice, for it is an important factor in worship. It was the leader's custom to invite the young people to engage in singing exercises during the week, by which means a knowledge of music was developed and fresh material furnished for use." That is just where so many churches and leaders err and fail in a most important duty, viz: giving the young people and the whole congregation an opportunity to learn new tunes, instead of always singing the old ones, when new and superior ones at the same opening are passed by because no opportunity is given to learn them. Well do I remember the church music of those early days, and I have in my barrel (or pile) a sermon on the subject preached more than fifty years ago in the old church at the Center. It was also delivered in several other churches of the neighborhood on exchanges with the pastors. I have just been looking over that old sermon and wondering what would be thought of it now. It covered thirty-six pages of large size, and must have occupied more than an hour in the delivery. One elderly man in particular, who had raised a family of singers, among whom were Abner Allen and Mrs. Delphia (Allen) Davis, rises before me as I write, just as he gazed at me and took in every word I uttered with the most eager attention and, as he afterwards told me, with entire satisfaction. From that day to this the subject of church music has been one of absorbing interest to me, and I have written and spoken on it in various places, as a pastor and as a retired minister, generally with acceptance and approval, occasionally with some dissent and disapproval. Religious music being of vital interest to me personally and religiously, a source of special edification and delight, or of disappointment and regret, it has been quite natural for me to speak of it with freedom according as it has seemed to me in accord or otherwise with the high spiritual nature and design of the service. I have not been unduly critical and severe, but simply sought to present the subject in its true religious aspects, as accepted and taught by the most competent judges of sacred music. It has been my privilege to see and hear and know personally some of our most eminent American composers, Lowell Mason, Thomas Hastings, H. K. Oliver, H. R. Palmer, W. F. Sherwin and others; I have also known by correspondence and otherwise, several compilers of our best hymn and tune books; and I am sure that they all agree in the main design that the song service of the churches should be spiritual and worshipful, and the artistic idea kept entirely secondary and subordinate to the devotional, in which the congregation can join heartily and intelligently. Have we not, in too many cases, widely and sadly overlooked and departed from this high and true standard?

One of our retired Congregational preachers, who loved to write sermons better than I ever did, on retiring from the pastorate, had thirty written sermons that had never been preached! (some of them must be rather "dry" by this time, I suspect, Brother B.) I have scarcely one that has not been preached, some of them several times, here and there. I have, however, several articles on church music that have never been printed, because I feared they would not be kindly received by some whom I would gladly please and help in this important part of public worship. But why may not one who has made the subject a life-long study, who loves good music and good singers and players on instruments, who no longer has access to the public and the churches vocally, in his quiet retreat, with the incessant songs of birds and insects reminding him of the early days when, a la Coleridge, frankly and kindly show his opinion without disturbing anyone's peace, leaving the way open for different views, if anyone has them to present in the same frank and kindly spirit? If not, why not? M. K. C.

> "Life went a Maying with Nature, Hope and Poesy,"

Base Ball Notes.

Chapman has returned from his vacation in Rhode Island.

The Thorndikes will play at Ware to-morrow with their old-time rivals.

Riley and Dart kept up their good work on Saturday in the Westfield game.

The Thorndikes will probably play two games at Southbridge on Labor Day.

Another victory from Westfield! Well, Well! Pretty good record; keep it up, boys!

The second team of this place was defeated at West Warren by a score of 13 to 11 on Saturday.

Heavy hitting at Westfield was what won the game, and the boys had a good chance to fat up their batting averages.

The club is gaining quite a reputation outside of town, and their present record shows that they are desiring of the same.

The Stars, whose ages average 14, would like to hear from clubs in the other villages. The team is composed of the following players: Riley, Hurley, Gingras, Rouilard, Oryeall, Care, the Smith Brothers and Murphy. The club expects to play at Ludlow to-morrow afternoon.

The game here on Saturday last between two local clubs on the up-town grounds was an old-fashioned game, and was full of amusement while it lasted. "Alex" proved himself no mean base runner, and "Willie" was much disappointed at not being able to score. The batteries were Hulling and Foster, Pare and Lynch. Only two innings were played, the score being 3 to 0 in favor of Captain Fleming's side. There is no doubt but Captain Dufresne will want another crack at his opponents before the winter sets in.

Thorndikes 14—Westfields 13.

The home team went to Westfield on Saturday and played a very close and exciting game, the features of which were the heavy hitttng of the Thorndikes, Riley, Kelliher, Dart, Gay, Longtine and Murdock excelling. Ensworth also batted well for the home team. Riley and Dart did good battery work for Thorndike, and Longtine played a good game in the field. The score:

Wanted, experienced saleslady. None need apply without having a knowledge of the business. T. H. Todd.

MONSON.

Monson's New Postmaster.

On Monday evening the news of the appointment of John P. Herlihy, Jr., as postmaster was received here. The JOURNAL representative called on Mr. Herlihy at his home on Pearl street and informed him of the fact. He was pleased to have the matter settled at this early date, and said: "I shall do the best I can for the good of the service. I have no friends to reward, no enemies to punish."

Mr. Herlihy is the son of John P. and Elizabeth Herlihy, and was born in Monson in 1855. He was educated in the public schools and Monson Academy, leaving the latter in 1874. He soon entered the employ of C. E. Bills, at the "Corner Store," and later helped to start O'Brien Bros. in the grocery business, and has for some years worked in the blocking department of Heimann & Lichten's straw goods manufactory. In 1887 he was married to Miss Kate Connor. He has been an assessor four terms, and was a candidate for representative in 1891, when he carried the town by 101 majority, and is with one exception the only Democrat who has carried the town for that office since the present district was formed.

In the beginning of President Cleveland's present term local Democrats looked with longing eyes upon the office of postmaster, and although no fault could be found with the late Gilbert W. Farrington, several other men were perfectly willing to supersede him simply on the ground that he was a "holdover," and petitions were circulated by these men or their friends, and it was thought at that time that if a change were made Mr. Herlihy would be the lucky man. So strong was the support of both men, however, that not until about March 1st of this year was a decision reached, Mr. Farrington won the day. When his death occurred, June 26th, Herbert W. Shaw was made acting postmaster according to the requirements of the law, and petitions were circulated by friends of Carlos L. Peck and Mr. Herlihy for their appointment to the office. Mr. Peck's petition was signed very generally by the business men and patrons of the office in both the Republican and Democratic parties, and by four out of seven of the Democratic town committee. Mr. Herlihy also received a generous indorsement in town, and being well known in political circles, had a strong backing of influential friends in other parts of the state. That he will make a good postmaster, and that Monson's needs will be well looked after under his regime, there is no doubt.

W. N. Flynt is trying to arrange a novel gathering to take place on his park the last of August or the first week of September. He wants every man in Monson 70 years or older to be present, and proposes to have all their pictures taken in a group. A stenographer will be present to take down the stories told as to what Monson was in their boyhood. This, together with the photograph, will be most valuable for the Monson historical society. Mr. Flynt says he will arrange a light lunch for the party, similar to what they indulged in 50 years ago.

Three engineers are at work locating the grades and establishing boundaries for the state highway, and the work of building the road will begin very soon. The road will be cut down at Harrison C. Day's, in front of the Heery property, and at the north factory, and will be filled in front of the Moriarty property. M. L. Ladd of Norwich will furnish the steam roller and other machinery. Not a large force of men will be needed. The road will be closed as soon as work begins, and with a view to this Eastlake avenue has been hardened and otherwise improved.

The Palmer Agricultural Society offers good premiums for double and single carriage horses, also for heavy and light teams, at their fair September 17th and 18th. Monson is well equipped in this direction and it is hoped a good showing will be made. The society is trying this year to make the fair a success, and what would we do were it not for our farmers? All should try and help the good work along. The Monson members are playing a prominent part in this year's management, something they should have done long ago. In next week's paper we will give a list of the horses in the above classes which should compete—they are a good lot.

G. A. Beale has been in town this week in the interests of the New England Telephone Company, and has met with great success in securing patrons to a proposed exchange in this place, the central office to be in Flynt's store, and a pay station to be located below the post office for the convenience of down-street people. The company is desirous of putting in thirty instruments, and has already these subscribers: R. M. & Theodore Reynolds 5, D. W. Ellis & Son, Dr. G. E Fuller, Monson House, Savings Bank, F. E. The Knowles Pump Works Badly Damaged by Fire.—Loss $175,000.

The most disastrous fire since the burning of the Sayles & Jenks mill three years ago occurred last Friday evening, when the iron foundry of the Knowles pump works was destroyed, together with a pattern house and many valuable patterns, the sand house, the scratch house, and the Knowles hose house. The loss is $175,000, covered by insurance. About 150 men are thrown out of employment, though some of them have been given work at the plant of the company in East Cambridge.

The fire started about 8 45, in a small foundry, and is supposed to have caught in a pile of flasks from a hot casting. At the time of its discovery the watchman had just completed his round, and was in another part of the works where he could not see the fire. The building was very dry, the fire spread rapidly through the ventilator in the roof, and soon the whole structure was a roaring mass of flames. The fire department was slow in getting out and slower in getting to work, and it was over half an hour before it was ready to play on the flames. The West Warren fire department was summoned 15 minutes after the alarm was given, and had a stream on the fire only ten minutes later than the Warren company. In the meantime the Knowles hose company devoted its efforts to saving the main shop, and succeeded in doing so. The large fire pump at the shop did good work, furnishing six or eight large streams at one time. The fire was under control at 10 o'clock, but streams were kept playing on the ruins all night.

Many valuable patterns were burned, including models for parts of the engines of several of the United States cruisers,—the Columbia, New York, Minneapolis, Boston, and the Ammen ram Katahdin; also patterns for the waterworks at St. Louis, Chicago, Charlottesville, N. C., and other cities, and for a large mine near Leadville, Col. The pumps for the last named place are needed at once, and the delay caused by the burning of the patterns will cause much inconvenience and considerable loss. In addition to these special losses, nearly all of the patterns used in the construction of pumps which are regularly carried in stock, were burned, entailing a loss which will be considerable.

The inefficiency of the fire department is the occasion of much talk about town, and the selectmen are blamed more or less for it. There have previously been five fire engineers, three in Warren and two in West Warren; they received a salary of $25 a year each, and there were about 20 firemen who were paid $12 a year each. Last May the selectmen reduced the number of engineers to three, two in Warren and one in West Warren, two of them new men; the old member of the board then resigned, and the department was left to the care of two inexperienced men. The men who had charge of the engine were evidently not perfectly familiar with it, and could not get the best results from it.

The works will be rebuilt as soon possible A meeting of citizens was held Tuesday night and resolutions expressing regret, and desires of cooperation in rebuilding, passed, and forwarded to a meeting of the directors of the company in New York Wednesday.

There is to be a Jubilee Festival at the Town Hall in Dana next Friday evening. The entertainment will consist of fine singing by a minstrel troupe, and a "Trilby Sale, the greatest feat of the age." There will be a supper, and also ice cream and cake.

The ball game on the pumping station grounds last Saturday between the Gilbertvilles and Wares was well attended, and was of interest till the eighth inning, when the dissatisfaction of the players brought the game to a close. The score, at that time, was in favor of Ware, 8 to 6. The rivalry between these teams is strong, and there is talk of arranging a series of games to be played for a cash prize.

The Metalline Shoe Company, of which C. P. Nelson is the originator, was incorporated on Monday under the laws of the state with a paid up capital of $20,000. C. C. Hitchcock and F. M. Sibley are large owners, the former being president and the latter treasurer of the company. A. L. Howes will continue as general manager, and the shoes will for the present be manufactured at Lynn as heretofore, but a little later the company may seek a new location. The company now has out four traveling men, and they are meeting with excellent success. The patent was granted Mr. Nelson for some process that renders the sole leather absolutely impervious to water, while it is more pliable than before treated.

Boy Drowned.

Arthur Lattinville, aged 19, was drowned in the Ware river opposite Eaton's Grove on Monday afternoon. He was in bathing with a companion, when it is supposed he had a cramp, as he called for help, but before help could be given he sank from sight. Men were soon at work with grappling irons, and two divers with suits were here looking for the body, but without success until Tuesday afternoon, when the water was drawn and the body discovered and taken to Gray's undertaking rooms, after being viewed by Medical Examiner W. W. Miner. The parents of the young man live on Otis avenue, and he was employed as a weaver in the Otis Company's mill. The body was taken to Spencer for burial on Wednesday morning.

Three dollars and seventy-five cents would hardly pay for the material used in these all-wool black serge separate dress skirts, but we've a new lot of about fifty to sell at that price. They were the proudest $5 skirts to be had, early in the season—lined throughout, of course, and fine fitting—$3.75.

The Linen Sale.

Ought to be as good a linen week this week as last, because the assortments are still whole. Not a break as yet in the magnificent lot. But after everything is gone there'll be a thousand women who meant to have come, but delayed. Will you be one of them? Linens are going now for less money than they will at any time this year again, probably.

Shoes.

No one else, in these parts, we venture to say is so liberally supplied with the seasonable kinds of shoes and oxfords for women and children. Every good shoe that we know of and care to keep is here; and the dollar's worth that we give for a dollar is just as big and as splendid as ever. So far we have sold hundreds and hundreds of pairs of oxford ties; but hundreds and hundreds more have taken their places, and the stock still presents an unbroken front. Every sort and kind of material; every shape of toe; every worthy quality. Pay about a dollar for neat serviceable oxfords—a dollar fifty if you like—two dollars—three—more for very fine material and finish.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

At midnight, in his guarded tent,
The Turk was dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knee in suppliance bent,
Would tremble at his power;
And in his dreams the forman fell
Before his blade's fell stroke,
And everything had come his way—
And then the baby woke.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

An Old-Fashioned Girl.

There's an old-fashioned girl in an old-fashioned street,
Dressed in old-fashioned clothes from her head to her feet;
And she spends all her time in an old-fashioned way,
A caring for poor people's children all day.

She never has been to cotillion or ball,
And she knows not the style of the spring or the fall;
Two hundred a year will suffice for her needs,
And an old-fashioned Bible is all that she reads.

And she has an old-fashioned heart that is true
To a fellow who died in an old coat of blue,
With its buttons a'l brass,—who is waiting above
For the woman who loved him with old-fashioned love.

A RHODE ISLAND CLAMBAKE.

The first thing we do after getting an order is to find out the outside number of people to be served, and then we reckon on the basis of letting each man have one pound of fish, one pound of chicken, one of lobster, one-half pound of tripe, three crabs, three ears of corn, several medium-sized white and sweet potatoes. Then we count on a watermelon being enough for 10 people and a quart of ice cream doing service for five. As for the clams, they go with everything, and we reckon on 1½ bushels of clams for every person there.

Of course, no one eats that amount of clams. If ever you've been to a bake you must remember how they are continually shouting for "hot clams!" "hot clams!" So we serve them piping hot all the time and they throw the cold clams away.

We count on about 100 loaves of brown bread for a thousand people, 150 loaves of wheat bread, and about 16 or 18 gallons of our sauce, using for the latter about 130 pounds of butter. Then, in putting all these eatables up we use hundreds of yards of cheesecloth, and fully 200 pounds of larding pork.

The fish and chickens are thoroughly cleaned, and each fish and each chicken carefully wrapped up separately in cheesecloth. In every package, too, is put a square of larding pork, all prepared and salted to give flavor. Enough tripe for five people is put into other cheesecloth bags, with the lobsters, crabs and corn are also wrapped up in the same way. Then it is all sent to the grove to wait the arrival of our men. Other arrangements, of course, are made about the watermelons and ice cream.

Then comes the baking, which is always done in a big open field on a bed of hot stones, about 25 feet in circumference. It is a job making this bed in the early summer, but it is good for the entire season. It consists merely of a load of paving stones mixed with oak and shavings. About this bed a circle of tables is placed to facilitate putting the bake on the fire and also the serving of it to the waiters.

The real baking only takes a little over half an hour, but the fire has to be started fully eight hours before the bake is to be served. Once the fire is started we have nothing to do until the bed is ready to receive the bake. This is as soon as the stones get white with heat and commence to crack open. Then the bake is put on. My men rake off the ashes that have accumulated on top off the bed of stones, and a sheet of sea weed is put on the hot stones.

This is done for two reasons. One is to prevent the clams falling into the crevices between the stones, and the other is to make steam.

On top of the seaweed we put the clams. Then come the lobsters, the crabs and the corn. I forgot to mention that half of the husks of the corn are left on them, for fear that the kernels will burn. Then, on top of the corn comes the chickens, the tripe, the fish, and last of all, the potatoes, both sweet and white, the latter with their coats on. The potatoes are scattered to the outer edges of the hot bed, because they do not need as much heat as the other food, and then over the whole bake is put a big sheet of canvas to keep in the steam. For this purpose we sometimes use the whole mainsail of a schooner.

Our men are so clever at putting on the bake, and the preparations are generally so perfect that this work is done in about five minutes. For the actual cooking we allow about 35 minutes more. Then they begin handing the food off the stones to the waiters, who rush with it to the hungry crowds, whose appetites have been stimulated to a sharp edge by the delightful aroma from the bake. We have to be careful to see that the diners are placed just right. If they are too far away the food gets cold bringing it to them, and if they are too near the heat from the bed of stones makes it uncomfortably warm.—New York World.

SCIENTIFIC LIVING.—Parent—"Why do you advise against my boy Willie using a slate and pencil in school?"

Dabster In Science—"Because they are covered with deadly microbes, that would undoubtedly kill your boy if he lived long enough."

Parent (much impressed)—"Then I suppose I had better get him a paper pad to do his sums on?"

Dabster In Science—"My dear sir, do you want to commit deliberate murder? There are millions of bacilli in every page of paper made."

Parent (anxiously)—"Well, how will he do his sums then? In his mind?"

Dabster In Science—"Worse yet. It has been found that abstract introspective thought over imaginary problems stimulates the growth of lethal bacteria in the brain cells. If you want your Willie to live, you had better keep him in a room sprayed with antiseptic vapor."—New York Tribune.

ROMANCE AND REALITY.—"Yes," said he, "life is so lonely."

"It is lonely sometimes," she answered.

"Wouldn't it be sweet to have a little cottage covered with ivy and honeysuckle and roses?"

"Oh, wouldn't it?"

"And when a fellow comes home tired from business to have a nice little wife to meet him at the door with a kiss?"

"Y-e-e-s."

"And then the summer nights? The windows open, the sunset just giving light enough in the cozy parlor, and—you—I mean a wife at the piano—singing in the gloaming. It would be lovely!"

"I—think—it—would—be—nice."

"And then"—

At this point a careworn woman came round the corner with a pair of twins in a perambulator. A dead silence fell upon the air for a little. Then they changed the subject.—London Tid-Bits.

Was taken with la grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. THE LORD'S PRAYER.

The following is told of Mr. Booth, the American tragedian: Booth and several friends had been invited to dine with an old gentleman in Baltimore, of distinguished kindness, urbanity and piety. The host, though disapproving of theaters and theater going, had heard so much of Booth's remarkable powers that curiosity to see the man had, in this instance, overcome all his scruples. After dinner was over, lamps lighted, and the company reseated in the drawing room, someone requested Booth as a particular favor, and one which all present would, doubtless, appreciate, to read aloud the "Lord's Prayer". Booth expressed his willingness to afford them this gratification, all eyes were turned expectantly upon him. Booth rose slowly and reverently from his chair. It was wonderful to watch the play of emotion that convulsed his countenance. He became deathly pale, and his eyes, turned tremblingly upwards, were wet with tears. As yet he had not spoken. The silence could be felt. It became absolutely painful, until at last the spell was broken as if by an electric shock, as the rich-toned voice from white lips, syllabled forth, "Our Father who art in heaven," etc., with a pathos and fervid solemnity that thrilled all hearts. He finished. The silence continued. Not a voice was heard nor a muscle moved in his astonished audience, until from the corner of the room a subdued sob was heard, and the old gentleman (their host) stepped forth with streaming eyes and tottering frame, and seizing Booth by the hand,—"Sir," said he, in broken accents, "You have afforded me a pleasure for which for which my whole future life will feel grateful. I am an old man, and every day from boyhood to this time, I thought I had repeated the Lord's Prayer; but I never heard it before—never!"—Ex.

Look at that brownstone mansion across the way!" moodily exclaimed the man with the shaggy hair. "It's owned, likely as not, by some darned plutocrat that never did a day's work in his life. He got it by speculating in real estate or gambling in grain, or it came to him from some rich father. If he didn't get it that way he cheated somebody out of it. Everyboly is out for boodle these days, anyway! There isn't any chance for an honest man, and if a fellow's poor he'd better be dead. There ought to be a new deal all round. By George, the burdens of society ain't equally distributed! Some of us has had more than our share of them, and we've put up with it just about as long as we're going to. Some of these days you'll see'— "Jasper," broke in his wife, "I wish you would carry the baby a little while. I'm tired out!"—Chicago Tribune.

AT MASON'S, PALMER.

Poor Human Nature.

I'd like to see one true and perfect man
Who never slipped in life's forbidding race,
Whose work has been according to the plan
So plainly mapped for fitting every case—
Just one whose gentle footsteps never ran
Astray. I'd like to look in such a face,
And homage pay in songs of jubileee
To human nature, good as it could be.

I've seen good people underneath the sun
Who did as well as anybody could;
Some cheerfully, gladly, and always full of fun,
And others sad, and almost goody good;
But, man or woman, not a single one
Who always did as they exactly should.
Some have one fault, and some, of course, another,
The nearest perfect is my good old mother.

One at the church is always to be found,
Ready to speak the praises of the Master,
His words with logic tearfully profound,
His object to avert a world's disaster;
Yet in the business marts he hustles round,
And has, perhaps, on many homes a plaster,
His heart pulsating for the joys of Heaven
Only, exclusively, one day in seven.

I see another equally devout,
But full of vanity almost to scorning;
He has sought righteousness beyond a doubt,
Nor fears the awful resurrection morning.
But vanity he cannot live without,
And thinks too much of personal adorning,
Against which failing very much was said
By one who had not where to lay his head.

Man has been frail, and weak and halt and blind,
And prone to go astray from the beginning;
So much so it is very hard to find
One who has always struck a pace that's winning.
The very best, according to my mind,
Are subject to degrees of hateful sinning,
And when one goes where grace cannot restore him,
I'll not condemn, but just feel sorry for him.

HILDA KELLET'S TWO LOVERS.

Of the old folks of the bleak little seaport, Andrew Copley dwells most vividly in my memory. As prosperity is gauged at Port St. Bede, Andrew—the owner of some half-dozen fully equipped fishing smacks—was accounted a prosperous man. I recall him now—his kindly face, tanned and netted in wrinkles; his long hair, grizzled this many a day; his stubby gray beard; his light blue eyes bespectacled for reading—yes, there he sits. Many is the 'crack' I have had with him; yet there was one story he chose to leave buried in silence—and that, his own. I never dared broach the topic, albeit I inwardly burned with impatient curiosity. One day, however, the history became mine unsolicited. Some remark I chanced to let slip anent his lifelong bachelorhood caused an infrequent far-away look to settle upon his eyes. We were walking the steep, cobble-paved 'street,' at the time, past the lime-washed front of the Trawlers' inn, to the higher ground from which the old Norman church tower kept ward over the slumberous village.

"Why ha'e I never married, say ye?" the old man exclaimed, after a long spell of sisence. "Like enow, ye'll hear afore long, an' I don't see what should stop me fro' telling ye mysen, if so be—" Hurriedly stepping into the roadway, Andrew whipped off his broad-brimmed hat and stood motionless. Turning into the sandy lane that zigzagged past the church, we had well-nigh jostled two slow-paced women, the younger of them about fifty years of age; the elder twenty years or so older. It was the latter that attracted my marked regard, for it was toward her that Andrew held his down-bent head. A wan, frail-looking creature she was, dressed in black, with a close-fitting, old-fashioned bonnet tied under her chin in a bow of broad black ribbon. Her hair smoothed evenly upon her forehead, shimmered silvery, as the new churned foam in the bay. She moved haltingly, even with the aid of an oaken staff and the helping arm of her companion.

Withdrawing her arm, she paused in the pathway and pointed her stick towards the bare-headed old fisherman. In thin, quavering tones, as if the words were said by rote, there being no vehemence in her utterance, she cried: "Ah, I knaw ye—I knaw ye. Ban ye, for no speakin' me fair." With no more passion than if she was repeating some soulless formula, she added: "Curse ye, Andrew Copley! It was a lie! Curse ye for 't!"

"Come awa'," the other woman put in coaxingly, "come thee awa' home, then."

Unresisting, the old lady allowed herself to be led away. Through it all, Andrew did not stir a limb, but stood there with doffed hat, his head bowed, and his mane of gray hair ruffling in the breeze. We had left the church behind, the deep-rutted lane, the narrow stone stile that gave upon the fields; we had traversed half the length of the meadows themselves before he spoke. "Ye asked me how 'twas I never married," said he slowly. "That's the reason."

So he began upon his life-story. But as his narrative would be hard to follow if I adhered to his exact words, with his numerous digressions and irrelevances, uttered with quaint burr of tongue, and, moreover, his modesty saw fit to gloss over certain facts which I heard of later in other quarters, I venture to set it forth after my own fashion.

We hark back a full half century. Port St. Bede—no vast size at this present—was then a mere nest of sandstone shale-roofed cottages, planted at the foot of the hill, and straggling disjointedly up it to form the "street." Later improvements have displaced or rebuilt most of these one-storied dwellings, and filled in the gaps; but the old "Trawlers' inn" looks just as it looked fifty years ago. It lies back some ten paces from the roadway, the shingled space thus obtained being highly favored of loungers and gossips. The spot served an identical purpose so far back as the oldest memory goes.

A little knot of fisher-folk, men and women, foregathered there one Wednesday morning to await the arrival of the Morperland letter carrier. Twice a week, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, he trudged the ten miles to deliver his meager package of letters. He always made his way first to the "Trawlers," where it had become customary for the populace—those who did not expect letters alike with those who did—to assemble and waylay him. In that manner the canny souls got news from the outside world without being put to the expense of a postal fee, while the official on his part was quit of his letters all the sooner. On this particular morning, however, the gayety of the group was under eclipse. They talked together in hushed tones, full of concern, every now and then referring a question to the bronzed, middle-aged seaman in their midst.

"An' ye're sure ye've got the rights o' 't, Jake?" queried a big-faced woman, whose skimpy petticoats showed her ample brogues and shapeless ankles. "It'll kill t' lass if she hears o' 't."

"Oh, I'm noan mistaken—not me," answered the seaman positively. "I seed him mysen i' Grimsby not three days back, an' I 'eard it read out i' church, the second time o' axin' it were—last Sunday."

"Poor maid—poor maid! An' her waitin' for him here as patient an' lovin' as onybody could wish. Ah, them men—them men!"

While the frowsy old crone was shaking her gray locks over the perfidy of mankind, she stole a sidelong look toward the window bench, against which Andrew Copley—then a well-set-up young fellow of four-and-twenty—was moodily leaning.

"Ay, but he takes on badly wi' it," she said, jerking her head in Andrew's direction. "I'm main sorry for him, too. He always was sweet on her, you knaw, an' I do believe sh'd a' had him if that man from Grimsby hadn' come this way wi' his pert, weel-favored face."

Further tattle was nipped short by the appearance of the letter-bag. In all there must have been close on a dozen letters—a goodly batch for Port St. Bede. It was one of the last which the postman held aslant to catch the light. "Miss Kellett!" he called out wheezily.

"Why, that must be Hilda," exclaimed one of the bystanders. "She isn't here. Ye'll ha'e to take it up to the hoose."

"I'll save ye that waik," said Andrew, stepping forward. "I'm boun' that way, an' I'll see she gets it."

"Don't tell her o' the going on o' that Grimsby chap," cried the fishwife before mentioned. "It'll drive her clean daft. Conscience sake, Andrew, don't tell her that."

During the period we were dealing with education at Port St. Bede was at a wofully low ebb. Not twenty people in the whole thorp could write their names or recognize them when penned; few could read anything but "print;" fewer still were able to puzzle out written characters. Among this community Andrew Copley was reckoned a "fine scholard;" and by virtue of that reputation his services were in frequent demand by those who, having passed need of the "l'arning," chanced to be in the bad books of the Wesleyan minister.

With the "gammer's" injunctions echoing in his ears, Andrew strode quickly towards the cottage occupied by Hilda Kellett and her widowed mother. "'Miss Kellett, Port St. Bede,'" said he, furtively scanning the superscription. It's fro' that scamp, as I live. An' now belike she'll ha'e me read it to her." Slackening his pace, he added grimly: "Shall I tell 't to her—shall I? It'll kill her, say they, an' they're right—it will."

He stuffed the letter into his jacket pocket long before he came abreast of the cottage. Rapping a tattoo on the door, he lifted the latch, and, as was the custom, walked straight in. A slim, fair-haired girl peeped into the room from a side door. "Oh, it's you, Andrew," she said, coming forward.

"Ay, it's me. I cam' just to ask how your mother is to-day."

"She's a piece better this morn; but she rested ill last night; but she's dropped off asleep now. Tak' a chair, Andrew."

Andrew perched himself on the edge of the nearest rush-bottomed chair and fumbled hesitatingly with his cap between his knees. "I was down by the Trawlers' when the letters came," he said, after a strained interval. "There was one for ye, Hilda, an' I made free to say I'd bring it. Here 'tis."

"For me!" and Hilda's eyes brightened as she stretched out her hand. "Then it's fro' Ben, isn't it, Andrew?"

"It's the Grimsby mark," replied Andrew, shortly.

"Then it must be fro' Ben. He said he'd let me know as soon as the brig got back to Grimsby. An' how I trembled for him all through that storm o' Monday. But he's safe—this shows he's safe, Andrew." A plaintive look of alarm crept into her blue eyes as Andrew, never answering, kept his gaze clamped to the floor. "This shows he's safe!" she repeated quaveringly.

"I'll tell ye straight out, Hilda, what they were sayin' over at Morperland yesterday. P'r'aps that letter may contradict it all, but there was a deal o' nasty talk about the Vampire—as how she gon' doon i' the—"

"Read it to me," cried Hilda, thrusting the missive into his hand. "Ye knaw I can't mysen. Read it, Andrew!"

Taking firm grip of his lips, Andrew opened the letter and glanced at the signature. "It's noan from him. It's wrote by Peter Worsley, the skipper o' the Vampire."

"Not fro' Ben!" exclaimed Hilda tremulously. "He isn't, he isn't—dead?"

Andrew nodded. "Drowned!" he murmured huskily.

Clutching at her throat, Hilda sank into a chair and hid her face in her palms. Presently she looked up, her lips pallid, her eyelids scarlet. "I can bear it now, Andrew," she said. "Read it all to me."

The caligraphy of the Vampire's master must have been all but illegible, judging from the difficulty Andrew had in deciphering it. He read slowly, hemming and hawing through the whole epistle. Here is the gist of it. In the recent heavy gales the Vampire—a crazy, undermanned timber ship—had sprunk aleak, her crew being eventually compelled to abandon the foundering vessel and take to the long boat. Their parlous case was little bettered thereby, for twice the boat had been capsized; when she was righted the second time, only four of the sailors succeeded in scrambling into her. Of the two men missing, the mate, Ben Webb, was one. The survivors were picked up on the following day and landed at Grimsby. It was in fulfillment of a pledge made at the outset of their peril, and in fateful anticipation of its outcome, that Captain Worsley now broke the sad news to the dead man's sweetheart.

Even in the intensity of her grief, Hilda had thought of her mother's much-needed slumber, and not a cry escaped her lips. Andrew, the big, clumsy, soft-hearted gomeral, saw that no sympathy of his could soothe her distress; she must just "fret her dole." And so he left her with her sorrow.

"I had to do it," he murmured, standing beachward. "An' its better that nor t'other—it's better." Fervently he added, "God send she doesn't let anybody else read it!"

He might have been at peace on that score. To Hilda the skipper's letter was as the last words of her drowned lover—a sacred thing, not lightly to be fingered or spoken of; she packed it away with the sundry ribbons, gloves and cheap gewgaws Ben had given her, to be treasured with them throughout this side of time.

Those who best know the Port St. Bede folk will least accuse them of want of heart. Out of sheer mercy for the girl they avoided all allusion to Ben Webb; and on her side Hilda kept her woe to herself. The blow was for her shoulders alone, and she bore its smart bravely. Besides, she and her mother had to live; the net making and mending must be attended to, even though the heart may ache and the eyes blister with unshed tears.

So two years went by. Then her mother having been laid to her last long rest under the gnarled elms in the churchyard, Hilda went to live with her sister, Abel Maxon, the cooper's wife. At this juncture, hoping that time would salve her wound, Andrew Copley made bold to offer her all an honest man can offer the woman he loves—his name, his home, his big steadfast heart. His insight was at fault, for she would have none of them. In all simplicity, she told him that her love lay dead with him who slept in the deep seas; she chose to share the lot of no man to whom she could not give herself heartily, wholly.

"I knaw ye like me, Andrew," she said, frankly; "I've al'ays knawn it, an' I thank ye. If ever I come to think i' that other way, an' if I see ye're i' the same mind still, I'll speak first. Don't ask me any more, Andrew; I'll speak first."

Henceforth, as before, they were friends—close, firm friends—but no further. Season after season Andrew sailed off in his yawl for the white fishing on the Dogger, returning each time with brain aflame for the sight of her. And she met him with a mere smile and handshake, in her eyes no token of change, no glimmer of awakening affection.

Eight years thus lumbered away—eight weary, joyless years—and neither Hilda nor Andrew had sought to break through their part of silence. About this time Hilda was sore stricken with typhoid, then rife in the village, and for an anxious space she dwelt on the very border line of Here and Hereafter. On Andrew's persuasion—he staking his word that the great man's fees should be forthcoming—Able called in Dr. Radcliff of Morpherland, under whose care Hilda slowly began to mend. It was while Andrew was away at the Banks—the doctor's comforting assurance for company—that the truth stripped itself before Hilda, to torture and afflict her with its mocking ghastliness.

As yet she was not able to leave her bed, but lay there with pinched face, her hair tangled on her pillow, her thin, blue fingers twitching idly at the garish patchwork quilt, her eyes wandering to the half-opened lattice, through which was borne the distant sough of the waves, and whence she could see their sunflecked crests far out beyond the Fork rocks. Then she would turn to answer some questions put to her by her little niece, Mary—Abel's eldest daughter, "rising ten"—who had crept into the sickroom. Presently the little maid fell to babbling, childlike, of the doings and sayings of her school friends.

"Aye, but ye'll be gettin' a fine scholard, Mary," said Hilda. "It was a guid thing for the weans ween 't parson opened a school. I wish it had been done long sin'."

"It was 'xam'nation to-day," replied Mary, eager with fresh news. "Mr. Harvey heard me read and patted me o' the head. Out of a newspaper—hard words they was, too."

"An' maybe ye can read writin', Mary?"

"Oh, yes," returned she, nowise disposed to belittle her attainments. "When you get any letters, Aunt Hilda, I'll read them all through to you—every word. I'm sure I could."

"Well, I'm goin' to try ye," said Hilda, smilingly. "Now, open that drawer—no, the second one—an' bring the little black box to me. Yes, that is it."

Tenderly picking out the finery with which the box was filled, Hilda placed the various articles by her side on the bed. Underneath, untouched since that day, lay the very letter which had told her its sad tale through Andrew's mouth.

"Now what name's that?" said she, pointing to the signature.

Mary screwed her eyes into beads, hung her head sapiently on one side and spelled the words under her breath.

"B-e-n, Ben; W-e-b-b, Webb," she announced at last with a ring of triumph. "It's main bad writin', but—"

"No, no!" cried Hilda, rising excitedly upon her elbow. "Not Ben—not Ben Webb. Are you sure, Mary?"

"B-e-n; W-e-b-b, Webb," repeated her niece.

Hilda sent up a choking cry. "He said it came fro' Capt. Worsley," she ejaculated, gaspingly. He lied to me. It's fro' Ben—fro' Ben. Ben isn't dead!" Her whole frame atremble, she turned to Mary with: "Begin at the first. Read it all to me. Can ye? can ye?"

Mary at all events was willing to try, and although she blundered often and painfully under the task, between them they managed to piece the words into sense.

"Dear Hilda," it ran, "I didn't mean to say a word, but I can't do it without telling you first. Don't hate me, for I did love you, and do, more nor her. Anyway you can't say I didn't tell you all about Polly Barclay—how we was to be married, and how it was to be broke off.

"Well, me and her have made it up again. Her uncle's dead and left her everything—his three houses and £400 in the bank. You see I didn't have a free hand so you can't blame me. Besides, there's Andy Copley only too glad to have you; and the banns have been read twice in Grimsby church. I think things are best left alone and no fuss made, especial as I don't ask the presents back, nor—"

Mary had plodded through the letter so far, when Hilda, with a loud shriek, dropped back up on her pillow. Abel and his wife hastened upstairs to find her again sitting up in bed, round-eyed, and gesticulating with clenched fists, "I might ha' won him back—I might ha'," she cried shrilly. "A lie, Andrew Copley! It was a lie."

In this fashion she raved all through the night and long into the next day. Dr. Radcliff said it was brain fever; and although he evidently brought her back to bodily health, her mind never recovered its sanity.

Poor Hilda! She knows not that for the bread she eats, for the shelter above her head, for the very clothes upon her back, she is beholden to the man whom she, for forty years past, had daily execrated.

"She never sees me but she throws them awfu' words in my face," said Andrew to me. "I thowt I were actin' for t' best when I did as I did—I thowt so truly."

"I suppose you have never met this Ben Webb since?

"Oh, but I ha'e. I went to Grimsby o' purpose to spoil 'is beauty. If he's livin' now, he's livin' wi' the nose o' him all askew. The prank cost me a week o' jail, but I'd stand a hundred years o' lockup for the comfort that job gave me."—George C. Farquhar, in Chamber's Journal.

A MOTHER'S PRESENCE OF MIND.

Only four persons saw it, but it was a sight those four will not forget while life lasts. Not more than a fortnight ago a woman who lives in Georgetown came over to spend the day with a friend in an enormously tall apartment house. She brought her little three-years-old son with her. It was a hot day, and the two women with the boy went up to the roof garden.

Something distracted the mother's attention for a moment, and in that moment the baby had clambered to a chair, thence to a rustic table, and as the mother turned was just walking along the parapet's edge of the sickening hight, laughing and waving his hands. Nobody knows how long it was. It seemed a lifetime. The mother dared not approach, for at every movement on her part the venturesome little midget ran away and called her to catch him. He would not be coaxed to come down, but finally he yielded to a bribe, and climbed down.

And did the mother faint? Well, no, she didn't. Her hair didn't turn white, either. She simply took the little boy into her arms without a word. She held him close to her for a long time, and then—well, she turned him over her knee and spanked him.—Washington Post.

Dick—"I played a great joke on a blind man a little while ago. You know they say that in compensation for one's loss of vision the remaining senses are abnormally acute!"

Bob—"So I've always heard."

Dick—"Well, I handed him an article, and after feeling of it for 10 or 15 minutes he had to give it up. He couldn't tell whether it was a collar just from the laundry or only a buzz saw."—Boston Transcript.

Preparing for the Future.

"When I'm a man," said little Tom,
"And big, and tall, and strong,
I'm going to keep a drug store, and Drink soda water all day long."

"And I," said little Polly Ann,
"I'll tell you what I'll do:
I'll come and make you awful rich
By buying things of you.

"I'll buy tooth brushes and quinine,
And squills and things like that,
And postage stamps, and castor oil
For my old pussy cat.

"And maybe I will buy so much
You'll get so rich, you see,
That you will have enough some day,
To come and marry me."

HOW DUSTUN BEAT HARD LUCK.

"Some queer things used to happen in the old slave days in Missouri," said Representative John Tarsney to a Washington Star writer just before he started for Europe. "The condition of the slave was never a very burdensome one in Missouri. The farm country and the nearness of the Iowa line prevented anything like those plantation cruelties of which we sometimes read. In fact, I should judge that some of the Missouri slaves had as good a time as their masters.

"In illustration I might tell a queer story which had its scene in Independence, Mo. Old Banker Sawyer of Independence carried on the same Sawyer bank which exists today away back in the fifties, when Independence, as the eastern end of the Santa Fe trail, was the great outfitting point for those daring and misguided people who meditated a flight across the plains. Among other chattels of Banker Sawyer was a big black negro named Dustun. Dustun was a great mechanic, and had vast fame all over the western country as the maker of that fashion of wagon known as the 'prairie schooner.' Sawyer had besides his bank a wagon-shop at Independence. And his negro, Dustun, ran the wagon-shop. The wagon-shop did a good trade, and Sawyer said to Dustun one day:

"'You make a lot of money working overtime, Dustun. Why do you continue in slavery? Why don't you buy and own yourself? You have got five or six hundred dollars down in my bank now.'

"And it was true. Dustun had laid up quite a little store of money, and the fact of a slave with money on deposit in the bank of his master is of itself illustrative of the lax condition of the institution in Missouri.

"'What'll you take for me?' asked Dustun.

"'Seeing it's you,' said Sawyer, 'I'll sell out cheap. If you want to buy yourself I'll take $1500, while you are easy worth $3000.'

"Dustun bought himself and paid $500 down, and took the rest of himself on credit. Sawyer made out his freedom papers and Dustun made a mortgage on himself to Sawyer for the $1000. Then he went to work. In a year he had paid himself free. In two years more he bought his wife and little girl. Then he began to make money. But he hadn't proceeded far nor laid up much ahead when one night a fire started and the next morning found Dustun's wagon-shop in ashes. Shop, tools, stock and everything was burned up as clean as a whistle, and with the forethought of his race Dustun had no insurance.

"It was a plain, hard, bitter case of begin again with Dustun. He thought the situation over and then went to his old master, Sawyer. After ten minutes' talk, Sawyer lent Dustun $1000, took a mortgage on his wife and young one. Dustun rebuilt his shop and opened up anew. It finally became very unfashionable to start across the

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 23, 1895.

E. GERRY BROWN, the candidate of the People's Party for governor, is to stump the state, a job requiring lots of hard work, with little remuneration, we fear, in this instance.

THE Democrats have decided on October 2d as the time and Worcester as the place for the state convention. The candidate for governor will undoubtedly be George Fred Williams.

THE Springfield Republican is booming Richard Olney as the Democratic candidate for the presidency, and the suggestion is receiving much favor in many localities. The party will have hard work to find a cleaner man.

IF ever there was wretch who deserved to be hung it is Duestrow, the St. Louis murderer, who while drunk killed his wife and then held his little boy against the wall and shot him dead. But he is a millionaire, and has an ex-governor of the state and prominent lawyers working for his acquittal, and though there is no question of his guilt it seems likely that he will go free. A fine idea, truly! Had he been a poor man the atrocity and fiendishness of his crime would have landed him on the gallows ere this.

BICYCLE riding on the sidewalks in this village is getting to be quite a nuisance, in spite of the law to the contrary. Very little riding is done on those in the business section, but on the back streets pedestrians are sometimes greatly annoyed. And the particular offender seems to be a young man who is old enough to know better. Numerous complaints have been heard against this rider, largely from women, and he will be quite likely to get into trouble if he persists in using the sidewalks for his wheel rides.

ALREADY the A. P. A. is losing members because of its methods. Last week a prominent member of the order in the eastern part of the state withdrew for various reasons, and now it is alleged that the colored members of Springfield are dropping out, because their presence seems to be desired merely from a standpoint of votes. It is also claimed that the members in general are not nearly so enthusiastic as they were a year ago. Can it be, after all the claims made for the order a year ago, that its death knell is to sound so soon after its birth?

WHENEVER the matter of closing the business places of the town two evenings a week has been brought up the proprietors of the drug stores have claimed that they could not close because of the necessity of being prepared to furnish medicines, etc., to possible customers who might be unable to do without. And yet they closed up all day Tuesday, the day of the Merchants' excursion, and no one died from lack of medicines, or as far as known was even inconvenienced thereby. Physicians carry with them the majority of the remedies needed for their patients, and there is no good reason why the clerks in the drug stores should not have two evenings a week off as well as the rest.

THE action taken by the board of health to compel owners of houses on streets where there are sewers to connect their buildings with the same is a move in the right direction. Unfortunately not all of the so-called sewers in town are fit to be used for such purposes, being nothing more than drains for surface water, constructed with that end only in view, and would be a menace to the public health if used for general sewage. These should be changed, and then the abutors compelled to connect with them. Next year would be a good time to put in the system of sewers adopted for this village some years ago. The city of Chicopee is not taking its drinking water from the river, as was at one time proposed, so no objection can be had to the sewers emptying into the stream, and the fees from connections with the system would go a long way toward paying the cost. The system ought to be put in.

STATE CENSUS FIGURES.

The first count of the state census has been made public, and the result is very gratifying. The population is given as 2,495,345, an increase of 28.48 per cent in the last ten years. Only two counties show a decrease, —Barnstable and Nantucket, the former 7.39 and the latter 3.98 per cent,—while the greatest increase was in Middlesex, 39.72; Hampden county shows up well with an increase of 30.85 per cent. A noticeable fact is the decrease of population in the small towns, particularly the farming towns and those situated farthest from the large centers, almost every one showing a loss. The cities show a corresponding gain, and Springfield jumps from 37,557 in 1885 and 44,179 in 1890 to 51,534.

The population by counties in 1885 and 1895 is:

One of the oldest established and most worthy institutions in New England is the New England Fair, which is to be held this year at Portland, Me., on August 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th and 31st, and if labor is a prediction of success, then the exhibition this year will surely surpass the attempts of former years, for an unlimited amount of labor has been put into the enterprise. Complete exhibits of everything interesting to horticulturists and agriculturists will be shown, together with an exhibit of live stock that will be well worth seeing. Besides this the turf events will bring together a most wonderful collection of not less than 300 fast horses, competing for premiums valued at $8000. Another interesting feature has been secured, and that is the North Atlantic Squadron, which in itself is a complete show. Band concerts by famous organizations, coaching parades, floral parades and the like will be included in the programme, and at night there will be wonderful electrical illuminations. The Boston and Maine Railroad has done a great deal towards making the New England Fair a success, inasmuch as it has placed on sale at nearly every station on its lines, tickets to Portland at greatly reduced rates, which will include admission to the fair. The tickets are good going August 26th to 31st, inclusive, and one need not return until September 2d, and if you choose you can spend a day or two at Old Orchard or at any of the numerous resorts in that vicinity.

The county commissioners have been petitioned to widen the Main street bridge over the tracks of the Boston and Albany road so as to allow the putting on of a sidewalk outside the present sides of the structure, and allow the whole of the space between for teams. This matter has been talked of before, but the railroad claims to have no power to change the bridge, hence the petition, which was circulated by W. R. Milligan.

The sermon at the Congregational church next Sunday morning will be on the subject, "Educated for Christ and the Church." The pastor will speak with the young people especially in mind, and will try to show what a college education should do for them and fit them for. A special invitation is extended to all young people now connected with colleges or who think of attending them, and to those who have charge of the education of young people.

Nearly 700 went on the Merchants' excursion to Watch Hill Tuesday, the other villages of the town, and the surrounding country furnishing good quotas. Every store in Palmer was closed, and many of those in the other villages. A special train was run each way, the down trip being a pleasant one of only two hours and a quarter, though three hours were consumed on the run up from New London. At Watch Hill a splendid shore dinner was served, and all seemed to enjoy the day and its various features.

Two Monson men who had imbibed too much tanglefoot amused themselves last Saturday afternoon by driving recklessly about the village. They were warned once by an officer to go home, but declined the good advice and continued their career. Finally they collided with a team belonging to Edward Lynch, in front of Robinson & Taylor's store, and a child which was in the wagon was thrown out, but fortunately was not seriously injured. They were then lodged in the cooler for over Sunday, and on Monday settled with the district court.

In another column the board of health calls attention to the statutes relating to the connecting of houses with sewers wherever such exist, with especial reference to the new sewer now being constructed on Walnut street. It is intended that every house on the street shall be connected with the sewer. The law seems very plain in the matter, and the possible penalty is severe. It will be much easier for the connections to be made while the main pipe is being put in, and no doubt house owners will take advantage of the time to have the work done. It is the intention of the board of health to see that houses along the lines of sewers in the other villages are also connected with them.

The members of the stock company who a year or so ago bought for a high price the Percheron stallion Pollux, expecting to use him extensively for breeding purposes, have been sued for the note which they signed at the time of the purchase. The animal did not prove profitable as an investment, and was finally sold at a sacrifice. A portion of the purchase price was paid in cash by the company, and a joint and several note signed for the balance, and it is this note which the holders have sued to collect. Nearly if not all of the signers are possessed of enough to satisfy the demands if the suit goes against them. The signers of the note have refused to pay it, alleging that the horse was misrepresented.

If you want to save the discount of 6 per cent on your taxes you must pay them on or before September 1st, and as the first of the month comes on Sunday, you have only next week in which to improve your opportunities. For the convenience of the taxpayers the collector has arranged to be in the various villages as follows: At the counting room in Three Rivers next Friday afternoon from 2 to 6; at the counting room in Thorndike to-morrow and Saturday of next week from 8 to 12 in the forenoon; at the counting room in Bondsville next Monday forenoon from 8 to 12; at the store of James B. Shaw in the Depot village to-morrow afternoon from 2 to 6 and from 7 to 8, next Friday forenoon from 8 to 11, and Saturday afternoon of next week,—the last day on which a discount will be allowed,—from 2 to 6 and from 7 to 8.

A hearing was held Monday in the district court on the return of the search warrant served on Ernest M. Lord of Three Rivers the night of the 3d, when a couple of quarts of whisky and some gin was found, the whisky being found under the pillow of a bed occupied by Mrs. C. Consigney, the other side of the partition from Lord's bar, a hole in the partition evidently furnishing easy access to the stuff when wanted. No one appeared for Lord, and the liquors were declared forfeited to the commonwealth. Lord now has two appealed cases to the superior court hanging over him,—one for illegal liquor keeping and the other for keeping a liquor nuisance,—and is liable to be brought before the district court for illegal keeping in connection with this last raid. It is reported that he has moved to Meriden, Ct., and gone into business there.

Passengers on the steamer Block Island Wednesday had an unpleasant experience, the boat being three hours and a half late leaving the island, not getting away until 5.30. The steamer Mount Hope from Providence, with a large excursion on board, was the first in at the wharf, and when the Block Island landed she stuck her nose in between the stern of the Mount Hope and the wharf. When she came to leave at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the wind was so strong that when the Block Island attempted to swing her nose out from behind the Mount Hope to turn round it would blow her back to the wharf in spite of all that she could do. The Mount Hope was to leave at 3, and the Block Island decided to wait until it was out of the way. But the Providence boat, in attempting to back out of the entrance to the harbor, which is very narrow to keep the sand from working in, was blown upon the sandbar at one side, the tide being very low. A hawser waa passed to the Block Island, and by a working of wheels together the Mount Hope was got clear and finally got out and made for Providence. Then the Block Island tried to back out of the harbor and was blown on the place just vacated by the Mount Hope. The only other steamer in the harbor was too small to be of any use, and all that could be done was to wait patiently until the tide cleared the boat and then use more care in getting out. There was no danger, but the delay way annoying. The passage to New London was particularly rough on account of the high wind.

Last Saturday Henry Supremo of Indian Orchard was assessed $5 for drunkenness, and paid.

On Monday Mark Royce and Warren O. Rogers, both of Monson, paid $10 each for drunkenness. John Smith of Monson,—not he of Pocahontas fame,—was charged with drunkenness, and was probated until August 31st. John H. Higgins of North Adams paid $5 for having been intoxicated.

Elzeard Berthiaume of Stafford Springs was sent to the house of correction on Tuesday for two months for drunkenness.

Yesterday morning John Dineen of Monson was charged with disorderly conduct in a passenger car on the New London Northern road last Friday, and his case was continued until this morning

Base Ball Notes.

About time the club played a game at home, is it not?

The Stars defeated a picked team here on Saturday by a score of 14 to 2.

The boys wish to acknowledge the kindness shown them at Ware by Mr. John Moran.

Another victory, this time from the old-time rivals, the Wares. Right in it, boys; keep it up.

Next week's issue of the JOURNAL will contain the fielding and batting averages of each member of the team.

Connors was batted freely in Saturday's game for a total of 19 hits, while Riley held the home team to 4 hits.

Riley and Longtine worked well together on Saturday. Riley was invincible and Longtine caught without an error.

Noals, Dowd and Fitzgerald played poorly for the home team, slipping up just when a little head work would helped the Wares wonderfully.

The Thorndikes will play the Wheelrights here to-morrow afternoon. Manager Farrell thought it would be impossible to get a game this week, but finally secured the above-named club, which is a very strong team. Game at 3.30.

Kelliher and Longtine batted hard and timely, both getting two two-base hits. Riley, Sugrue, Murphy, Murdock and Roach batted well also. Bordoro and Gay were the only men who did not hit safely for the first time this season.

THORNDIKE 16—WARE 2.

The Thorndikes added another victory to their long list on Saturday by defeating the old-time rivals, the Wares, at Ware. The home team were not in the game a little bit, and had it not been for the errors made by the Thorndikes in the fourth inning they would have been shut out. Riley was at his best and pitched a splendid game, striking out the first five men at bat, and throughout the game held his opponents at his mercy. The Thorndikes batted Connors hard from the start, and won the game hands down. Kelliher played a good game at first, Murdock accepted every chance without an error, and Sugrue and Murphy caught all that came their way. The following score will tell the rest.

There have been many exciting races on the park this week, and the old records are tumbling fast. The rain Sunday put the track in fine condition. While racing Monday two sulkies collided and several spokes were knocked out of place.

Friday evening N. K. Story invited the Baptist church choir and several young people of the Sunday school to his home. After light refreshments the party adjourned to the parlor, where several hours were beguiled in games and music.

On account of the excursion Tuesday the regular monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavorers was postponed to next week Tuesday. The president and social committee are trying to promote sociability by arranging for some special music and something in the line of oratory.

Last Sunday Walter Bussell simply annihilated the 17-pound racer which the Warwick company had presented him with, as he was riding from Thorndike to Palmer. He was going down hill when he struck a sandy spot which immediately doubled his wheel up into countless angles not all given in the geometry.

Last Saturday the Weavers and the Beamers crossed bats on the old grounds; batteries—Blair and Ritchie, Laine and Henrichon. It was a lively game, and many were present. On both sides the playing was good; every man seemed to know what he was there for, and acted accordingly. Score, 24 to 20 in favor of the Beamers.

Seventy-eight at Barret's Junction and 115 from here boarded the Merchants' excursion train Tuesday morning. All report a jolly time. One young man says the water was cold and he did not care about "ducking in," but his traveling companions have let the cat out of the bag: He tried to put the bathing suit on the wrong end to.

Yesterday morning there was a sight worth seeing at the depot, when a company of Polanders got off the train. They were fresh from the continent and, of course, green, all except the red bandannas which covered the women's heads. One would think that our sidewalks were of no account by the way they lined up four abreast and shambled down the road toward the "Island."

Mrs. Wilbur Bliss lost her purse, containing $16, last Saturday. Mrs. Bliss, in company with Misses Ethel Merrill and Fannie Barnes, were taking a ride to Springfield and had carried a little lunch in a basket, in which the pocketbook had been placed. When they had reached Ludlow the basket, which had been placed under the seat, was missed. They turned around and rode over a great length of the road, but the missing property was not found.

Sunday afternoon John Twiss, accompanied by Officer Manning, went down the Palmer road to collect a little bill which was due him from a Polander. Sunday morning the man hired a two-seated carriage of Mr. Twiss with the intention of going to Thorndike, saying that only four were going, but Mr. Twiss had been informed to the contrary, so he harnessed up and followed. The reports were confirmed, for six men got into the carriage and enjoyed a stolen ride to West Warren. The fun, however, was of short duration, for as soon as the man who had hired the team reached home he had callers. He pretended not to understand my English, and was the personification of innocence. By means of an interpreter Mr. Twiss informed the fellow that he would either give up $6.50 or he and his companions take a trip to Palmer, and it didn't take him long to decide to pay.

NOTHING is a surer indication of the state of the times than the immigration returns, which for July were 27,133 against 17,889 for July of last year. With prosperous times in this country the foreigners flock to our shores, but when they cannot do better here than at home they stay away. Just now work is evidently plenty and wages good, a marked contrast to a year ago.

Mrs. Adelia Adams had a strange experience yesterday morning. Mrs. Adams is 85 years old and lives with her son, George W. Adams. As the old lady does not usually arise until about 9 a. m., her non-appearance did not cause the younger Mrs. Adams any alarm until after that hour; then she went to call her and found that she could not awaken her. Mr. Adams was sent for and later Dr. Jackson, who pronounced it a case of prolonged nightmare. The pulse and temperature were normal, and muscles relaxed. Between 11 and 12 the patient began to have convulsive motions in her hands and arms, and shortly after 12 awakened. For a time she was scarcely in her right mind, talked of not wanting to be taken away, etc., but before night was as well as ever. She tells her friends that she knew all that transpired while she was in this state, and feared that they might think she was dead.

Hon. William N. Flynt is laying plans for the gathering of elderly men which was mentioned in last week's JOURNAL, but the date has not yet been decided upon. Mr. Flynt is very desirous that every man in town who has passed the seventieth milestone should be present without further invitation. A partial list is here given, which it is hoped may be complete next week: William N. Flynt, Almus Anderson, Solomon Pierce, John Bucklin, Wilson Beckwith, Charles Carpenter, Daniel Carpenter, D. W. Darling, William King, William McAuliffe, Daniel G. Potter, Calvin S. Pease, Daniel Reilly, William Stacy, Johnson Stacy, Rev. James Tufts, George E. Tucker, Elmer Colton, George S. Harvey, Stephen G. Lanphear, Lorenzo Squier, Jacob L. Bradway, John W. Miller, Joel M. Tucker, Hiram Waid, John D. Bradway, Seneca F. Conant, Walter Corbin, Samuel D. Wing, William B. Fenton, James Jackson, Thomas Bogan, Daniel Leonard, Earl Parker, Andrew J. Robbins, Hugh Welch, Amos Bradway, Erastus Davis, Linus Hatch, A. H. Maxwell, Err Maxwell, Elias Warriner, John L. Chaffee, Chauncey Walcott, John T. Sullivan, Moses Smith, Alpheus Stanton, Andrew J. Neff, Merrick C. Mumford, Edwin D. Knowlton, Peter Hayes, I. M. Hitchcock, George H. Gates, Dwight W. Ellis, Dennis Crowley, Michael Moore, D. S. Field.

Pomona grange of Springfield was entertained by Monson grange at Flynt Park Wednesday, and the following granges were present: Springfield, Wilbraham, Agawam, Ludlow, Granby, Hampden and Monson. There was a fair attendance from each. The business session was held at 11 a. m. and was private. This was followed by dinner at 12.30 p. m. The afternoon session, which began at 2, was held in the pavilion and was public. The building was trimmed with bunting, flowers and vegetables. Worthy Lecturer W. F. Clark of Granby presided. After chorus singing came a discussion on the question, "Is it advisable for a young man to run in debt for one-half or two-thirds of a farm at the present prices of grain and produce." B. F. Green of Wilbraham spoke in the affirmative, arguing that if it were ever advisable it is now, as dairying and vegetables pay well; interest charges, which were once high, are now low, and if our fathers could pay the high rate we certainly should be able to do so with the mechanical helps which we have. H. H. Burbank, also of Wilbraham, spoke on the negative side; his opinion was that the farmer is not given a fair show in the matter of taxation, as his property is taxed for its entire valuation, while much of the land is absolutely worthless, and gave many figures to bear out his statement. He also thought that the farmer suffered great loss by free wool and hides, and urged the voting of these burdens from the shoulders of the tillers of the soil. Mr. Blodgett of Wilbraham thought cities should oblige hucksters to pay a license, as there are now nearly as many peddlers as there are buyers. F. E. Clark, treasurer of Pomona grange, said that if a man were fitted to be a farmer he could make a living, but he must have energy and push; he must also have a wife who would be a helpmeet in every sense of the word; not only must she work, but save, and must forego a new bonnet for each season; the farmer must be sharp, know what the prices are in various places, and be governed by that knowledge. Mr. Chapman sang a solo which was much enjoyed, which was followed by an address on "Farm, or Rural Law," by R. W. Lyman of Northampton. Mr. Lyman game much interesting and helpful information upon the laws of our state in the form of a story. This closed the exercises.

HAMPDEN.

Found Drowned in a Brook.

His wife not feeling well, retired early and fell asleep, and his absence was not discovered till morning. When Mrs. Pease awoke she called the children and instituted a search. Mr. Pease was found lying face down in shallow water, and it is believed that he had a fit and fell into the brook. He had been subject many years to attacks of epilepsy. Want The Fire Engineers Changed.

F. Tourtelotte, Samuel Holt, John Lycett, Clarence L. Thompson, S. J. Dufresne. The petition represents that the present board is not equal to demands which are liable to be made upon it, and that necessity compels the action requested. The selectmen have appointed a hearing for next Wednesday evening in the matter, when any who wish may appear and show reason why the present board should be changed.

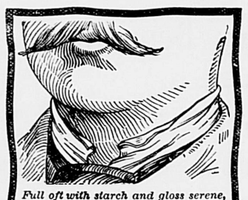
Everything Connected with Butter —churns, patters, tubs, firkins—ought to be washed with Pearline. That gets at the soaked-in grease as nothing else in the world can.

Things may seem to be clean when you've washed them in the usual way; but use Pearline, and they really are clean. It might make all the difference, sometimes, between good butter and bad. Wherever you want thorough cleanliness, or want to save your labor, the best thing to do is to use Pearline. 333

Beware of imitations. JAMES PYLE, N.Y.



Full oft with starch and gloss serene,
The linen collar starts the morn;
Full oft at noontime it is seen
All wilted, wrinkled and forlorn.

That's what you must expect of such a collar; it's the linen of it. The stand-up collars won't stand up, and the turn-down collars will wilt down. The easy, cheap, and pleasant way out of this is to wear "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. These goods are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with "CELLULOID," thus making them strong and durable, and waterproof, not affected by heat or moisture. There are no other waterproof goods made this way, consequently none that can wear so well. When soiled simply wipe them off with a wet cloth. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Insist upon goods so marked if you expect full satisfaction, and if your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us enclosing amount and we will mail sample. State size, and whether a stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn.

An August Woodroad.

When the partridge coveys fly
In the birch-tops cool and high:

When the dry cicadas twang
Where the purpling fir cones hang;

When the bunch-berries emboss—
Scarlet beads—the roadside moss;

Brown with shadows, bright with sun,
All day long till day is done—

Sleeps in murmuring solitude
The worn old road that threads the wood.

In its deep cup—grassy, cool—
Sleeps the little roadside pool;

Sleeps the butterfly on the weed,
Sleeps the drifted thistle-seed.

Like a great and blazing gem,
Basks the beetle on the stem.

Up and down the shining rays
Dancing midges weave their maze.

High among the moveless boughs,
Drunk with day, the night-hawks drowse.

Far up, unfathomably blue,
August's heaven vibrates through.

The old road leads to all things good:
The year's at full, and time's at flood.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Sailing On.

We sail toward evening's lonely star,
That trembles in the tender blue;
One single cloud a dusky bar
Burnt with dull carmine through and through,
Slow smouldering in the summer sky,
Lies low along the fading west;
How sweet to watch its splendors die,
Waved-cradled thus, and wind-caressed!

The soft breeze freshens: leaps the spray
To kiss our cheeks with sudden cheer;
Upon the dark edge of the bay
Lighthouses kindle far and near,
And through the warm deeps of the sky
Steal faint star-cluster, while we rest
In deep refreshment, thou and I,
Wave-cradled thus, and wind-caresssed.

How like a dream are earth and heaven,
Star-beam and darkness, sky and sea;
Thy face, pale in the shadowy even,
Thy quiet eyes that gaze on me!
O realize the moment's charm,
Thou dearest! We are at life's best,
Enfolded in God's encircling arm,
Wave cradled thus, and wind-caressed.

ANOTHER DEAD SEA FORMING.

Will there be another sea of Sodom? Lieut. Lynch of the United States navy has established the fact, previously not known with consummate accuracy, that the depression of the Dead Sea (also known as the Sea of Lot and in the Scriptures as the Salt Sea) is over 1300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, while that of Lake Genesaret is 800 feet lower than the ocean. The measurements were made 20 years, a long period in a semi-volcanic region. Lake Genesaret is connected with the Dead Sea by the Jordan flowing through it from north to south, and engineers and scientists are satisfied that the bed of the Jordan is gradually sinking. My observations of the shores of Lake Genesaret and those of the inhabitants of the neighboring towns and villages indicate that the lake is continuously falling toward the bottom, while the water is becoming denser from year to year. The salt strata in its neighborhood are growing constantly, it seems, and sulphur springs are becoming frequent on the plains surrounding it. In the north and east of the lake the palm trees, some of them alive, more of them dead and barren, rise above the water at a distance of from 20 to 40 feet from the shore. That they should have taken root in the water is impossible, and the supposition is that originally they stood on little islands that were submerged with the sinking of the lake's bottom.

The catastrophe which resulted in the destruction of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and in the formation of the Dead Sea is computed to have occurred about 1900 years before Christ. The Dead Sea has puzzled scientists ever since, and many of its remarkable features have now been explained. Its depression below the level of the Mediterranean is the deepest known on earth. The bottom of Lake Genesaret is on a much higher level at present, but if it continues to sink as it has done in the last 20 years a repetition of the events of 4000 years ago is not improbable. As the world has not been treated to a spectacle of terrestrial evolutions on a grand scale within hundreds of years, the creation of a second Dead Sea within the compass of ordinary travel would surely attract the attention of all civilized nations, and at the same time help to solve many problems of a scientific nature.

Josephus, who was born in 37 B. C., reports that the water of Genesaret was "clear as crystal, sweet and wholesome." I tried to drink of it, but found it putrid and nauseating. It left a salty taste in the mouth. I asked the fishermen plying their trade on the lake as in Biblical days whether the water was always unfit for drinking purposes, and received an answer that it grew more and more foul every year.

This seems to indicate that the surmises as to the change of conditions in the lake are correct. The water of the Dead Sea, as is well known, is entirely unfit for use by man. The stench arising from it creates a pestilential atmosphere for many miles round. I have never been able to approach the lake in summer, but the natives have informed me that about this time of the year the water, even a foot below the surface, acquires a temperature of 90 degrees. It has been observed that past midnight the temperature of the water on the surface measured in the neighborhood of 100 degrees. There is, however, one false impression in the public mind to be corrected: The Dead Sea is not dead as to animal life. Hawks, partridges, frogs and pigeons are numerous upon the shores, and all sorts of crawling insects abound there; the sluggish waters, too, are covered with ducks—in fact, the fauna is the same as that inhabiting the shores of Lake Genesaret, with this difference, however: all specimens of the animal world about the Dead Sea are slate colored, while those enlivening the shores of the surface of Lake Genesaret wear the ordinary plumage and scaly dress respectively.

The Lake Genesaret, also called the Sea of Tiberias or Galilee, is situated 65 miles north of the Dead Sea. Its extreme length is 15 miles, its greatest width six and three-quarters miles. The water is very deep even at the shores. In some spots its depth measures 160 feet, in others 750 and more. In the northeast and northwest the shores are flat and swampy; the mountains of Safed approach the lake in the north; in the west we have the Hills of El-Hamma and Hattin. The volcanic plateau of Jaulan commences in the east; it is distinguished for many dead craters; its greatest hight is called Hermon, and it wears an eternal snow cap. Palms that bring forth no fruiting, papyrus plants and oleander flourish in the neighborhood of the shore. The stones at the edge of the water are literally covered with turtles, some of which grow over a foot and a half long. Ducks are plentiful in some parts; in others the pelican holds forth in large numbers.—Philadelphia Times.

Bank President—"No, really, I cannot say that there is anyone against whom we can bring a charge. But there is Adderton, come to think of it; we have always been more or less suspicious of him." Police Officer—"But I don't know as I care to see Adderton. Isn't there somebody about the place in whom you have always had the most implicit confidence and whom you have always trusted? Yes? Well, that's the man I want to see."—Boston Transcript

"There is a great deal of sin in this world," said the man who was doing religious work whenever he could, "a great deal of sin." "There may be," replied the New York policeman, distantly, "but I beg to assure you that I know nothing whatever about it."—Chicago Record.

INVIDIOUS COMPARISONS.

"One who is now a member of congress, or will be when the national legislature meets here on the first Monday in December and is sworn in, was, two dozen years ago, a county judge in the state from which he hails, and a more pompous and conceited judge never sat on the bench," said a western man to a Washington Star writer. 'But that was long ago, and the years have taught him a good many things and improved him very materially. However that may be, it happened that on one occasion in his court, a lawyer was pleading his case and was making a regular red-fire-and-slow-curtain speech, which stirred the jury to its profoundest depths. In the course of his peroration he said:—

"'And, gentlemen of the jury, as I stand at this bar to-day in behalf of a prisoner, whose health is such that at any moment he may be called before a greater judge than the judge of this court, I——'

"The judge on the bench rapped sharply on the desk, and the lawyer stopped suddenly and looked at him questioningly.

"'The gentleman,' said the court, with dignity, 'will please confine himself to the case before the jury and not permit himself to indulge in invidious comparisons.'

"It almost took the attorney's breath away, but he managed to pull himself together and finish in pretty fair shape."

THE ICEMAN AND THE NEW BABY.

It was a mean thing for the iceman to do—leave one piece of cold comfort on the stone doorstep while he chopped off another for the next door, and then when he took the first chunk up and carried it into the house of course there was a little pool of melted ice left on the step.

The baby was having a beautiful time all by himself, toddling about in his bare feet in the rickety, uncertain fashion that babies have, losing his balance with every dozen steps, but regaining it by a dexterous twist of his sturdy little spine, just in time to save his nose. He was such a jolly little duffer, so fat that he puffed and wheezed with his efforts, but the round cherubic countenance kept its happy smile of contentment and good fellowship in spite of perambulating difficulties.

By and by he grew a little tired and thought he would rest. He backed up to the doorstep, beaming cheerily, and sat down confidently.

In one moment of shocked and pained surprise the baby's faith in human nature received its first blow, and he realized what a cold world this is, to be sure. He rose quickly and looked down with reproachful eyes upon the little pool of ice water, and not even the antics of a funny old hop toad could win back again all at once that smile of faith and trust in all the world.—New York Herald.

The Fire King.

Oh I am a king, though you make me a slave,
And fret me with warder and grate,
And compel me to live in dungeons that give
No hint of my regal estate!

Though you drive me about with your dampers and draughts,
And smother my breath in a flue,
And grudgingly dole me a pittance of coal
As the world I encircle for you;

Though you call me to lighten and warm your abodes,
Your larders with viands to fill,
To wake at the scratch of a Lucifer match
By day or by night at your will.

But I bid you beware, though I servilely toil,
I am never the serf that I seem,
For mine is the sun, and the stars every one,
And the skies where my thunderbolts gleam.

Oh who can depict my ecstatic delight,
Or cope with my rollicking play,
As I sweep the broad plain a forest to gain,
And lick up the towns in my way!

When I waken in wrath from my cave in the earth
The mountains potentously quake,
The seas at the sight stagger back in affright,
And the islands stand dazed in their wake!

And man, braggart man, who calls himself lord
Of earth and the measureless main,
At the touch of my breath drops silent in death,
Mere ashes to whiten the plain.

But boast, puny man, of your might while you can,
Your slave will not always obey;
Anon he will rise in revolt to the skies,
And the earth shall be melted away;

And the heavens shall roll themselves back like a scroll,
The stars shall like stubble consume,
And firmaments shake with the thunders that wake
When he shall his scepter resume.

SOME HISTORIC PLACES IN WINDHAM COUNTY, CONNECTICUT.

THE WOLF DEN.

Ever since my boyish imagination was fired by the recital of Putnam's daring descent into the wolf den in old Pomfret, I have had a desire to visit the locality; but the opportunity never presented itself for me to gratify the desire until the present summer, when I gladly accepted the invitation of Mr. Aldrich, present warden of the Putnam Town Farm, to accompany him to this famous locality. So one July afternoon found us on the way to the hiding-place of the last wolf of Pomfret. On the way we passed many prosperous looking farms, whose tidy buildings betokened thrift; passed Pomfret Landing, so-called, it is said, because the first settlers landed there on the banks of the Mashamoquet and made it a permanent settlement. This place boasts an ancient mill which for more than a century has done duty for the neighborhood; and farther on we passed a tavern, which it is said, has furnished refreshment for man and beast for more than a century and a quarter. Near here we added to our company a pleasant guide who graciously consented to go with us and show the way. Passing through a valley with meadows stretching away on either side, we began to ascend the mountain on which the den is located. Up, up, and still higher the road leads, by farm houses and under overarching forest trees; the last farm being that owned by Miss Clapp, to whom belongs the den and its surrounding forest. We soon reached the summit, where a wood road turns off to the left for nearly a quarter of a mile into the forest. The paving of this branch of road is of unique design, furnished and presented as a gift by Dame Nature herself, with the purpose of awakening the latent energies of any lymphatic pilgrim who may venture over it in a carriage. Reaching the end of the carriage part of the journey at last, we secured the horse and prepared to make the remainder of the pilgrimage on foot; here the path descends rapidly over stones which seem glued to the mountain side. A walk of some twenty rods over the rough way brought us to the end of the well-worn path, and turning to the left we stood before the historic den. It looks like a doorway to Infernio in the side of the mountain, about three feet wide by two and one-half feet high; deep seamed masses of rock are piled over it, and lesser stones are strewn in profusion all about. It is in the heart of the forest, and presents the same aspect as met the gaze of the huntsmen in 1742, although the primeval trees have given place to those of later growth.

Standing before the mouth of the cave we recall the tale which thrilled us in childhood, how the intrepid Putnam, with his neighbors of old Pomfret, after tracking the wolf which had despoiled their flocks to this solitary hiding place in the jaws of the mountain, were unable to force the beast from its lair by dogs or burning fagots, the brave Putnam declared his intention to beard the wolf in its last retreat, and end the matter there and then. He was as good as his word; he first explored the cave, and on his second entrance shot the brute, and the third time dragged her forth to the great joy of all.

Few braver deeds are on record than this; indeed it required iron nerve to meet such a foe, enraged to the last degree, in such close quarters, but Putnam was made of the stuff of which heroes are moulded, and then as ever after was the man for the hour in any emergency.

In view of the fact that this deed of Putnam's is so well authenticated, not only in history but in his biography, written under his own sanction a few years before his death, I cannot conceive how men could be found in the last Legislature of Connecticut who boldly relegated the entire story to the realm of myth, unless we find the solution of the question in the fact that some men are inconoclasts in their very nature, and others from policy.

An approaching storm which had been mustering its forces for some time admonished us we must cut short our visit to the historic den, which we left with reluctance. We had barely time to reach the protecting shelter of the old tavern when the rain came down in torrents, and all the hills around echoed to the bellowing notes of heaven's artillery.

THE PUTNAM FARM.

The storm over, we turned our course to the old General Putnam farm on the northern border of Brooklyn. After riding several miles over an upward grade, till we reached an altitude which embraced a prospect of the entire circle in its scope, we came to the farm which the General purchased about 1739. From the inviting flocks on this farm the wolf made such reprisals which caused its destruction as narrated above. Here Putnam lived with occasional intermissions, and here he died in 1790. The eastern half of the large two-story mansion was built by Putnam, probably before the Revolution; it remains nearly as he left it. We were shown the room where he died, a bedroom leading out of the old-time sitting room. In the corner of the sitting room is the buffet where the General used to keep choice wines and liquors for ready use when guests arrived. After the general's death the farm was owned by his son Israel, who sold it about 1800 to Joseph Mathason from Rhode Island for $4500 in silver. Mathason built the western addition to the house in the same style as the original. The farm remained in this family for three generations, when some 56 years ago it passed into the possession of Mr. Collins, in whose family it still remains. Mrs. Spaulding—his daughter—and her son, G. E. Spaulding, now live on the place, by whom we were courteously shown the premises, and given information concerning its history. The old house is well preserved, and ought to be good for generations to come if cared for as it should be, for it has already become quite a resort for those who take pleasure in the associations of the historic past. On an adjacent farm, also owned at one time by Putnam, still lives Mr. Benjamin Brown, 88 years of age, who was born there, who told us many interesting incidents in the General's life. He said that Putnam, in his last years, gave up his convival habits and became deeply religious. His funeral was held from the house where he died, and was attended by many distinguished people. A fine monument has been erected to his memory on Brooklyn green.

We left the historic hill farm as the western sun allowed every object to give out its longest shadow in honor of its departure, so that it was in the deepening twilight before we reached our abiding place for the night.

THE OLD CADY HOUSE.

Soon after 1700 my ancestor, Capt. Joseph Cady, came from Groton, Massachusetts, and settled in the Nipmuck county, now Putnam, Ct. He was a man of powerful physique, and was feared and respected by his many Indian neighbors. In 1715 he built a pretentious house for those times, about a mile nearly east of the present city of Putnam. It stood near the old Providence road, and was an important rendezvous during colonial and revolutionary days. Capt. Cady was a large landowner, and settled his sons about him. He was a leading man in the affairs of old Killingly, and was chosen the first captain of the trained band there for the common defense. His son Joseph, who succeeded to the old homestead, was a man of letters, a member of the General Court, and the town clerk for many years. He was known as Esquire Cady, because he was the justice of the peace for years, and was reported to be the richest man in old Killingly. On his demise the Cady property was sold to Darias Sessions, Deputy Governor of Rhode Island, who made some repairs on the Cady house and put the farm under high cultivation. The house became a famous resort for noted men during the dark days of the Revolution, including Washington on one of his trips across the country. It came next into the possession of Solomon Cleveland, whose brilliant family became the center of attraction in the old township. But somehow the place went from hand to hand and finally became a tenement house; it was deserted some two years ago, and is now fast going to ruin. It stands on the hillside at the end of an old lane leading from the main road, and is two stories high in front, with the roof retiring to one story in the rear, in the style of the seventeenth century. In the center of the house stands the conventional stone chimney of those days, with a huge fireplace and oven for the kitchen, another for the large sitting room, and still another for the family room. There are some six rooms of varying sizes on each floor. What a history these rooms could tell if they had tongues to reveal what has transpired within their walls during one hundred and eighty years; tales of family reunions, of state secrets whispered by the nation's trusted leaders, of the coming and going of men and women long since gone to rest; but the walls are silent, so the imagination must supply what they fail to give.

It is a pity that the oldest house in eastern Windham should be allowed to go to ruin, it ought to be preserved as a memento of the early settler who braved danger and won success when it meant something to live. The old house commands a pleasant site in full view of the city of Putnam, with the ridges of Pomfret resting against the western horizon for a background, a restful place where one might retire from the whirl of daily tumult to commune with nature.

OLD CHURCH AT PUTNAM HEIGHTS.

This locality, now some three miles from the young city of Putnam, and known as Killingly Hill, has rejoiced in the possession of a church since the early settlement of the town, the first meetinghouse being erected in 1715 a short distance from the present one. It was a modest structure, fitted to meet the needs of the pioneers. The next meetinghouse was built in 1745, and was a large and creditable structure, but it was so much damaged by a storm in 1817 that it became necessary to build a new church in 1818, which still remains to accommodate the twenty-four families of the vicinity. Many good and gifted men have ministered here during the one hundred and eighty years of the church's history, and many men have been auditors who have made their mark in the world. The site is the old ideal one for a church, a fitting crown for a lofty height. The prospect is a pleasing one, commanding a wide view of the Quinneboag valley and its tributaries. It is charmingly rural, set about with well-kept farms, a delightful retreat for the summer visitor who wishes to escape the exactions of a fashionable resort. Personally this hill retreat possesses many attractions, because so many of my ancestors found their church home there in the long ago.

THE PUTNAM TOWN FARM.

I cannot close this paper without saying a word concerning this institution, now under the charge of Mr. Aldrich. He has had many years of experience in conducting such institutions, and from personal investigation of the farm I judge he has commenced successful work here. The management has adopted a wise plan in supplying the outside poor of the town through the warden, who buys at wholesale all needed articles, and deals out to them as their necessities require with the approval of the board; by this plan a great saving is gained; wood from the farm is also dealt out in the same way. The farm is a large one, and appears to be under excellent care. Mr. Aldrich takes great interest in local historic objects and places, and was able to add to the pleasure of my visit by pointing them out. In our ramble over the farm we visited the site of an ancient Indian burial place on the banks of the Quinneboag, now overgrown with a dense forest of pine, through whose branches the morning breeze seemed to sigh a requiem for a long-lost race.

O. P. ALLEN.

A FOND MOTHER-IN-LAW.—A traveler saw a woman take a man by the collar, yank him up the steps into a railroad car, jamb him down into a hot seat near the stove, pile up a valise and two big brown baskets with loose covers and long handles at his feet, and say:

"Now, sit there until I help Mary Jane on the car, and don't move until I come back."

When the woman reached the door the traveler said to her:

"Is that man your husband?"

"N-a-w!" roared the woman. "He's my daughter's husband, and she hasn't spirit enough to say her soul's her own."—Chicago Times.

Kiljordan—"Then I take back my first remark."—Chicago Tribune.

THE CUBAN'S DEADLY MACHETE.

This machete is almost their only weapon, and if Spain is defeated in the present war, Cuba will owe her freedom mainly to it. The conflict is said to hinge very largely on how many of the people in canefields have good machetes. There is not one Cuban in a hundred who knows how to handle a gun. The islanders have been denied the use of firearms so long that those who had fallen into possession of guns in the ten years' rebellion often threw them down when they got into battle and relied chiefly upon their cane knives. The battle of Baira, in which so many Spanish heads were cut off, and which was the bloodiest in Cuban history, was won by cane knives over the best American Springfield rifles in the hands of the Spaniards.

They make indeed a formidable weapon, with which a Cuban now living in New York says he cut off horses' heads in the battles of the late war, and he has more than once seen them split men through from head to foot. In the national museum in Madrid are a number of gun-barrels cut in two by these knives.

There are three forms of the machete. The officer's machete is nothing more or less than a sword, 28 inches in length, made of the very best American spring steel and incased in a leather scabbard. It looks like an ordinary sword, but is much heavier. It is worn by Cuban officers and gentlemen. That worn by the overseers is lighter and more flexible, and made so sharp that with a single stroke it will sever a man's head from the body. But the broad, heavy, 16-inch knife is Cuba's peculiar weapon of defense and offense, and her principal agricultural and domestic implement. It is used for nearly every service to which we turn a knife, an ax, a cleaver, a pruning-hook or a scythe. Forests are cleared with it, and it is about the only tool in a butcher shop. Nowhere else in Spanish America is the machete as generally used. Nearly the whole of Cuba is devoted to the cultivation of cane and tobacco, and every stalk of these crops is harvested with the machete. Great skill in handling them is the result.

It is this skill, gained by incessant use, that makes the machete so deadly a weapon. It is managed, in spite of its weight, with almost the rapidity of a fencing foil. In one of the recent engagements, when a detachment of Spanish cavalry charged on the Cubans in open, the latter are reported to have caught the Spanish sabers in forked sticks which they carried in their hands, and then cut the men off their horses as if they were nothing more than stalks of sugar-cane.

These common cane-knives, on account of their rounded shape, cannot be worn in a scabbard, and thus the naked blade, as sharp as the very best steel can be made, is always dangling about the body of the wearer—which must be about as dangerous as carrying a loaded pistol; this naturally requires the cultivation of careful habits and the avoidance of indecorously jerky motions. Practically every male Cuban wears one. It is his most highly valued (and, on the whole, the most useful) piece of property. In the mountains of southeastern Cuba, the underbrush is so dense that without a machete one cannot travel any distance; and here these weapons do their most deadly work, and are most feared by the Spaniards, for their stroke is the stroke of death.—New York World.

A GIRL AMONG GIRLS.

The Inquirer asks if we haven't seen a handsome girl who was all animation if there were any men about, but who became a listless, unhappy creature if she happened to be thrown into the society of her own sex for an hour or two. The world, the Inquirer goes on, is full of such as she. They are usually very pretty and very young. In the company of men they are bright and interesting, though they are never heard to utter one good word about another girl. They regard it as an awful bore to even be polite to women, and show their contempt so openly that they are not sought after by their own sex, and when the day comes when they are willing to make the advances they usually meet with a very cold reception. At a summer resort where men are scarce they would rather sit and flirt with a callow youth ten years their junior than join a jolly party of girls who find life well worth living even though the masculine element only enters into existence on Saturday nights. No man is too insignificant for such a girl to practice her coquetry upon. She will fuss before the mirror just as long for a country boy of fourteen as for the city man of the world with years and fortune at his back, but she will go about with uncombed hair, slippers down at the heel, and decidedly untidy gowns if she does not expect to see a man.

Now, such girls have no idea of the mistake they are making. Man's admiration is all very lovely, but woman's friendship is equally valuable. The flirtation of to-day may be off to-morrow, but the sincere regard of a woman's heart will outlive the vicissitudes of every-day life; besides, a man likes a woman better who is a favorite of her own sex than one who openly avows her contempt for all women and whom all women studiously avoid. She may be the belle of the ballroom, and, for the time being, the man may be proud to be known as one of the admirers of so popular a girl, but he is not going to marry one who hasn't some women friends. Depend upon this, and when you think it only worth your while to be sweet and pleasant to men, remember that to be really admired by the men you must be equally popular with your own sex.

ORANGE SHERBET SERVED IN ORANGE SKINS.

Cut a circle about two inches in diameter from the stem end of each orange and take out carefully, so as to keep the skin unbroken. Scoop out all the pulp neatly with a spoon, and set the skins in a cold place where they will get thoroughly chilled. If the weather is at all warm it will be necessary to put them in a tinpail and surround this with ice and salt for an hour or longer in order to get them cold enough. Put one quart of water, one pint of sugar, and the grated rinds of two oranges over the fire, and cook 20 minutes. When cool add the juice of six oranges and two lemons, and freeze. If the oranges are very tart more sugar may be required, and the taste must determine this. If snow is used for freezing, pour cold water over it, unless it is very wet snow to begin with, and pack in alternate layers with rock-salt, turning the crank of the freezer at intervals during the process so that it shall be well pressed down. Shortly before serving time fill the chilled orange-skins with the frozen sherbet, and put on the little covers of orange-rind, which have previously been decorated with knots of narrow yellow ribbon for handles. A circle of any waxy green leaves will add to the effect of this course, which may be served either as a dessert, or just after the roast like a sherbet or a punch.

"That was a pretty pen-wiper you were kind enough to leave on my desk," said Mr. Hammett to his wife. "It's very ornamental if it is a trifle small." "Oh, George," shrieked his wife, as her husband drew his pen through the dainty pieces of ribbon, "you've ruined my new bonnet!"—Chicago Record.

Fate.

Two shall be born the whole wide world apart,
And speak in different tongues, and have no thought
Each of the other's being, and no heed;
And these o'er unknown seas to unknown lands
Shall cross, escaping wreck, defying death;
And, all unconsciously, shape every act
And bend each wandering step to this one end;
That, one day, out of darkness they shall meet
And read life's meaning in each other's eyes.

And two shall walk some narrow way of life
So nearly side by side that, should one turn
Ever so little space to right or left,
They needs must stand acknowledged face to face,
And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet,
With groping hands that never clasp, and lips
Calling in vain to ears that never hear,
They seek each other all their weary days
And die unsatisfied—and that is Fate!

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

Five oysters is the usual allowance for a portion.

Lemon juice and salt will remove ordinary iron rust.

Mend the torn pages of books with white tissue paper.

Salt rubbed on the black spots on dishes will remove them.

Save your cold tea; it is excellent for cleaning grained goods.

Before laying a carpet, wash the floor with turpentine, to prevent buffalo moths.

Clean gilt frames with rain water in which flowers of sulphur have been stirred.

Soaking a lamp wick in vinegar and drying before using will prevent smoking.

Powdered pipe clay, mixed with water, will remove oil stains from wall paper.

After knives have been cleaned they may be brilliantly polished with charcoal powder.

A shovelful of hot coals held over spotted varnished furniture will take out the spots.

If your ceilings have been smoked by kerosene lamps, try washing them with soda water.

Table fruit will keep twice as long if it is kept in separate lots. Contact hastens decay.

Fine china should be washed in warm water. Too hot water is apt to crack the enamel.

To keep the glass from cracking, put a silver spoon into a glass jar before filling it with hot water.

Household pests flee before an application composed of two ounces of quicksilver and the whites of two eggs.

Remove stains from mahogany, rosewood, or walnut by touching the spots with a feather wet in diluted nitre.

A new, soft paint brush is a good thing to dust carved furniture with, as the bristles will penetrate the deepest crevices.

Leather satchels may be cleaned with a sponge dipped in warm water in which a little oxalic acid has been dissolved.

Silver should be washed in the hottest water with a little soda in the water, wiped dry, and polished with a chamois skin.

A pinch of soda added to sour fruit will take away much of the tartness and make much less sugar necessary for sweetening.

To clean gilt frames, take a very little soft soap, a half pint of rain water, and half a wineglassful of spirits of hartshorn. Apply with a soft camel's hair brush. After it has been on the frame a minute or two wash it off with clean water. Dry in the sun or a draught, and the next day rub it with chamois.

A simple way to remove grease spots from wall paper is to hold a piece of clean blotting paper over the spot, and press a moderately warm flatiron over it. Repeat the operation until all the grease is out.

A mixture of oil and rottenstone will clean brass and copper. It should be applied with a soft cloth and rubbed until bright with chamois.

Gum arabic and gum tragacanth, in equal parts, dissolved in hot water makes the best and most convenient mucilage you can keep in the house.

Bent whalebones may be straightened and made fit for use again by soaking them in hot water, then straightening them under a press till dry.

Silk which has been badly wrinkled may be smoothed by sponging on the right side with weak gum arabic water, and then ironing on the wrong side.

A good way to test ham is to stick a knife under the bone. If the knife comes out clean and with a sweet smell, the ham is pure and wholesome.

If the bathing water is hard, pour in a few drops of ammonia or keep a bottle of softening fluid, made by pouring hot water over powdered borax, and use that.

Where mildew or iron rust is on a white fabric it may be completely bleached out by the use of salt and lemon juice, and then laying the article in a strong sun.

Boiling water, made strong with ammonia and applied with a whisk broom, cleans willow chairs admirably. Soap should never be used, as it turns them yellow.

Nerve strain can be greatly lessened by a sandwich or a glass of milk when one feels a little done up, or even when you feel idle and disinclined to apply to the household duties.

To banish flies, mix a tablespoonful of finely ground pepper with the same quantity of syrup or treacle in a teacupful of milk. Pour into small saucers and place where flies most congregate.

When stewing fruit, or, in fact, when cooking anything in an open vessel, do not leave the spoon in, if you wish to have it boil quickly. The spoon carries a portion of the heat off into the air.

Hot water should never be used on japaned goods. When you wish to clean them, wet a cloth slightly in warm water and rub the article to be cleaned. Should any smear appear, sprinkle with flour and wipe dry.

Always keep a slice of lemon and a bottle of glycerine to use when washing your hands. The lemon will take off stains, and glycerine used when the hands are wet and wiped off will soften and whiten the skin.

Kitchen mineral soap or pumice stone may be used freely on all dishes. It will remove the stains from white knife handles, the br

PALMER NEWS.

Successful Liquor Raid.

Deputy Sheriff Studley, accompanied by Officer Haynes of Springfield, made a call on William Connolly at Thorndike last Sunday, and succeeded in capturing a couple of quart bottles partially full of whisky, and a two-gallon jug nearly full of the same stuff. Connolly has been suspected of selling for a long time, and has been raided twice before this year, both times unsuccessfully About five minutes past 11 Sunday morning Officer Haynes knocked at one door of Connolly's place, and being a stranger was admitted. On the bar was a quart bottle nearly full of whisky, a glass and a pitcher of water, and an evident customer stood before the bar. Mr. Studley appeared at the front door about this time, but it was locked and Connolly wasn't going to open it, but Haynes suggested that he'd come in anyway, and that a bill of repairs could be saved by unlocking the door, which Connolly evidently concluded was good advice, for he let the officer in. Besides the bottle on the bar a two-gallon jug nearly full, and another quart bottle of stuff was found in the back room. The case will be tried next Thursday.

About 3:30 in the afternoon the officers made a call on Daniel Sullivan, and though there was plenty of liquor about, they failed to secure any of it. Officer Studley stood at one door while Haynes went to another; the former was around the corner of the house where he could not be seen from the room where it was expected to find the stuff, and the first thing he knew a two-gallon jug of whisky came down from a second-story window and smashed on the ground within ten feet of him; numerous bottles of lager also descended, which likewise went to smash. These were quickly followed by a woman with a broom, with which she proceeded to scatter such traces of the liquor as might be lingering in pools above the ground. In the house were found all the paraphernalia of a kitchen dive, glasses, rinsing tub, empty bottles, ice, etc., but no "booze."

Labor Day Bicycle Races.

Attendants at the bicycle races on the driving park next Monday are sure to see some good sport. The diamonds offered as prizes have attracted a number of fast men, and the list of entries is unusally large. Among the riders are some who have records as low as 2 10, which ought to ensure hot races. The management will have no loafing, and a time limit will be put on every race except the handicap, and in addition a tandem will pace each race. The special prize of a diamond for the fastest mile made that day will be an added incentive to the men to make fast time. The two trick bicycle riders, Atkins and Prof. Lyon, will show something new in their line, and each will try for the record of a half mile riding backwards; they will not ride together, but each will make the trial separate. The list of entries is:

School Matters.

All the schools of the town will resume sessions next Tuesday, with these teachers:

High school — A. W. Thayer principal, Miss Anna L. Fisherdick, Miss Grace G. Rickey.

Palmer grammar school—Miss Ora D. Eddy principal, Miss Abbie J. Wallace, Miss Helen D. Robinson, Miss Mabel J. Sedgwick, Mrs. Ellen S. Leach, Miss Lizzie F. Brown.

Three Rivers grammar school—Miss Helen L. Sweet principal, Miss Jennie C. Twiss, Miss Cora B. Clark, Miss Kate M. Twiss, Miss Annie B. Crane.

Thorndike grammar school — Miss Carrie A. Parker principal, Miss Effie W. Moffatt, Miss Minnie W. Jillson, Mrs. Mary E. Murdock, Miss Annie O'Connor, Miss S. Beulah Thayer.

Bondsville grammar school — Miss Dora P. Cleveland principal, Miss Josie E. Shea, Miss Emma F. Barney, Miss Margaret T. Shea, Miss Harriet B. Thayer.

Wire Mill—Miss B. M. Dowd.

Mason district—Miss L. Ada Berry.

Teacher of drawing, Miss Nellie M. Mahoney.

A music teacher is to be employed, but has not been engaged yet. The teaching force this year will be practically the same as last, the only change being Miss Rickey in place of Miss Pierce in the high school; in view of this fact the coming year should be one of good school growth, as the teachers who are familiar with the past work can build on it better than could new and strange ones. Drawing and music are added this year, thus bringing the Palmer schools in line with others. It will be noticed that only two of the district schools are open, the Wire Mill and Mason; the pupils who formerly attended the others are this year to be carried to the schools in the villages, to their advantage in the way of better instructors and an added incentive to work by reason of increased numbers about them.

There will be a "Parent's Day" each term this year, when parents and friends will be especially invited to visit the schools, and parents and citizens generally should visit the schools and see the work and judge personally of what is being done.

The Opera House Season.

The season at the opera house will be opened next Wednesday night by Hi. Henry's minstrels, and no doubt they will be greeted by a large audience. The company is traveling in a palatial car built expressly for Mr. Henry, said to be the finest of its kind on the road. The performance is said to be second to none, and is receiving the highest praises wherever it is given. The Atlanta, Ga., Constitution says of it:

A genuine surprise in the way of minstrelsy last night, the attraction being Hi. Henry's Minstrels. It is safe to say that the audience enjoyed the performance probably better than any other minstrel entertainment that has appeared in Atlanta in recent years. The first part was especially good; it was novel, new and gorgeous in the stage settings. The end men acquitted themselves well, the gags and jokes were good, no vulgarism, and it can be truly said that the usual burnt cork style of throwing local hits and witticisms was entirely dispensed with and a new, modern, up-to-date manner was sustained throughout. There is probably no better cornetist than Hi. Henry. He is new to Atlanta theatre-goers, but he can always be assured of a warm welcome whenever he returns to Atlanta.

The standard scale of prices of the house will be 150 reserved chairs at 25 cents—all on orchestra floor, 250 at 50 cents, and 200 at 75 cents. When extra expensive attractions are booked the prices will be 50 cents, 75 cents, and $1. The ladies' parlor on the second floor will be open at 7 o'clock on entertainment evenings, and holders of reserved seat tickets may use the private entrance to orchestra floor at foot of stairs leading to Odd Fellows' hall, if they desire. The opera house doors will be open at 7.30, and performances will begin at 8. At the close all five of the exits will be open. A cafe will be opened in the banquet hall entertainment evenings in the near future.

A valuable cow belonging to Rufus Flynt, which had been sick for a week, grew so much worse yesterday that she had to be killed. An examination showed that she had strained her spine in some way.

Sheriff Studley went to Spencer this morning and brought back Joe Sweet of Three Rivers for the non-support of his family. Sweet left with the merry-go-round, and has failed to contribute to his family's support since.

There will be a ball game on the driving park grounds to-morrow afternoon between the Thorndikes and the Warrens. Each club has won one game, and the one to-morrow is to settle the championship question, so is likely to be a hot game.

The best score at the shoot of the Sportsmen's Club Tuesday afternoon was made by Fred Gunn, who broke 13 out of a possible 20; the next best were Silas Keith 12, L. E. Chandler 9, G. E. Buck 8. The best scores yesterday were: Silas Keith 14, W. J. Keith 13, F. J. Adams 11.

After a vacation of four weeks all departments of the Universalist church will open next Sunday. Rev. H. F. Moulton has returned from his vacation spent in Block Island, Saratoga, and Good Luck, N. J. He will be assisted in the morning services by Mr. H. S. Mitchell of Meadville, Pa.

The subject at the Congregational church next Sunday morning will be "Christ's Death in Terms of Our Daily Living." In the evening there will be a musical and responsive service by the aid of a special chorus, and the pastor will preach on "Discipleship: Its Demands and Rewards."

The sale of a quantity of property held by Dr. Bell of Three Rivers, which was seized on a mortgage foreclosure by J. W. Cheney, which was originally postponed three weeks until last Monday, was on that day again postponed three weeks, the matter of proprietorship not having been satisfactorily settled.

Almost every train which went east over the Boston and Albany road Monday and Tuesday was run in two sections to accommodate the travel to the Knights Templar celebration at Boston. Seven extra trains were run Monday and seven Tuesday, in addition to the extra cars and double sections of the regular trains.

The management of Forest Lake Garden is making arrangements to give the patrons of that resort a good time Labor Day. There will be the customary amusements, boating, bowling, etc., with dancing afternoon and evening, with music by Dean's orchestra of Ware. Refreshments will be served at the restaurant.

The bids for the new schoolhouse at Thorndike were opened last night, and the committee finds that such a building as they would like and the necessities of the village seem to demand, cannot be built for the original sum appropriated, and a special town meeting has been called for a week from to-morrow to see if the voters will grant additional funds.

About two o'clock Tuesday morning a tramp was discovered in the barn on Rufus Flynt's premises on Central street, he having cast his lot in with the cow, which was confined in a box stall. The animal was sick and unable to stand, and was kicking about in the stall, and it is a wonder the fellow did not have his brains knocked out. He begged so hard to be let go that he was finally allowed to depart.

At a meeting held in Grand Army hall Tuesday evening it was voted to organize a camp of the Sons of Veterans, and these officers were nominated: Captain, Dr. L. H. Hendee; 1st lieutenant, B. M. Griswold; 2d lieutenant, Louis K. Cross; camp council, B. M. Griswold, Chester W. Cross, W. A. Lawson. Twenty-two signified their intention of joining at the meeting, and others are expected. The name of the camp has been left to the Grand Army post. The camp will be mustered in next Tuesday night by O H. Cook of Boston.

The fire district meeting called for Tuesday evening was quietly dissolved without any business being done, on account of an informality in the warrant. The warrant was dated August 15th, and the meeting was called for the "twenty-seventh day of August next," which would bring it into 1896, rather too long to wait for the present difficulty to be adjusted. As the meeting was plainly illegally called nothing could be done but to adjourn and call another, which has been done for Tuesday evening, September 10th, at 7.30 in the district court room.

The regular church meeting before the administration of communion was held last evening in the chapel of St. Paul's Universalist church. It was voted that the pastor should arrange for a series of home religious services; they are not to take the place of the frequent home pastoral services as now held, rather they are to be home religious services in the name of the church among the aged, sick and any others who are not able to attend the regular Sunday and week-day services of the church. The pastor gave the first of a series of "Chalk Talks" on a "Victorious Faith." These talks will be continued weekly for three months.

The New London Northern road offers an excursion to Saratoga next Thursday, via Millers Falls and the famous Hoosac Tunnel, and as the fare for the road trip is only $2 it will no doubt be well patronized. A special train will be run each way, and going will leave Palmer at 9.30 a. m., reaching Saratoga at 2.55 p. m. The return trip will be made the next day, Friday, the train leaving at 3.10 p. m., reaching Palmer at 8 50. This will give excursionists a whole day in which to see Saratoga and visit Mount McGregor, where Gen. Grant died. The annual Floral Parade and Battle of Flowers will take place at 3 p. m. on Thursday, the excursionists arriving in ample time to see it.

Some queer specimens of English are found in the mails sometimes, and one came to O. P. Allen, secretary of the agricultural society, the other day, a postal card requesting him to reserve a space on the fair grounds for the writer the two days of the fair. The card was addressed:

A sad case of neglect and abuse was brought out by the arrest of Edward Cardinal of Three Rivers for drunkenness last Friday night. There are six in the family, including a paralytic mother, and the whole of the work has been put upon a girl of 13, the youngest daughter. She is an unusually bright appearing child, and made a good impression while telling her story in the court at her father's trial Monday. The mother is unable to help herself to any extent, and is not contented to sit still for any length of time; as she cannot raise alone she must be helped, and this task has devolved upon the little girl in addition to her other duties of getting the meals and washing her father's clothes. Probably fifty times a day she has put forth all her strength to rise her mother to her feet, only to help her back to her chair again in a few moments. The disposition of the mother is not a pleasant one with all her troubles, and the father has been in the habit of coming home drunk and abusing all hands. The girl has not been to school the past three years. This morning she was brought into court as a neglected child.

Massachusetts Hospital for Epileptics.

The farmers have begun to cut their second crop of hay.

Engineer W. G. Cameron has been on the sick list for the past few days.

Miss Dora Green and mother of Wales spent Tuesday with Miss May Royce.

Miss N. J. Rice, a former teacher at the state primary school, spent part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Prentiss.

Dr. Copp, the new superintendent, is expected to begin his duties here Monday. The main buildings are to be removed, and new suitable buildings will be put up as soon as possible. Dr. Copp has for the past ten years been connected with an institution of this kind, and will put up buildings of the most approved design.

District Court.

John Sitcie and John Toper, Polanders with a limited knowledge of English, paid $10 each Monday morning for having been drunk at Bondsville on Sunday. Michael Dalton of Monson also paid a like amount, the result of not taking the Bondsville officer's advice and going home when told to do so, but remaining and "sassing" the officer when supposedly out of his reach. Edward Cardinal was also charged with drunkenness, and had his case continued until this morning for sentence.

Tuesday morning Timothy Murphy of New Brunswick paid $5 for having been drunk. Joseph McCann of Woonsocket was sent to the house of correction for one month for a similar offense, and John Dolan of Worcester was given two months. William Campbell, who was picked up decidedly drunk about 8 o'clock that morning, was arraigned and his case continued until Wednesday, when he went to the house of correction for 60 days.

Base Ball Notes.

Still they come; another victory on Saturday.

Richard Sheehan will umpire Saturday's game between the Warrens and Thorndikes at Palmer.

McAvoy, the left fielder for the Wheelrights, made a splendid catch of a line hit which seemed good for a couple of bases.

The Thorndikes will play the Warrens for the championship on the Palmer Driving park to-morrow, and it will be another hot game.

Kelliher played a good game at first Saturday, and his stops of wild throws saved the visitors from scoring several times during the game.

Fleming was in the box for the home team on Saturday last, and pitched a good game; Longtine played his usual good game behind the bat.

THORNDIKES 9—WHEELWRIGHTS 5.

The home team added another victory to the list on Saturday, when they defeated the Wheelwrights by a score of 9 to 5. The game was lifeless from the start, and was an uninteresting one save in the latter part. Thorndike hit the ball hard as usual, and in 5th inning took the lead, which they held until the finish.

After the business had been transacted Tuesday evening the members of the Y. P. S. C. E. were entertained by the Young Men's Quintette, and several other members. Miss Florence Burlingame, Miss Barnes, Trenor Judd, H. A Barker and Harry Newell deserve great credit for the efficient manner in which they fulfilled their parts.

Agent Bullock of Springfield came out this week to settle a little domestic affair in Edward Cardinal's home. Mrs. Cardinal, who is an invalid, complains of ill-treatment from her husband, who she says beats her when he is drunk. When in one of his fits a few days ago he struck his wife across the fingers, hurting her quite severely.

The entertainment given by the young people in the rooms over the mill office Saturday evening is well spoken of by all who attended, but many who were intending to go were kept away by the rain. The two or three weeks' training were not wasted on our amateurs, for everything went off without a hitch. After the entertainment ice cream and fruit were served.

An Exceedingly Narrow Escape.

Friday morning there was quite a little excitement in the engine room at the mill. Henry Ferrill, who has charge of the dynamos, was shifting a belt on a 51-inch pulley when the belt, which was made of 16-inch leather, broke. The pulley was making about 400 revolutions a minute. Simultaneous with the breaking of the belt a piece of the pulley weighing 50 pounds flew within six inches of Mr. Ferrill's head, crashed through a 2-inch partition and fell about 40 feet away. This is the second time that Mr. Ferrill has come near losing his life in this way.

A Wedding Which Didn't Take Place.

Wednesday evening a contemplated wedding was nipped in the bud. Everything was apparently all right; the invitations had been sent out, the trosseau had been prepared, and about sixty persons had assembled to taste the wedding cake, but the happy couple did not make their appearance. All the trouble lay in the fact that the would-be bride was only fourteen years old, consequently a license was out of the question. But if the young man can keep up his courage two years longer, and if the guests are as punctual as they were this time, the ceremony may yet take place.

An Exciting Chase.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Whiting, a livery stable keeper at Bondsville, came after Officer Manning to go with him in search of a man who had stolen a horse and carriage of his. Mr. Manning informed him that he could not arrest anyone outside of this town, but Mr. Whiting said that at least he could help him get his horse back. The horse had been stolen in a peculiar way. It had been let to a man who left it standing in front of the hotel, and while he was in the house Daniel McCarty and two friends, all under the influence of liquor, jumped in and drove through this place toward Belchertown. They were easily followed by the swerving tracks of the wheels. Opposite Tom Sullivan's the rowdies had a smash-up, and the carriage was demolished. Just at this point the pursuers came in sight. Two of the men ran into the woods and McCarty jumped on the horse to make his escape, but the horse was of a different mind. Of course Mr. Whiting got his horse, but they could not touch McCarty, and before a warrant could be secured he had skipped, and is still at large.

Probably the Boy Lied—Thomas Lally Evidently Not Much Abused.

One of the Sunday papers published a story of the ill-treatment of a 14-years-old state primary school boy at the hands of W. S. Dunham of this place, in whose home he had lived for about nine months. On last Friday the boy was returned to his mother's home in South Boston, and complaint was made by Senator William H. McMorrow to Commissioner Wrightington of the State Board of Lunacy and Charity. The boy, Thomas Lally, by name, told a tale of hard work and long hours, but added that he was not unkindly dealt with otherwise. The JOURNAL correspondent has called upon Mr. and Mrs. Dunham and heard their side of the case, which is that Thomas, though good to work, also liked to play like other boys, and was given many a half-day off; he was rather slow, and milked but one cow a day instead of three, as he stated; he chopped wood of course, as many boys do, and helped about blasting rocks during the last two weeks. "I do not own a quarry, like the Flynt's," Mr. Dunham said, "I wish I did." The ledge referred to in the boy's story proved to be a large rock in the mowing near the road, which Mr. Dunham wished to remove. In April he bought $2 worth of dynamite and has nearly half of it left. Thomas assisted, because he wished to. The senator called attention to the boy's "filthy" condition. Mrs. Dunham states that it is true the shirt worn home by Thomas was very dirty, but explains that she was away when the agent called for the boy, and as Thomas was not particularly neat by nature, he did not change his shirt, but carried a clean one home. The boy did not attend school during the time he was with the Dunhams, but this, they claim, was through ignorance of the law, nothing having been said to them about schooling when the boy was placed there. They feel the matter very keenly, and are perfectly willing to have everything investigated. They have lived in town about two years, coming from Ware. Their home is known as the James Madison Squier farm, and is near State Line; from the general appearance of the people and the place it would seem that a boy would have a good home there. The question of the boy's schooling has very forcibly called the attention of the school superintendent to the fact that there are other state wards living in the out districts who have not had the required amount of schooling the past year, and such cases will be looked after very sharply as soon as the schools open.

Chaffee Family Annual Reunion.

The annual reunion of the Chaffee family, which was held on Flynt Park Wednesday, was a very enjoyable affair. There were 125 present, as against 90 last year. Sixteen towns and cities were represented, Boston, Springfield, Stafford, Union, Ware, Willington, Brimfield, Indian Orchard, Hampden, Suffield, Enfield, Belchertown, Rockville, Palmer, Northampton and Monson. The pavilion and park were handsomely decorated through the kindness of Mr. Flynt. At 3 in the afternoon a business session was called; Munroe Chaffee was chosen chairman, and these officers were elected: Clerk and treasurer, Mrs. Henry Merrick; committee to introduce the various families, Miss Myra Thompson and Miss Annie Chaffee; historian, to write the full history of the family, Norman Chaffee of Stafford. At a meeting of the school committee Wednesday evening it was voted to admit Lizzie O'Brien and Wilbur Stacy to the Academy, their examinations having been taken that day. It was also unanimously voted that, as the present system of distributing text books results in the constant changing of hands, frequently compelling careful scholars to use soiled or damaged books, exposing them to possible contagion, making it difficult to trace damage to its proper source and give due credit to the deserving, and leaving the scholar at the close of the course without books for future reference, that the superintendent be instructed to distribute new books to beginners in the use of said books, the same to be retained by the pupils, and at the completion of the course they be allowed to purchase the books at a price to be agreed upon by the superintendent and the text book committee.

The infernal pow-wow last Saturday night, which lasted well into Sunday, may have been interesting to the participants, but the rest of the inhabitants of the village failed to enjoy the occasion, and the sooner this sort of business is stopped the better.

The fall term of the schools in town will begin next Tuesday, with the exception of one at the depot village, which will not commence until September 10, as Miss Harris, the teacher, who has spent part of her vacation wrestling with typhoid fever, will not be able to begin her duties till that time.

Sympathy for bereaved ones is not all dead, but it is a rare thing to see a man in these busy days leave all work and strew flowers on the graves of departed friends, then out of kindness go and get the bereaved ones and give them a pleasant ride to see the token of love.

There was a large crowd on the street last Saturday afternoon to see the bicycle road race. There were 10 starters, but Ritches and Russell of Three Rivers dropped out on their return from West Warren. Price started from the scratch, instead of taking the handicap of two minutes and 15 seconds allowed him, and on his return from West Warren was only an eighth of a mile behind the leaders, who were two-minute men. Price soon caught the string and might easily have won the race if he had not passed them and set the pace nearly all the way from Warren to West Brookfield and return, the others spurting past him a short distance from the tape. As it was he captured the fifth prize, also the diamond for the fastest time over the course, and the gold watch for the fastest mile by a Warren Bicycle club rider. The winner of the race was Granger of North Brookfield, Cooley of North Brookfield second, Hellyar of Warren third, Leland of Brookfield fourth, Mann of Monson sixth, Tucker of North Brookfield seventh. The course was 13¾ miles, and the time was 43 minutes.

Linens.

Perhaps a score of women come every day after particular sorts of linens already gone. Linen goods of the sort that we've been telling of in the papers lately must be attended to quick; thousands of people within an hour's trading distance of us watch our store news.

School Shoes
For Boys and Girls.

The healthier the boy the harder he is on shoes; same with the girls. School boys and school girls are hard on shoes anyway.

The shoes to fit the case then are the tough shoes; the tougher the better. No; not that. Tough shoes are hard and cruel on tender feet. Get them stout and strong, but let them be supple and easy. Pay a dollar for fair ones—for either boy or girl—a dollar fifty; two, three dollars if you like.

Four things to pay attention to---fit, quality, workmanship and style. More of all four together here for the money that you pay, than can be got elsewhere.

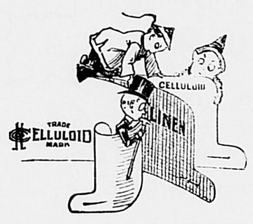
Guess How Many packages of Pearline have been consumed. Hundreds of millions! Successful from the very start, it is more successful now than ever.

Every year the sales are piling up and increasing, though every month brings some new would-be imitation. Why is it? If you're one of the millions of women who are using Pearline, you won't have to ask why. This is the reason: It is the best thing of its kind. And that is what most women want, for their washing and cleaning.

Beware of imitations. 352 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.



"CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid," thus making them strong, durable and waterproof. When soiled they can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a wet cloth. No other waterproof goods are made with this interlining, consequently no other goods can possibly give satisfaction. Do not forget that every piece of the genuine is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Insist upon goods so marked and refuse anything else if offered. If your dealer does not keep them you can procure a sample from us direct by enclosing amount and stating size and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

Hostess (with whom little Willy is taking dinner)—"And does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Willy?" Willy (who has asked for the second piece)—"No, ma'am." Hostess—"Well, do you think she would like you to have two pieces here?" Willy (confidently)—"Oh! she wouldn't care. This isn't her pie, you know!"—Puck.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhœa of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, a prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minn. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaints." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn.

Little Dot—"I'm just the luckiest girl that ever was." Aunt—"Why so?" Little Dot—"When I was out walkin' my foot began to hurt so I had to sit right down and take off my shoe; and what do you think it was that hurt? It was my button-hook that had got into my shoe." Aunt—"But where was the luck?" Little Dot—"Why, don't you see? I had the button-hook to put on my shoe again?"—Good News.

Mr. Decker had been entertaining a party of his friends in the parlor, and the aroma of their perfectos still lingered in the curtains. Mrs. Decker was properly disgusted as she came into the room. She threw the windows wide open and remarked: "Well, it's all very well to talk about this new smokeless powder, but I don't see why somebody hasn't had gumption enough to invent a smokeless tobacco."—Judge.

Rural Liars.—Old Inhabitant (loafing at Cross Roads grocery)—"Talkin about crop failures, I remember a time when people had to eat up all the farm stock and then live on the fodder wot they had saved fer the cattle." Older Inhabitant—"Huh! That's nothin'. Why, I recollect the time when provisions got so scarce that the starvin' farmers hed to go out an' shoot an amateur sportsman fer dinner, an' then cook him with the wood from the 'No Trespass' signs."—New York Weekly.

ONE WEARY MINISTER'S VALEDICTORY.—A country minister in a certain Western town, according to the Rehoboth Sunday Herald, took a permanent leave of his congregation in the following pathetic manner: "Brothers and sisters, I come to say goodby. I don't think God loves this church, because none of you ever die. I don't think you love each other, because I never marry any of you. I don't think you love me, because you have not paid my salary. Your donations are moldy fruit and wormy apples, and 'by their fruits ye shall know them.' Brothers, I am going away to a better place. I have been called to be a chaplain of a penitentiary. Where I go ye cannot come, but I go to prepare a place for you, and may the Lord have mercy on your souls. Goodby."

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Saved My Life.

"A year ago last winter, after exposure to storms, I caught a severe cold, after which chronic eczema appeared on the calf of my left leg and spread all over my lower limb from knee to ankle, and the itching and burning was something awful. Added to this was a severe pain, seemingly in the bone. At last it became so that I had to give up work and was unable to walk. I had to have my leg bandaged all the time and frequent changes of the cloths. For nine months I sat with my leg resting in a chair.

Oh, It Was Dreadful!

Friends said I could not live long. In all I had seven different physicians, all to no purpose whatever. I knew the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla as I had, some years before, taken it with benefit, and decided to try it for my apparently hopeless case. In two or three days after I began my appetite was better and my courage revived. To make a long story short, the eruption entirely disappeared, and the flesh on my leg resumed perfectly healthy appearance. I was soon able to walk about. I cannot tell how amazed my neighbors and friends were. I can now walk without any lameness, as well as ever. Have not the slightest eruption or itching or burning, or any sort of trouble whatever with my leg. The gratitude I owe Hood's Sarsaparilla is simply unspeakable." THOS. The Exposition Relative.

Pack yer trunk, Mirandy, an' Molly, trim yer hat,
Fer here they've writ a letter where our relatives are at;
They're livin' in Atlanty, in a house six stories high,
An' we'll see the Exposition by an' by, by an' by!

Put up a jar o' pickles, an' a basket full o' eggs;
An ketch a dozen pullets with the fat and yaller legs;
Throw in some watermelons—the "Baker" and the "Gem,"
Fer we're goin' to see our kinfolks, and we'll live awhile on them!

They say this Exposition—hit'll beat the county fair;
(Now Molly, you be stylish, an' go bang yer sister's hair!)
Atlanty's overrun with folks—there ain't a house to rent;
But we're goin' to our kinfolks, an' we'll never need a cent.

They'll put us in a house o' brick, with papered walls an' sich;
They'll ring a bell fer dinner, an' we'll live like we was rich!
They'll make the silver jingle, till we think we're seein' stars;
They'll take us out on Peachtree an' they'll ride us on the cars!

It may be they'll be crowded an' can't 'commodate no more;
But I reckon we're obligin', an' we'll just sleep on the floor!
We're goin' to see our kinfolks—or we'll know the reason why,
An' we'll see the Exposition by an' by, by an' by!
—Frank L. Stanton in Atlanta Constitution.

AN ENGINEER'S STORY.

The following thrilling story was told by the late Duff Brown, one of the oldest locomotive engineers in the country:

"In 1869 I was running a train on the Buffalo, Corry & Erie Railroad. The track from Prospect, or Mayville Summit to Brocton Junction is so crooked that while the distance is actually only ten miles, the curves make it by rail fourteen. The grade for the whole distance is over seventy feet to the mile.

"About nine o'clock on the night of August 17, 1869, we reached the summit with a train of two passenger cars, six oil cars and a box car. The latter contained two valuable trotting horses and their keepers, on their way, I believe, to Chicago.

"There were fifty or sixty passengers in the two cars. I got the signal to start from the conductor and pulled out. We had got under considerable headway, when, looking back, I saw an oil car in the middle of the train was on fire. I reversed the engine and whistled for brakes. The conductor and brakeman jumped off, uncoupled the passenger cars, set the brakes on them and brought them to a stop. Supposing that the brakes on the burning oil cars would also be put on, I called to a brakeman on the box car to draw the coupling pin between that car and the head oil tank, backing so that he could do it, intending to run far enough to save the box car and locomotive. As I ran down the hill, after the pin had been withdrawn, what was my horror to see that the burning cars were following me at a speed that was rapidly increasing. The men had not succeeded in putting on the brakes. I saw that the only thing there was to be done was to run it to Brocton, and the chances were that we would never reach there at the speed which we were obliged to make around those sharp curves, where we had never run over 20 miles an hour. When I saw the flaming cars—for the whole six were on fire by this time—plunging after me, and only a few feet away, I pulled the throttle open. The oil cars caught me though, before I got away. They came with full force against the rear of the box car, smashing in one end and knocking the horses and their keepers flat on the floor.

"The heat was almost unendurable, and do my best I couldn't put more than thirty feet between the pursuing fire and ourselves. By the light from the furnace, as the fireman opened the door to pile in coal, I caught sight of the face of one of the horsemen, he having crawled up to the grated opening in the end. It was as pale as death, and he begged me for God's sake to give the engine more steam. I was giving her then all the steam she could carry, and the grade itself was sufficient to carry us down at the rate of 50 miles an hour. We went so fast that the engine refused to pump. Every time we struck one of those curves the old girl would run on almost one set of wheels, and why in the world she didn't topple over is something I never could understand. She seemed to know that it was a race of life or death, and worked as if she were alive.

"The night was dark, and the road ran through the woods, deep rock cuts and along high embankments. There we were, thundering along at lightning speed and only a few paces behind us that fiery demon in full pursuit. There were fifty thousand gallons of oil in those tanks at least, and it was all aflame, making a flying avalanche five hundred feet long. The flames leaped into the air nearly a hundred feet. The roar was like that of some great cataract. Now and then a tank would explode with a noise like a cannon, when a column of flame and showers of burning oil would be scattered about in the woods. The whole country was lighted up for miles around. Well, it wasn't long, going at the rate we made, before the lights of Brocton came in sight down the valley.

"The relief I felt was short-lived. I remembered that train No. 8 on the Lake Shore Road would be at the junction about the time we would reach it. No. 8 was the Cincinnati express. Our only hope along the race had been that the switchman at the junction would think to open the switch connecting the cross-cut track with the Lake Shore track, and let us run into the latter, where the grade would be against us, if anything, and where we would soon get out of the way of the oil cars. The switch would be closed now for the express, and our last hope was gone, unless the express was late or someone had sense enough to flag it. While we were thinking of this we saw the train tearing along down the junction. Could we reach the junction, get the switch, and the switch be set back for the express before the latter got there? If not, there would be an inevitable crash, in which not only we but scores of others would be crushed to death. All this conjecturing did not occupy two seconds, but in these two seconds I lived years. 'Good God!' I said to my fireman, 'what are we to do?' The fireman promptly replied—and he was a brave little fellow—that I should whistle for a switch and take the chances. I did so. That whistle was one prolonged yell of agony. It was a shriek that seemed to tell us that our brave old engine knew our danger and had its fears.

"Neither the fireman nor myself spoke another word. Thanks be to God! The engineer on the express train, seeing us tearing down the mountain with an eighth of a mile of fire in close pursuit of us, knew in a moment that only one thing could save us. He whistled for brakes and got his train at a standstill not ten feet from the switch. The switchman answered our signal, and we shot on the Shore track and whizzed on by the depot and through the place like a rocket. The burning cars followed us in, of course, but their race was run. They had no propelling power now, and after chasing us for a mile they gave up the pursuit, and in three hours there was nothing left of them but smoking ruins.

"My fireman and I were so weak when we brought our locomotive to a stop that we couldn't get out of our cab. The two horsemen were unconscious in the box car. The horses were ruined. And how long do you think we were in making that sixteen miles? We ran two miles up the Lake Shore track. Just twelve minutes from the summit to the place where we stopped! A plump eighty miles an hour, not counting the time lost in getting under headway and stopping beyond Brockton."—Ex.

DON'T KILL THE DOG.

"If you are bitten by a dog, don't kill the beast, but take every precaution to let him live for a few days, at least." Prof. Logorio, chief of the Pasteur Institute at Chicago, made this oracular statement to a reporter of the Tribune, and he is supposed to be authority on "dogs that bite and what to do with them."

"It is a great mistake people make," he said, "to start in at once to kill a dog that has bitten them or have it killed for them. It has been proven scientifically and is admitted now by all physicians who are posted that hydrophobia is not a spontaneous disease, and cannot be given to a person by a dog bite unless the dog be mad when it causes the wound. The dog's condition, if it be mad, will be manifested within two days, or two weeks at the latest. By permitting it to live, therefore, the physician can tell definitely whether the person bitten is liable to have hydrophobia. If the dog goes mad within that time they know that the person bitten may be inoculated with the same dread disease and may have the same fate. If the dog does not go mad then there is no fear of hydrophobia and the wound can be treated the same as any other wound be. By killing the dog you destroy the chance of certainty as to the fate of the person bitten, and leave the imagination full reign to fear the worst results where it might have been possible to know in advance that hydrophobia was impossible."—Chicago Tribune.

Woven boullibaise, salads in cloth, poems in wool. You would sing paeans to his lunacy.

Describe the curlycues, waves, wavelets, eccentrics of all sorts! Bah! To attempt it is to prove one's incapacity.

The Bridge.

I stood on the bridge at midnight,
As the clocks were striking the hour,
And the moon rose o'er the city,
Behind the dark church tower.

I saw her bright reflection
In the waters under me,
Like a golden goblet falling
And sinking into the sea.

Among the long, black rafters
The wavering shadows lay,
And the current that comes from the ocean
Seemed to lift and bear them away.

As sweeping and eddying through them
Rose the belated tide,
And streaming into the moonlight,
The seaweed floated wide.

And like those waters rushing
Among those wooden piers,
A flood of thought came o'er me
That filled my eyes with tears.

How often, O how often,
In the days that had gone by,
I had stood on that bridge at midnight
And gazed on that wave and sky.

How often, O how often,
I had wished that the ebbing tide
Would bear me away on its bosom
O'er the ocean wild and wide.

For my heart was sad and restless,
And my life was full of care,
And the burden laid upon me
Seemed greater than I could bear.

But now it has fallen from me,
It is buried in the sea,
And only the sorrows of others
Throws its shadow over me.

Yet whenever I cross the river
On its bridge of wooden piers,
Like the odor of brine from the ocean
Comes the thought of other years.

And I think how many thousands
Of care-encumbered men,
Each bearing his burden of sorrow,
Have crossed that bridge since then.

I see the long procession
Still passing to and fro,
The young heart young and restless
And the old subdued and slow.

And forever and forever,
As long as the river flows,
As long as the heart has passion,
As long as life has woes,

The moon and its broken reflection
And its shadows shall appear,
As the symbol of love in heaven,
And its wavering shadows here.

A JOURNALISTIC COMPLICATION.

Not to make a mystery of this story and thus harrow up the reader's feelings as we go along with the recital of the curious game of cross-purposes at which Minnie Fleming and her husband played, I will state the facts of the beginning, so that you may understand the situation.

Minnie Fleming was a subdued, quiet, little women, with something like ten times the amount of brains her husband possessed, but she was not aware of it and would have been very indignant if anyone had ventured to suggest such a thing, for she looked up to her husband with love, admiration, and respect.

Knowing Jim Fleming well, it always seemed to me that his wife's admiration for him was entirely misplaced. This may be professional jealously, for I have to admit that I never could read with patience anything Fleming ever wrote. His work seemed to me, not to put it too plainly, guff of the slushiest sort, and there is too much of that kind of writing in the world now. Jim Fleming is a big, gruff, somewhat good-natued person, with a thorough belief in his own abilities, which, as I have intimated, most of us do not think justifiable by facts. He is the editor of Pot-Shots, a London weekly that used to have a large circulation which is now generally understood to have fallen off on account of the tremendous competion there is in the journalistic business. It is a paper that offers £2000 insurance money to the heirs of a man who is killed by falling out of a balloon, if at the time of the disaster he happened to have a copy of Pot-Shots in his pocket.

Now it happened that little Mrs. Minnie Fleming had literary ideas that were properly crushed by her big husband. She possessed, as I have said, an amazing respect for his literary judgment, and with fear and trembling she had on several occasioms submitted little stories to him, hoping that they might merit a place between the covers of Pot-Shots, but Jim ridiculed the stupidity of these yarns so severely that Mrs. Fleming, after having a quiet little cry all by herself, showed him no more of these efforts at fiction. Nevertheless, she thought her stories, if not good enough for Pot-Shots, might be palmed off on other less well edited journals, so she took to sending her stories round to other of the London publications, getting them back as a general rule, but having one taken now and then; just enough success to keep up her courage. You may be sure that she took good care not to let her husband know anything of these excursion into the fields of literature, but she hoped to be able to earn something with her pen, with the humble desire of helping Jim out, if ever he wanted a little additional money. She had read pretty little stories about wives who have saved a penny to-day and threepence to-morrow, storing the coins away so that when they were poured out, on the coming of a family crisis, they amounted to a wonderful fund that tided over all the difficulties. She soon found that her chief customer was the editor of the Family Bouncer, a weekly paper that went in strongly for fiction of all kinds. Her little stories seemed to suit the kind of readers who took that celebrated journal, and although the pay was small at first, the "crises fund," as she called it, was constantly augmented.

At last she received a very nice letter from the editor of the Family Bouncer. He said he had been watching her little stories with interest for some time past, and that he felt certain she could write a serial if she set her mind to it. Without making any definite promises, he wrote that he hoped she would try, and that she would let him see the result. This letter filled the timorous little heart of Minnie with joy, and she set herself to work to write the long story.

Not to make too long a story of this long story, it may be said that it pleased the editor, was printed in installments, and more than pleased the readers of the Family Bouncer.

Mrs. Fleming wrote under the name of "Hilda Markham," and the result of the appearance of her first long story was that Greig & Co., the literary agents, wrote to her and offered to place any stories she cared to write at as advantageous prices as the market would afford, for a commission of ten per cent. This offer she accepted, and the results were extremely gratifying to her, whatever they may have been to the editors who had to pay the increased prices.

And this brings us to the point where this story really begins. One editor generally knows pretty well which of his contemporaries, esteemed or otherwise, has the largest circulation and which has not, and Jim Fleming saw with dismay that the circulation of his own paper was falling rapidly, and that it was evident that his penny public was drifting over to the Family Bouncer. In investigating the reason for this he quickly came upon the bald fact that the increase in his rival was largely due to the stories of the new writer, Hilda Markham. So he resolved to get a story from that lady at all hazards, and thus save his own circulation, which was coming down like a man falling from a balloon, eager to bestow the insurance money on his surviving relatives.

It was one of Jim's theories that women have no heads for business, and that of all women in the world his own wife had least capacity in that direction. He made up his mind that he would go as far as £150 for a story by Hilda Markham, and he wrote a letter to her agents opening negotiations for a serial. As it happened two other editors wrote with a similar object that same day, and the agents were in the delightful financial position of suddenly finding the demand greater than the supply. So they replied to each of the editors that Miss Markham's next story would be £500 for serial rights alone. This price took Jim Fleming's breath away, especially as he had been accustomed all his years to fill the paper with his own stuff and stolen matter from America. It seemed hard that an honest editor should be asked to pay away good money to a mere writer. So he wrote to the agents, expostulating against the exorbitant terms, and was told in reply that they had two other offers for a story, and merely gave him the first chance because his letter happened to be the first opened. The agent intimated that if he wanted the story he should have to make up his mind at once, so that the others might not be kept waiting. Then it was that Jim Fleming went home, worried about the matter, and he was never a man who concealed his irritation when he entered his own house. Poor Minnie Fleming was very much troubled to see her husband in the state of exasperation that now encompassed him. She asked him timidly to confide his woes to her, and perhaps she might be able to help him out—a suggestion which Jim received with lofty scorn.

"Is it a money trouble, Jim?" she asked.

"All troubles are money troubles," replied her husband. "There is no other trouble in this world except lack of money."

"Have you a payment to make?" she asked.

"Yes."

"How much?"

"Now, what the deuce good would it do you to know? Have you a banking account?"

"I have a small one," said his wife, trembling as she spoke, for she felt that her secret was in jeopardy.

Jim looked up at her quickly.

"A small one!" he said. "Can't you tell me plainly how much money you have, if you have any?"

"You don't tell me plainly," she answered with more spirit than she had yet shown. "How much is it that you need?"

"Very well," replied Jim gruffly. I need £500. Have you got it?"

"No, I have not. How soon do you want it?"

"I want it now. That is, I want it to-morrow or the next day at the least."

"Then," said the wife with dignity, "I will see if I can get it for you to-morrow or the next day."

After Fleming had left for London on the following morning his wife put on her best apparel and went in the city soon after her husband. She never called upon her husband before. All her negotiations had been carried on by letter. She walked three times past the office before she had the courage to go up the stairs. The demand she was about to make was so enormous, and she felt there was such a little chance of success, that had it not been for the sake of her husband she would not have ventured.

When the clerk showed her into the great man's room her courage nearly left her, but when the great man discovered that she was the rising author, "Hilda Markham," he was all geniality and smiles.

"I have brought you here," she said, her hands trembling as she undid the string, for she seemed to have a vague idea that if she showed him the writing she might have less difficulty to get along with him. "I have brought with me the complete MS. of the last novel I have written. I think it is better than the last."

"It is sure to be good," said the agent, encouragingly.

"But—but—" stammered Mrs. Fleming, "I want to know if you could advance me £500."

The agent looked grave.

"Do you mean that we are to ask that much for a novel?"

"Oh, no, no," said Mrs. Fleming eagerly. "But I promise to write you another one as soon as possible. I need the £500 for a particular purpose, and I must have it to-day, if it is to do any good."

"Well," said the agent, "we sometimes advance money to authors, and if I could be sure of having all your work for the future I think I might stretch a point in this case, and let you have the money."

Mrs. Fleming gave a sigh of relief, and the great man, calling a clerk, wrote out a check for £500 and presented it to her. After she had signed the receipt, given him the MS., and put her name to a contract, Mrs. Fleming hurried home to place the money in the bank, but that was one of the days when the bank closed at 2 o'clock, and she arrived there just five minutes too late. She was dismayed at this, for there was no place in their suburb where the check could be cashed, and she dared not give the check to her husband, or the whole secret would be out.

Meanwhile the agent, as soon as she left the room, called his clerk and said:—

"Write to James Fleming, of Pot-Shots, that we regret that we are not able to sell him Hilda Markham's story for £500. The author, tell him, has called upon us and refused to sell for less than £600, although, of course, you may inform him that if he had taken our offer when first made, we would have had to pocket the loss."

As soon as the letter was signed a messenger was sent with it to Fleming. The receipt of it nearly drove that good man wild. He had the announcement of the story in type and wanted to publish it in the next number. He had such little faith in his wife being able to get the money that he had actually forgotten she had promised to do so, and he went home that night in even worse temper than the night before.

His wife said apologetically to him when he came in:—

"I have gotten that £500, but would it make any difference to you if I did not give you the check for it until to-morrow?"

"What are you talking about?" he cried angrily. "If you have the money to-night why should I wait till to-morrow?"

"I have it in the form of a check," she answered, "and that check I wish to place in the bank."

"I'll warrant the check is not good for anything," said Fleming. "Let me see it."

"I would rather not do that," said his wife. "I will give you the check if you will not ask any questions."

"Good heavens!" cried Jim. "I will ask no questions if you really have the money. Let me see the check.

He looked at it a moment in amazement, and then at his wife. Forgetting his promise, he said:—

"How in heaven's name do you come to have a check from Greig & Co? It is to Greig & Co. that I have to pay £500, or rather if I had had the money yesterday or to-day it would have been £500. Now, they have raised me another hundred. They say that Hilda Markham came in to-day and refused to sell her story for less than £600."

"Hilda Markham!" cried his wife faintly.

"Yes, Hilda Markham. I am compelled to buy one of her stories or see our circulation go to pieces."

Fleming's wife sat down in an easy chair and there was a twinkle about her eyes that suggested laughter, which caused Jim to frown deeply.

"Jim, dear," said Minnie, "I know you are ever so much more clever than I am, but I really think you don't confide enough in your wife. It would have saved you a good deal of trouble if you had told me just what you wanted. I am Hilda Markham, and goodness knows you might have had all the stories I have ever written, if you had wanted them; but now I have signed a contract with Greig for all future novels, and thus, you see, for want of a little confidence between us we shall be forever paying Greig ten per cent, merely that he may hand my stories to you. Jim, I don't believe you are nearly as wise a man as I always thought you were."—Lake Sharp, in Detroit Free Press.

EYES THAT FOLLOW YOU AROUND.

How is it that the eyes of some portraits seem to follow a spectator around the room? It is thus explained: Suppose a portrait has its face and eyes directed straight in front, so as to look at the spectator. Let a straight line be drawn through the tip of the nose and half way between the eyes. On each side of this middle line there will be the same breadth of head, of cheek, of chin and of neck, and each iris will be in the middle of the whole of the eye. If one now goes to one side, the apparent horizontal breadth of every part of the head and face will be diminished equally, and at every position, however oblique, there will be the same breadth of face on each side of the middle line, and the iris will remain in the center of the eyeball, so that the portrait will preserve all the character of a figure looking at the spectator, and must necessarily do so wherever he stands. In portraits the apparent motion of the head is generally rendered indistinct by the canvas being imperfectly stretched, as the slightest concavity or convexity entirely deforms the face.—Buffalo Commercial.

"O, Traveller by Unaccustomed Ways."

O traveller by unaccustomed ways—
Searcher among new worlds for pleasures new—
Art thou content because the skies are blue,
And blithe birds thrill the air with roundelays,
And those fair fields with sunshine are ablaze?
Dost thou not find thy heart's-ease twined with rue,
And long for some dear bloom on earth that grew,
Some wild sweet fragrance of remembered days?

I send my message to thee by the stars—
Since other messenger I may not find
Till I go forth beyond earth's prisoning bars,
Leaving this memory-haunted world behind,
To seek thee, claim thee, wheresoe'er thou be,
Since heaven itself were empty, lacking thee.

A MATCHED SPAN OF SNAKES.

Now that the tenants on his plantation have "laid by" their crops and the hiatus between cultivating and gathering cotton is on, the man from the bottom country is in St. Louis renewing his acquaintance with urban life and regaling his friends with plain tales of the beasts, birds and reptiles of the great state of Arkansas. He had just concluded a discourse on the fondness of the raccoon for watermelons yesterday, and was superintending the construction of a sherry cobbler when the conversation turned on the strange alliance that was formed by Mose Harkelroad's coon dog, Prince, and a king snake that lived under Ferguson's smoke house and kept the place clear of other snakes.

"Prince was a great coon dog, and Mose Harkelroads was proud of him. One day in August, 1893, I think it was, a rattlesnake bit Prince on the lip. It happened near old Ferguson's where there was a social gathering. Prince's head swelled up as big as a nail keg, and we all advised that he be shot, but he seemed to catch on to what we were talking about, and sneaked off and crawled under the smoke-house. It was supposed that he would die there, and old Ferguson was a little huffy when he thought of having to tear up the floor. He didn't have to do that, though, for three days later Prince crawled out. The swelling was gone out of his head and out of his body, too, for that matter, but that was because he hadn't had anything to eat. The cook fed him, and pretty soon he went back under the smoke-house. He stayed there for a week, only coming out for his meals, and by that time he was fat and strong as ever.

"Then the Fergusons noticed that Prince and the king snake were chums. When the dog got entirely well he and the king snake joined forces like, and they set out hunting rattlers. There's no telling how many they killed. They cleaned up all there were around Ferguson's place and a good many cotton mouths and water moccasins; then they moved over to Harkelroad's and kept up the fight. If they found a rattler on open ground they would hold a council of war, and the king snake would bear down on the enemy from the front and Prince would tackle him in the rear. Of course this would confuse the rattler, and the first thing he knew Prince would have him by the back of the neck and shake his life out. Then if the king snake were hungry he would swallow the rattler.

"Well, Prince and the king snake kept this up till cold weather, when the king went into winter quarters. Prince pined for him for a few days, then went and brought him in and put him under the stove in old Ferguson's kitchen. Miss Kate Ferguson wanted to kill the snake, but Prince stood over it and protected it and it was finally decided to let the dog and snake alone, to see what they would do. When the king thawed out he stuck his head up to Prince's nose and they seemed to discuss the situation; then he curled himself around Prince and they went to sleep. That dog and that snake lived together all winter, and when spring came they went right back to killing rattlers.

"But the funniest thing they ever did was to break in a team of blue racers and make them draw a wagon. The children used to hitch Prince up in a little cart they had and make him haul 'em round. He was an accommodating dog, but that sort of thing used to interfere with his rattlesnake hunts, and I guess he and the king snake considered the matter and decided to provide a substitute. You know there ain't any kind of a snake a king snake can't whip, and the other snakes all know it and are properly respectful. One day the king and Prince came home driving in front of them the two biggest blue racers you ever saw. They must have been fully seven feet long, and they moved along with their heads three feet or more above the ground. The king and Prince rounded 'em up in front of the little wagon, which was fitted up with a stationary breaststrap on shafts that stuck straight out. The king he showed those racers what to do and they did it. They got in the shafts side by side with their bellies pressing against the breaststrap and about four feet of each of 'em trailing on the ground and they started.

Did they draw the wagon? Well, I should say so. They yanked it around like the wheels were freshly greased, and the king snake and Prince looked on and smiled. Finally, seeing that the scheme worked all right, the king snake drove the racers up to the front door and Prince went in the house and barked until the children came out. Then the king put the racers through their paces and before dark those children were using a pair of blue racers for carriage horses and Prince and the king were off hunting for rattlers."

At this junction the man from Arkansas was interrupted by a messenger, and the audience began to move on. "Hold on, boys!" said he; "wait till I answer this note and I'll tell you a snake story that a friend of mine told me. I want to see if you think it's true."

The audience was pressed for time, however, and silently stole away before the gentleman from the bottoms got an opportunity to tell his snake story.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AS THEY DO IT IN RUSSIA.—A man walking along a Rockland street, one of the cold days last winter, was surprised when a stranger stepped up to him, grabbed his shoulder with one hand and with the other began to vigorously rub his nose in a handful of snow. Was he offended? On the contrary, he was profuse in his thanks, as soon as he recovered his breath and his wits from the attack; for the assailant quickly explained that he was a native of Russia and noticing that the man's nose was freezing, had only attended to what was a matter of course and of etiquette in that cold and distant country.—Lewiston Journal.

PALMER NEWS.

The Labor Day Bicycle Races.

The bicycle races on the driving park Monday afternoon drew out a good audience, and the diamonds among the prizes attracted some fast riders. The track record was broken twice, and was reduced to 2 13¾ by Newton of Stafford Springs. Evans and Kent of Springfield did some good pacing on the tandem, and altogether the meet was the most successful ever held on the local track. Allen Atkins gave a good exhibition of trick and fancy riding for one of his age, and Prof. Waldo Lyon showed that he was perfectly at home on a wheel. The first event was the first trial heat in the one mile three-minute class, which was run in 3 37½; the second heat was a loafing match, and the slow time of 2.57 was made; the final was faster, and was finished in 2.46½. Most of the riders entered in the mile open were scared out by C. R. Newton of Stafford Springs, and only four of the nine entered for the first trial heat ran, and as all would qualify anyway, the slow time of 3 20 was made; 2.38½ was the time made in the second trial heat. Then Prof. Lyon made a try at the half mile riding backward record, and made 2.16. A time limit of 2 25 was placed on the final in the mile open, which was captured by Newton in 2 13¾, establishing a track record and also winning the diamond for the fastest mile during the day. Atkins then tried for the half mile backward, but failed by 5½ seconds, making only 1.49½, but breaking his own previous best record of 1.56 3-5. The mile open to Palmer Bicycle Club riders was won by C. D. Holden in the fast time of 2 18, with Knowlton second and Stacy third. The first trial heat in the half mile open was run in 1.23 1-5, and the second in 1.27 2-5, the final being in 1.23 4-5. A pretty exhibition half mile on the tandem was given by Evans and Kent, in 1.02. The two-mile handicap was a pretty race as the bunch of riders swept around the course, all together after the first third of a mile; Knowton of Bondsville, a 160 yards man, was the winner. The summaries:

Mile, three-minute class—H. A. Richardson, North Brookfield, 1st; Steve Laflin, Southbridge, 2d; Joseph Vincelette, Chicopee, third; time, 2.39¾.

Mile, open—C. R. Newton, Stafford Springs, Ct., 1st; John Kelliher, Springfield, 2d; John S. Johnson, Worcester, 3d; time, 2.13¾.

Half-mile, open—C. R. Newton, 1st; John Kelliher, Springfield, 2d; Earle Richardson, North Brookfield, 3d; time, 1.08.4-5.

Two-mile handicap—W. J. Knowlton (160 yds), 1st; John Kelliher, Springfield (40 yds), 2d; C. D. Holden (160 yds), 3d; J. Vincelette (120 yds), 4th; time, 5.05¾.

Illegal Liquor Dealers Settle.

The case of William Connolly of Thorndike, who was raided a week ago last Sunday and a quantity of whisky seized, came up in the district court yesterday morning. At the raid a Springfield officer who was not known was admitted to the room used by Connolly as a barroom, and when Sheriff Studley come in the other door a quart bottle part full of whisky was found on the counter with the cork out, also a glass with sugar and the remains of a drink, while a customer who had evidently just gotten outside the previous contents of the glass stood outside the bar. In a back room a two-gallon jug and another quart bottle of the stuff was found. In view of the "cinch" which the officers had on him Connolly evidently concluded that the best thing he could do would be to settle as cheaply as possible, so pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell; a fine of $75 was imposed, which was paid, and Connolly agreed to go out of the business and stay out. He had been raided twice before, but nothing had been found.

Daniel J. Sullivan, Jr., also of Thorndike, was charged the same day with keeping a liquor nuisance. He was raided the same day as Connolly, and though no liquor was captured there was plenty of evidence of its presence, a two-gallon jug of whisky from an upper window narrowly escaping the officer's head as it was thrown out upon the rocks to smash, with numerous bottles of beer, while in the house were all the implements of the business and a decidedly strong odor of the stuff. Sullivan also decided to save costs, pleaded guilty and paid his $75 with apparent good grace, however unwilling he may have been.

A heavy rain Saturday night washed some of the roads badly.

PROPOSED NEW SCHOOL BUILDING FOR THORNDIKE.

Proposed New School Building for Thorndike.

A cut of the proposed new school building for Thorndike is given above, and shows what a handsome structure the town will get if the voters decide at the special town meeting to-morrow that they will build it. The floor plans call for four class rooms—each about 27 by 30 feet—on the first floor, with two more on the second floor, togather with an assembly hall across one side of the second floor 30 by 63 feet. Each school room will accommodate 50 pupils. The assembly hall is so located that if at some future time more room is needed, the putting in of two partitions will make this room into two class rooms the same size as the others. Ample cloak rooms are located between the class rooms, and the halls are large and well lighted. In the basements are the toilet rooms, and the heating apparatus, which consists of four furnaces in batteries of two each, at either end of the building These are so arranged that in the early fall and late spring, when only a small amount of heat is required, one furnace alone can be operated, thus making a great saving in the amount of fuel consumed. The interior woodwork will be whitewood and pine, to keep the cost of construction down as much as possible.

The bids for the construction of the building were opened Thursday night of last week, and the committee found that the building could not be put up for the sum appropriated by the town, so a special town meeting is called for to-morrow afternoon to see if the voters will grant an additional sum. Two propositions will be made to the voters, one to build the building of wood at a cost between $15,000 and $16,000, the other to build it of brick at a cost of from $20,000 to $21,000, and the matter left to their decision.

At a special town meeting which authorized the building of the schoolhouse at Thorndike, it was stated that $12,000 would erect another such building as the one at Bondsville, and that sum was appropriated. But the building committee found on looking it over that the town didn't want another such building. The plans for it originally called for a convenient structure costing about $16,000, but they were cut down and altered so much to make the building come within the appropriation, (which it finally overran), that it is not a model school building, there being numerous outs about it. The committee then began a study of school buildings, and finally decided on the structure outlined above as what was most desirable and most economical in the end for the town. This is the same class of building which Springfield is erecting, except that there the interior finish is of hard wood, making the cost considerably greater. The committee is emphatic in its recommendation of this building, but as it could not be put up for the money appropriated, did not feel like going ahead with the matter without consulting the wishes of the voters.

Tax Collector Northrop has collected over $40,000 of the amount on the tax book, leaving only about $6000 yet to come. This is a larger percentage for this time of the year than is usual. Only about $400 of the fire district taxes remain unpaid.

Ullie Akerstrom, the popular actress, has been booked for the opera house for the evening of November 7th and 8th. The play the first night will be "The Sultan's Daughter;" the one for the second night has not yet been decided upon.

Quite a number of Palmer people went on the excursion to Saratoga yesterday, among them Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hawkes, E. S. Brooks, Mrs. Frank Leland, Mrs. A. W. Thayer, Mrs. L. E. Chandler, C. B. Fiske and Hubbard Lawrence.

Charles Johnson reported to the police Tuesday night that his bicycle had been stolen from in front of Eager's block sometime during the evening. It was too late then to do anything about it that night, and the next morning it was found in the road at the corner of Commercial and River streets.

It will be well for the hunters in this vicinity to remember that the law has been changed this year, and is not off gray squirrels until the 15th of this month. The Sportsmen's Club has made arrangements with a well-known officer to stop Sunday hunting, and the killing of game before the law is off.

Next Sunday will be the fourteenth after Pentecost, the Feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, at St. Thomas's Catholic church, with mass at 9 for the children, and solemn high mass at 10.30, at which a mission will open by Fathers Doyle and Crosby of the Redemptionist Order, of Brooklyn. The order of the mission will be announced at this service.

Henry McGilp, who was injured by a defective highway in Belchertown in March, has presented a claim for $800 against the town. Mr. McGilp was thrown from his wagon March 6th by a deep cradle hole in the snow, and in falling injured his leg so severely that it was six weeks before he could leave the house, even on crutches, and he has not yet fully recovered.

The foot race between Malone of Springfield and Sullivan of Rondsville on the driving park last Saturday was won by Malone. The distance was 100 yards, and the time was 10½ seconds. The starter, who gave his name as McCarthy, and hailed from New Haven, gave Malone a start of several feet, and Sullivan's backers entered a protest. The starter left the track after the race, and although he was hunted for could not be found.

Three of the blacksmiths of the place are feeling anything but brotherly love for the fourth on account of his action regarding Labor Day. All of the four agreed to close all day Monday, and after one had refused to do work for several of his regular customers it did not make him feel real happy to discover that some of them had gone to one of the other shops, which was as wide open and ready for customers as on any day in the year.

John Murphy has resigned his position as night police, and the selectmen have appointed John Eastman in his place. Mr. Murphy made a most acceptable officer, but found that the night work, in addition to his work during the day at the carpet mill, was too much for him, and so was obliged to give up his duties as officer. The place was offered to M. J. Dawson, but his day work also interfered with his being up nights, and he was obliged to decline.

The pastor of the Congregational church will speak Sunday morning on "The Safety of Greatness in Living." At 7 p. m. an attractive service will be furnished by the Men's Sunday Evening Club. The music will include a vocal solo by Mrs. Rufus Flynt, and cornet and autoharp solos by Mr. J. J. Eberhardt of Springfield. There will be a sermon on the question, "In the Light of the Recent Science Association Meeting at Springfield, What of Christian Experience?"

An art reception will be given next Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. E. G. Hastings on North Main street. The exhibition will include paintings in various branches,—china, tapestry, oil, etc.,—the work of Miss Reather Hadley of New York, an artist whose designs and coloring have attracted much attention among lovers of artistic decorative paintings. All are representations of her best productions, and are designed to make most attractive all sorts of apartments. Classes will be formed in Palmer, Monson, Ware and other towns hereabouts.

At the regular meeting of the county commissioners Wednesday the petition for a sidewalk on the outside of the Main street bridge over the tracks of the Boston and Albany road was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. The petition was from citizens and the commissioners can act only when petitioned by the selectmen of the town. Samuel Ward of Brimfield presented arguments for a change in the highway leading from the electric plant to the village of Palmer, and a hearing in the matter was appointed for early in October, to be held in Palmer.

A large audience greeted Hi Henry's minstrels, the opening entertainment of the season, in the Odd Fellows' new opera house Wednesday evening. Hi Henry has always been a favorite here, invariably giving a first-class entertainment, and it goes without saying that he still sustains his former reputation, as his show Wednesday evening eclipsed anything he has heretofore presented to our people. The vocalists were good, especially Master Williams, and Arthur Deming is a whole show in himself; in fact each and every artist made a creditable showing. During the performance Mr. Deming was presented with a huge watermelon by an admirer in the audience.

The library at the high school, which was started with the proceeds of the entertainment course given last winter, has received a valuable addition this week in the shape of a complete set of Herbert Howe Bancroft's works from Rev. William H. Hart of St. Thomas's Catholic church, who on Tuesday, the opening day of the school, sent Principal Thayer the following note:

My Dear Mr. Thayer:—Will you be kind enough to allow me to assist you in your efforts to furnish good reading to your pupils, by presenting the High School Library with a set of Herbert Howe Bancroft's works?

Very Respectfully,
Wm. H. Hart.

The set consists of 39 volumes, and aside from its worth as a work of reference is a valuable publication, the cost being $175, a sum which the school could not hope to raise in a long time to come. In addition to the library a reading room has been opened, where papers and magazines will be kept on file. As the funds at the disposal of the scholars are limited, it has been suggested that possibly some of the citizens would be willing to donate books, papers or magazines, and any who feel so disposed are requested to communicate with the principal, A. W. Thayer.

The high school commenced its sessions Tuesday with an attendance of 79, as follows:

The Warren and Thorndike base ball teams met on the driving park last Saturday afternoon to settle the championship of Central Massachusetts, and the Warrens walked off with the prize, the score being 8 to 6. Mr. and Mrs. George Winchell, who have been visiting former friends in this place, returned to their home in Duluth, Minn., this week.

The racing on the park Wednesday afternoon was exciting, and some fine records were made. J. F. Hartnett owns the winning horse.

Mrs. James and Miss Fannie Needham came home from England, where they have spent the summer, Monday morning. Mrs. Needham's sister, Mrs. Buckley, and two children, accompanied them. A pleasant voyage over is reported, but coming back it was somewhat stormy.

School commenced Tuesday under very favorable auspices; more than the usual number of pupils were present; in Miss Crane's room alone there were 103. With the exception of Miss Alleetta Mills, whose place Miss Jennie Twiss fills, there are no changes in the corps of teachers.

The wedding which took place at St. Anne's church Monday morning was the event of the season. The contracting parties were Peter Chabot and Miss Lena King. After the ceremony, which was very imposing, performed by Father Marchand, the customary ride was taken. Mr. Chabot had hired the Union Hall at Thorndike, and in the evening a large company entertained themselves therein.

The union picnic of the Union Evangelical and Baptist churches in J. W. Cheney's grove Monday was well attended. Mr. Cheney kindly carried up all who wished to go by water in his launch. With the assistance of an organ which Mr. Cheney had purchased to put in his launch, the Young Men's Quartette entertained the picnickers in the afternoon. Many swings had been put up, and croquet sets were not scarce. The day was exceptionally fine for such an occasion, and as everyone went for a good time there was no other result.

This was a collision of a somewhat serious nature in front of Mr. Bengal's shoe store Wednesday evening. The parties involved were F. W. Lavine and Henry Dumas. Mr. Lavine was riding toward the post office on his wheel, and had just turned out for two teams when Henry Dumas, who was seated in a sulky behind a horse which did not let the grass grow under his feet, dashed into him. The driver immediately reined up his horse, but it was a little too late; two hoofs had landed on Mr. Lavin's leg, but when the horse reared he jumped off his wheel, and it is needless to say that it was badly doubled up when he picked it up.

Lively Time with a Polander.

Late Saturday night Officer Manning ordered a party of Polanders, who were keeping every one within a radius of a half a mile awake, to move off the bridge. They all readily obeyed except one, who thought that he would do what he pleased in the matter. Upon this the officer took him by the arm to make him move along. But the Polander, who was a very strong fellow, suddenly broke loose and assumed the defensive. A genuine, old-fashioned wrestling match followed, and for ten minutes it was nip and tuck. Mr. Manning had had a little experience in that line, and ditto the other fellow. The strugglers were immediately surrounded by the hoodlums, who seemed to have no desire to assist their brother, but this is explained by the fact that he was formerly a captain in the Polish army. Although Mr. Manning downed his man once he could not hold him, as his companions pulled him away. It is a wonder that the officer was not stabbed, as the Poles brandished knives in the saloon where they were getting up steam. However, he remembered his antagonist, and Tuesday took him to Palmer where he paid a fine of $5 for an assault, claiming he did not know that Manning was an officer. John Bystric, a Pole who helped the arrested man to make his escape, has been arrested.

Some surprise and disappointment is expressed that the entire width of the state highway is not to be macadamized. That portion to be is 15 feet wide and through the center, while at either side a strip three feet wide will be of gravel covered with fine trap rock. This is the way all state roads are built.

The schools opened Tuesday for the fall term. The attendance was good at all except No. 15 primary, and there are a number of children who will enter next week but were kept home by sickness this week. The primary at No. 1 will probably be more than full, and changes will be made. There are few changes in the corps of teachers.

There is a feeling among the citizens that horse racing on Main street evenings should be prohibited, before accidents occur. It is said that on Wednesday evening one of our oldest and most venerated men came very near being the victim of a smash-up through this sort of business. It seems that as he drove away from Bacon's block to the north, he turned his horse to the east side of the road; as he did so three teams came up nearly abreast, and one of them came very near striking the aged gentleman's carriage.

Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, who has been offered a position as superintendent of the State Normal school in Willimantic, has decided to remain here. This decision will be very pleasing to Miss Wood's many friends, and especially so to those connected with the school work, in which she has been imminently successful in the three years she has been in town. The teachers of the ungraded schools have a meeting to-morrow afternoon. The Misses McQuaid, Tucker, Addie Peck and Kennedy are assisting in the village schools. Among the teachers who attended summer schools are: Miss Cantwell, school of music, Providence; Misses Eva and Bessie Sutcliffe, Stebbins, Bennett, Keep and Cameron, Laurel Park; Miss Corcoran, Norwich.

Nearly all business was suspended on Labor Day, and the streets were deserted. The picnic on Flynt Park for the benefit of St. Patrick's church was well attended and enjoyed. More interest was taken in the dancing, however, than in the sports, although good prizes were offered for the latter. The base ball game between North and South Monson men was won by the latter 14 to 6; the tug-of-war, Benedicts versus Bachelors, was won by the former; the 100-yards-dash was won by Dan Murphy. A party picnicked at Forest Lake on the same day, and a bus load of 15 attended the Epworth League Convention at North Brookfield. In the evening the Monson and Stafford Consolidated Orchestra gave a dance at Memorial Hall; ninety couples joined in the grand march, which was led by Miss Ella Dalton and Clarence King. The orchestra, which had not been heard here before, was pronounced good, and the promptor, Prof. Bissett, was much liked.

He passed through the village about 7.30 with a wheel which he offered to several parties for $1, claiming that he had paid $5 for the machine, but as he had sprained his ankle and could not ride was willing to sell out for a dollar. The wheel belonged to a man named Cavin, of Indian Orchard.

Mrs Julia Barney, wife of J. Dominic Barney of Holland, who posted his wife and daughter in the JOURNAL recently, has made the following statement to its reporter: The daughter has earned her living since 8 years of age, is now of full age, and has received no help from her father for many years, and has never asked to be trusted on his account. The wife has been very sick with a cancer for several years and has been unable to labor, but has done her housework with help from her daughters, who have often come in and assisted her. She has been greatly abused and neglected by her husband, who has refused to employ a physician during her sickness, and when she has had one he refused to pay him, and the daughters paid the bills. Because of his cruel treatment she has been obliged to leave her home and make a home with a married daughter. A few months ago, on the promise of Dominic to treat her well, she went home, only to be again abused and neglected. She was confined to her bed by the cancer, but he went away leaving her alone, with no one to care for her. The daughter chanced to go there and found her suffering alone, and took her away to her home, where she now remains, receiving no support or care from Dominic. She says she has never attempted to get trusted on his account, and desires the public to know these facts.

The Brimfield Male Quartette, assisted by Miss Lola Belle Andrews, gave a concert for the benefit of the Village Improvement Society Monday evening. The quartette consists of Messrs. A Most Successful Fair by the Juvenile Agricultural Society.

For the first time in its history Brimfield has enjoyed a genuine fair and cattle show, with all the features which belong to such an exhibition. As the perparations went on in a quiet way, those who turned out last Friday to see what was to be seen were happily surprised to find such a variety of interesting exhibits, as well as delighted to find everybody else there too, and thoroughly enjoyed the event. For a day or two previous to the date appointed, a mild sound of hammering had broken in upon the usual stillness of the village, and when all were ready the snow-white booths of home manufacture gave an unwonted appearance to the ball grounds of the Hitchcock Free High School, where the fair was held. The Brimfield Agricultural Society is now likely to become a permanent institution, and annual meetings of this kind will prove a great benefit in encouraging, improved agricultural and other products. The enterprise is especially interesting as starting under juvenile management, and the work of the children and young people, including anything they can make or grow, ought to be a leading feature. Another year specimens of the drawing, writing, modelling and paper cutting of the school children might be profitably shown, in addition to more specimens of sewing and fancy work. Samples of cookery would not be out of place. The fair had a unique beginning four years ago, when the Converse children invited their playmates to their home to attend a cattle show like the big ones they had visited at Sturbridge and Palmer. The live stock exhibited consisted of a pet lamb, a pig and a calf. Last year the exhibition, still held at the Wyles homestead took on considerable proportions, and games and contests of various kinds were among its attractions. Those who attended came away both amused and enthusiastic, and all recommended that more be made of the fair another year. The enterprise is still nominally under juvenile management, the managers this year being Albert Converse and George Daniels; but its success is mainly due to the efforts and liberality of Mr. and Mrs. John Converse, who were aided by their neighbors and other townspeople. Mrs. Converse offered a silver cup to the handsomest baby under 3 years old, the award to be decided by public vote, and the show, which brought out a large number of beautiful children, was one of the most attractive features of the day. Although a good many votes were given to other babies, the child who received the greatest number of votes was the little Wilder girl, granddaughter of Dr. Wilson, who lives on the Buxton place. The other awards were as follows:

Sack Race—Willie Hicks, 1st, Horatio Converse 2d.

Potato Race—Horatio Converse, 1st, Willie Newton 2d.

Diamond Race—Walter Brown 1st, 19 seconds, Frank Jenkins, 2d.

200 feet Race.—John L. Bacon, Jr. 1st, John S. Wetherel, 2d.

First on grapes, George Plimpton; first on corn, John Wetherel, second, Frank Moon; best beans and peppers, N. Moulton; best onions and turnips, John St. George; first on potatoes, C. S. Tarbell; second, Edgar Stanton; best collection of vegetables, George Plimpton, second, O. Shaffer; first on fruits, George Plimpton; first on cabbage, O. Shaffer, second, George Plimpton; best squash, George Plimpton, second, O. Shaffer.

First on flowers, Charles Peirce, second, gladiolas, Miss Spaulding.

First on quilts, Mrs. U. M. Allen, second, Mrs. Daniels.

First on fancy work, Mrs. Chamberlain, second, Mrs. Howard.

First on ducks, Cheney Newton; prize on poultry to J. Wetherell and F. Parker.

The collection of vegetables exhibited by George Plimpton was unusually fine, 70 different varieties being shown. The largest stock exhibit was made by George W. Sherman. Some patchwork made by a little boy four years old deserves especial mention, also that done by George Daniels. Misses Carrie and Florence Parker had some good work of this kind. There were shown two trays over a hundred years old. George Webster exhibited some of his fine workmanship in the shape of men's shoes.

The attendance was good, over 300 tickets being sold. As the fair was held at a time when a good many former residents were staying in town, the occasion took on the nature of a reunion to a marked degree, and renewals of acquaintances. Among such out-of-town visitors were Frank Brown and family of Port Chester, N. Y., Everett Schwartz and family of Waltham, Rev. H. A. Yontz and family of Quincy, George Sherman and daughter of Taunton, Mr. and Mrs. Carr of Cleveland, O., Mrs. Spaulding Chapell of Guilford, Ct., Mrs. Mary Hitchcock Boardman and son of Meriden, Ct., Mrs. K. B. Webster and Miss Carrie Bacon of Springfield, Miss Muzzey and Miss Warren of Worcester, Miss Thornton of Worcester, Miss Bacon of Shrewsbury, Miss Stoughton of New York, Mrs. Booth of New Haven, Mrs. Annie Herring of Warren. There were also a number of people present from adjoining towns.

The eyes of the public are being opened by the reports of the disgraceful performance at the cemetery last week, and no one has been heard to speak of it but has expressed their indignation most emphatically. If friends cannot bury their dead without being insulted, it is time the authorities should take the matter in charge.

WANTED. Good reliable men, to sell our Choice and Hardy Nursery Stock, such as Fruit Trees, Roses,

It Isn't "The Same As" and it isn't "as good as," no matter what any grocer may tell you about any imitation of Pearline. He makes more money on it—but do you want to ruin your clothes for his profit? The imitations of Pearline are sold at a lower price, naturally, for they're not as good. Some are dangerous, and would be dear at any price.

There's nothing equal to Pearline, the original washing compound, which saves the most work in washing and cleaning, and doesn't do harm. Pearline is never peddled, and offers no prizes. Every package is a prize in itself.

Beware of imitations. 374 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Theological Teacher—"How did sin come into the world?" The New Boy—"The preachers picked out all the things people liked to do, and said they was sins."—Indianapolis Journal.

A. M. Bailey, a well known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required.

While in Chicago Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and a half dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly.

A Summer Medicine.

Unquestionably the only remedy that can be taken safely during the warm weather. Compounded without wine or alcohol and consequently does not heat the blood. Its action is cooling and curative. It will dispel the languid summer feeling and keep you strong and well. By all odds the only medicine that is strictly an all-the-year round remedy.

BLOOD WINE.

A morning tonic for your brain—a vigorous brushing of the head with one of our nice brushes. Bristles not too hard, not too soft—the kind you like. The price is only 50 cents. Combs, powders, perfumes, mirrors. The Centennial Tooth Powder, and all toilet requisites. You can put on finishing touches with them and for little cash.

Our medicines have wings that fly with pain to parts unknown. Test their power when you are sick, and then you will thank us for relief.

There's Nae Luck About the Hoose.

And are ye sure the news is true?
And are ye sure he's weel?
Is this a time to talk o' wark?
Ye jauds, fling by your wheel!
Is this a time to think o' wark
When Colin's at the door?
Rex me my cloak, I'll to the quay
And see him come ashore;
For there 's nae luck aboot the hoose,
There 's nae luck at a',
There 's little pleasure in the hoose
When our gudeman 's awa'.

Rise up and mak' a clean fireside,
Put on the muckle pot,
Gie little Kate her Sunday gown,
And Jock his button coat,
And mak' their shoon as black as slaes,
Their hose as white as snaw;
Its a' to please my gudeman,
For he 's been long awa'.

There 's twa fat hens upon the bank,
They've fed this month and mair,
Mak' haste and thraw their neck aboot,
That Colin weel may fair;
And spread the table neat and clean,
Gar ilka thing look braw;
For wha can tell how Colin's fared
When he was far awa'?

Come, gie me doon my bigonet,
My bishop-satin gown,
For I maun tell the bailie's wife
That Colin's come to town,
My Turkey slippers maun gae on,
My hose of pearly blue;
It's a' to please my gudeman,
For he's baith leal and true.

Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,
His breath like caller air!
His very foot has music in't
As he comes up the stair.
And will I see his face again?
And will I hear him speak?
I'm downright dizzy wi' the thocht—
In troth I'm like to greet.

The cauld blasts o' this winter wind,
That thrilled through my heart,
They're a' blawn by, I hae him safe,
Till death we'll never part.
But what puts parting in my head?
It may be far awa';
The present moment is our ain,
The niest we never saw.

Since Colin's weel, I'm weel content,
I have nae mair to crave;
Could I but live to mak' him blest,
I'm blest aboon the lave.
And will I see his face again?
And will I hear him speak?
I'm downright dizzy with the thocht—
In truth I'm like to greet;
For there's nae luck aboot the hoose,
There's nae luck at a',
There little pleasure in the hoose
When our gudeman 's awa'.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A Terror.

Though bad are the bipeds who can sing and won't,
(Including man, woman and bird),
Though silence is sometimes a social affront
And a hostess is righteously stirred,
There is one whom much more we have cause to deplore
Than the singer that's able but shy—
'Tis the sodden, relentless, inveterate bore
Who can't but is willing to try.

He will open his throat though he knows not a note,
In speech he is lavishly free;
With ponderous ease he'll recite and misquote—
He will even essay repartee!
In serene self-esteem he will blunder away
Unhindered—for brave men will fly
From this creature so gay, of whom kindly folk say,
"He can't, but he's willing to try."
—Washington Star.

HERE'S A BICYCLE WHOPPER.

"Oh, yes," remarked a Washington bicyclist, who is fond of making long rides through the adjacent country, to a Star writer in response to an inquiry, "I have some very interesting experiences and hear some very strange stories in the out-of-the-way places I sometimes get into, but about the most remarkable thing I have heard I heard last week up here in Loudoun county, in the shadows of the Blue Ridge. As I was riding along a pleasant piece of mountain road, nicely shaded, I saw a black snake stretched across my track, and without giving him much time to think what was coming I dashed over him and disabled him. Then, to put him out of his misery and keep up my end of the scriptural injunction, I got off my wheel and went back to finish him. While I was at it a native came up with a basket of eggs on his arms and a dog at his heels.

"'Well,' he said in greeting, 'I see you done for him.'

"'Yes,' said I, 'and he isn't the first one.'

"'Do you ketch many rapping?'

"'Not often, but not many get away that I do catch.'

"'Ain't no danger to yer wheel runnin' over 'em, is there?'

"'Of course not.'

"'Well,' he said apologetically, 'I didn't know. I seen a feller up here about two weeks ago that tried it and busted his tire clean open.'

"'He must have hit something else besides the snake.'

"'P'raps he did. I seen a half of a hoss shoe with some nails in it lyin' by the side of the snake after he killed it.'

"The burst tire was of more interest to me than the snake, and I went after that.

"'Did he fix up his tire?' I inquired.

"'Not much. It was whacked right in two.'

"'What did he do? Foot it down to Round Hill?'

"'Well, he thought he would have to, and started, but he hadn't gone 50 feet, shovin' the bicycle along like a wheelbarrer, when an idee struck him and he came back a-runnin' to where he left the snake. It was a powerful long one, like these mountain racers get ter be, and he held it up fer a minute, measurin' it with his eye. Then he laid it down on the ground, cut a ring around its body as close up to its ears as he could git, and peeled that snake's skin off like you'd peel off a stockin'. I thought he was goin' to keep it fer a forget-me-not, but that wasn't it. He blowed it up with a little pump he had with him, tied the open end with some rubber he had, slapped it around the wheel where the tire had been, and away he went. I got down to Round Hill in about two hours, and I found him sittin' on a tavern porch lookin' as fresh as if he'd been there for two weeks, and the snake-skin tire didn't have a crack in it.'

"'What was the man's name?' I asked, quite upset by this astonishing tale.

"'I never axed him, but he was some feller from Washington, and looked like he might 'a' been a congressman or somethin'.'

"'I've been looking for that man,'" continued the wheelman, "'but I haven't found him yet, and sometimes I almost think that Virginia chap was at least not following in the footsteps of that other Virginian whose record for veracity was unimpeachable."

The Part of Wisdom.

Well, Tommy, have you learned anything at school?"

"Yes, sir; I've learned to wear a lung protector in the seat of my pants."—Life.

Dr. Cuyler, anent the multiplication of societies in the churches, tells this story in the Evangelist: "We asked an old colored preacher how his church was getting on, and his answer was: 'Mighty poor, mighty poor, brudder.' We ventured to ask the trouble, and he replied: 'De 'cieties, de 'cieties. Dey is just drawin' all the fatness and marrow outen the body and bone of the blessed Lord's body. We can't do nuffin without de 'ciety. Dar is the Lineum 'Ciety, wid Sister Jones and Brudder Brown to run it. Sister Williams mus' march right in front of de Daughters of Rebekah; den dar is de Dorcases, de Marthas', de Daughters of Ham, an' de Liberian Ladies.' 'Well, you have your brethren to help in church,' we suggested. 'No, sah, dar am de Masons, de Odd Fellows, de Sons of Ham, and the Oklahomo Promis' Land Pilgrims. Why, brudder, by de time de brudders an' sisters pay all the dues, an' tend all the meetings, dere is nuffin lefs for Mount Pisgah Church but jist de cob. De co'n has all been shelled off and frowed to the speckled chickens.'"

From the Plunkville Bugle: "Old Bull Jones says that the first man who tries to annex his 10-acre farm to this town will be shot. Are we to let the Greater Plunkville movement be thus nipped in the bud, or are we to pick old Bill up by the slack of the pants and dump him in the car of progress regardless of his obstinacy. Let the good work go on."—Indianapolis Journal.

MEN ON A CINNAMON DRUNK.

"Did you ever see a man on a cinnamon drunk?" asked L. S. Cartwright, a lumberman of Knoxville. "If you should witness a case you would never want to see another. A few months ago I had three young men getting out pipe staves down in the Tennessee mountains, and they concluded to have a little toot on pay day. They went to a near-by town, but failed to get the needed article. In fact, they could get nothing whatever of a stimulating nature but essence of cinnamon. This essence comes in little 15 cent vials, and is, of course, put up for flavoring. The boys bought a couple of dozen of these vials and began drinking the essence straight. When they got back to camp they were in a very bad fix. They were noisy and violent, and reeled and staggered about helplessly. One of the boys, a quiet, modest fellow, who was never known to make any sort of demonstration, danced and sang like a wild man. They all yelled like demons and acted like so many lunatics on a tear. It was a shocking sight. They were pale as death, and their eyes were set like a cat's eyes. To move their sight they moved their heads. They had no control over their minds or voices. How they suffered no words can tell. It took them three days to get over it. When they got straightened up again they said the one experiment was enough—no more cinnamon drunks for them. I think they meant it."

Some headache powders are good. Others are better. TAYLOR'S ANTI-HEADACHE POWDERS are recognized the world over as the BEST. Purely vegetable, containing no deleterious drugs, they are guaranteed absolutely harmless. Cures any headache in a few minutes. At LeGro & Lynde's.

A CHILD'S VICTORY.

A coal cart was delivering an order in Clinton Place the other day, and the horse made two or three great efforts to back the heavily loaded cart to the spot desired, and then became obstinate. The driver began to beat the animal, and this quickly collected a crowd. He was a big fellow, with a fierce look in his eye, and the onlookers were chary about interfering, knowing what would follow. "I pity the horse, but I don't want to get into a row," remarked one. "I am satisfied that I could do him up with th gloves on, but he wouldn't fight that way," added a second. "I'm not in the least afraid to tackle him," put in a young man with a long neck; "but about the time I got him down along would come a policeman and arrest us both." The driver was beating the horse, and nothing was being done about it, when a little girl eight years of age approached and said: "Well, what yer want?" "If you'll only stop, I'll get all the children around here, and we'll carry every bit of coal to the manhole, and let you rest while we're doing it." The man stood up and looked around in a defiant way, but meeting with pleasant looks began to give in, and after a moment he smiled and said: "Mabbe he didn't deserve it, but I'm out of sorts to-day. There goes the whip, and perhaps a lift on the wheel will help him." The crowd swarmed about the cart, a hundred hands helped to push, and the old horse had the cart off the spot with one effort.—Our Dumb Animals.

Up Hill.

Does the road wind up hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.
Will the day's journey take the whole day long?
From morn to night, my friend.

But is there for the night a resting place,
A roof for when the slow, dark hours begin?
May not the darkness hid it from my face?
You cannot miss that inn.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night,
Those who have gone before?
Then must I knock or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at that door.

Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak?
Of labor you shall find the sum.
Will there be beds for me and all who seek?
Yes, beds for all who come.

PALMER HISTORY GLEANINGS.

BY O. P. ALLEN.

IX.

THE SILK CULTURE CRAZE.

Each succeeding generation is sure to have its particular fad, and its scheme for making sudden fortunes. The present age cannot laugh at the follies of the preceding ones, for it has also had its financial craze in the multitudinous plans of the Benefit Associations, all of whose ghosts have been ferried over the Styx by some accommodating Charon, that they might join the shades of the many exploded schemes of long ago; and the worst of it has been that most of these ghosts have had scant means left to pay for their passage.

Some sixty-five years ago an inventive genius exploited the idea of silk culture, and the consequent raising of mulberry trees. The press lent its aid to the scheme, and in a short time nothing was talked of but the possibility of this new industry. The beginning of the plan was the propagation and sale of the mulberry tree. The species morus alba was first employed, but it was soon found that the leaves were so small that the labor of gathering and feeding the silk worms was onerous, so the large-leaved species, morus multicaullis, was found a more profitable substitute, as the leaves were 12 by 15 inches in size. These trees were propagated from cuttings made in the autumn and kept in sand until spring, two buds being left to each cutting, which were sold at two cents per bud, or 25 to 50 cents for one-year-old trees, well rooted. Hundreds of farmers bought their first cuttings or trees, and went to sleep at night to dream of a fortune to be made in a few years. The instructions were to set a cutting with two buds, so that one bud might form the top and the other the root, the absurdity of which was not questioned until it was contradicted by experience.

William Mason, whose father had settled on the farm now owned by John McNeel, as early as 1790, and who had carried on the tannery business for many years, was persuaded to relinquish that trade and embark in the culture of mulberry trees and silk. His first venture was to buy $40 worth of cuttings in Belchertown, and he soon had three acres of growing trees. About 1835 he had an extra stock of 3000 one-year-old trees, which he took to Syracuse, N. Y., with the expectation of realizing 50 cents each for them; but when he arrived there the price had dropped to 25 cents, and he was persuaded to hold them, hoping for an advance; but meanwhile the bottom had fallen out of the mulberry tree business, and he never realized a cent for the trees. Not discouraged, he returned and devoted his attention to silk culture, which industry he continued on his Palmer farm for several years, encouraged in part by the fact that the state had offered a bounty of 50 cents per pound on cocoons, and an additional $2 per pound for the best quality of reeled silk. Mr. Mason was quite successful in his venture, and obtained the full state bounty for several years, besides which he sold his reeled silk for $2 50 per pound, making a net return to him of $5 per pound. He raised about 40 pounds of reeled silk per year for several years, but in the fall of 1840 an early frost killed the mulberry leaves, so there was nothing to feed the silk worms, and some 15 bushels of them were fed to a flock of turkeys. This serious loss discouraged Mr. Mason, and he gave up the business, and thus ended silk culture in Palmer.

The method of conducting the culture of silk, as given me by Mr. Dwight Mason, who assisted his father, was something after this order: In the first place it was necessary to have a stock of thrifty mulberry trees. The morus multicaullis was a quick grower, but was too tender for our climate. It was necessary to take it up in the fall and store it in a cellar free from frost, as it would winter-kill if left in the open ground. These trees were cultivated in a similar manner as corn, in rows about three feet apart each way. For the purpose of propagation the male and female cocoons were selected just after the weaving season; the male cocoons were long and pointed, while the female were shorter and more globular in form; these were laid in pairs on paper. Each female usually deposited from 200 to 300 eggs, which adhered to the paper. Soon after this operation both the male and female moths died. The papers with the eggs attached were then conveyed to a dry, cool cellar and kept there till it was a favorable time to hatch them. The hatching season was carried on from June to October, as fast as the mulberry trees could furnish leaves for the worms, but the later the season the better was the quality of the silk produced. The full-grown worms were brown in color and about two inches long. They were fed about six weeks. The mulberry leaves were laid ever them, freshly gathered, and they devoured them voraciously, with a noise like the patter of rain on the roof of a house. They required feeding five times a day. After feeding them six weeks, small brush deprived of leaves were laid on the shelves near the worms, to which they quickly attached themselves and commenced the operation of weaving the cocoons, which occupied them about a week. After the accomplishment of this work the cocoons were assorted and such as were wanted for propagation were put aside, and the balance were subjected to heat in order to destroy the imprisoned grub. If kept in a warm room the moths came forth from the cocoons saved for the purpose in a few weeks, to deposit eggs as stated above.

The process of reeling the silk from the cocoons was a nice one, which required much practice to do it in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Mason employed a woman to do this work at $1 a day, which was considered a large price 65 years ago. The cocoons were thrown into hot water in order to remove the glutinous substance from the silk, when the operator would stir them with a small brush to gather the flying ends of the silk between the fingers to form a thread which was tied to the arm of a small reel, and the fine gossamer strands were unwound from the cocoons like thread from a spool, without a break. It required the fine strands of fifty cocoons to form a single thread of silk, and three pounds of cocoons to make one pound of reeled silk.

It did not require many years of experience to demonstrate the fact that our climate was not adapted to the successful culture of silk, and the business and the dreams of sudden fortunes went out in disappointment, leaving those who embarked in the venture wiser if not richer men.

"S'REPTY."

The June sunshine poured generously in at the wide doors of the Merritt "great barn," and the large, cleanly room partitioned off for a carriage-house was full of the breath of summer.

Opposite the door stood the family "surrey," wearing the drapery provided for its hours of retirement, and in one corner was a lofty pile of sleighs, of various patterns and sizes. On the same side as the door stood the gaunt frame of an old-fashioned hand-loom, and high in state before it was seated the mistress of the farm-house. Many happy solitary hours Mrs. Merritt spent there.

She "loved to weave," she said, in her gentle, meditative voice.

But this love was not merely for the weaving. It was more for the pleasant sights and sounds of the summer weather, and for the kindly leisure of life's afternoon. The peaceful task belonged to summer as much as did the swaying of the daisies and the hum of the bees. In winter the loom stood neglected and forgotten, but in the late days of May, when the grass was already deep and green by the footpath, and the apple-trees had shed their last lingering blossoms, the longing for the dreamy, delightful task would awaken, and Mrs. Merritt would bestir herself to set up a "web."

The old loom had come to her by inheritance, and she valued it as she treasured the ancestral homespun linen, and the family traditions which extended back even to the inevitable "three brothers that came over from England."

She had often told her daughters of the remote grandmother, who, when the men of the family had inadvertently carried off the pick of the household armament on an excursion to Ticonderoga and Crown Point, defended her home and babies with an axe. To such deeds the Merritt sisters felt themselves quite adequate, had need arisen, but they could see no reason why their mother should sit in the barn and weave rag-carpeting, in fact the loom had been framed of oak timber cut when all the hillside beyond Roaring Brook was a wilderness. But if "mother" pleased, it was all right.

And Miss Sarepta Toker even was welcome to bring her knitting-work and sit in the doorway, and tell who was dead and who was married, from Roaring Brook to Nep ash. For Sarepta possessed married sisters and cousins in half the towns of the county, which gave her an immense advantage as a purveyor of news.

She was a meagre little woman, who had never been credited with much alertness of mind or body. It added a little brightness to her existence even to look on from the outside at the life and stir, the coming and going at "the Merritt place."

And in the intervals when "S'repty" sat and knitted, with her eyes shut to visible things, she was no more hindrance to the placid musings of Mrs. Merritt than would have been a cat dozing in the sunshine.

Back and forth moved the shuttle, then followed the dull stroke of the batten. Occasionally the weaver would descend from her seat to turn the ratchet of the beam upon which the fabric was wound.

"How nice you do beat up your weavin'!" exclaimed S'repty, rousing herself to admiration. "Mis' Minks don' half do her'n, and Rosalia has said, time and ag'in, she would not send any more rags to her; but then she is kind'er sorry for her."

"It's hard for her to struggle along," said Mrs. Merritt. "If her children had lived, it would have been different."

"Your loom got kind o' crowded out of the house, didn't it?" said S'repty. "The old furnitoor has got to go. Reminds me of what cousin Spencer Doolittle said when Squire Lane fulged round an' got him turned out of the gallery to the Baptis' meetin'-house. He played the bass viol to lead the singin' for forty years. 'Ther ain't no room left for the stable foundations of order,' sez he. 'Folks mus' keep underminin', an' counterminin', and improvin',' sez he."

"It was my notion having the loom set up out here," said Mrs. Merritt. "He says it's my amusement for summer weather, that I have to have, just as the girls play croquet and tennis."

Another long, dreamy silence, except for the shuttle that went on and on.

There was a sound of wheels, and all semblance of slumber fled from Sarepta's eyes as there appeared at the front gate a very shiny top-buggy. And when in a few moments a slender shadow fell across the doorway, and Lois Merritt entered, no detail of her appearance was unobserved. The girl was tall, like her mother, with the same large, serious cast of countenance.

"What awful little bunnits they be a-wearn'!" said Sarepta, as if obeying an irresistable inner prompting. Lois received placidly this implied criticism of her new summer millinery, and her mother thought complacently: "Lois don't mind S'repty. Emma and Lucia ain't so even-tempered. They'd have flared up."

It required but little urging to induce the visitor to stay until after tea. It had been one of the great treats of Sarepta's childhood to go home from school with Lucinda.

"I don't see, mother," said Emma Merritt, as with a sigh of relief she watched Sarepta's departing footsteps, "how you can like to have her come here so much. It's just to see and hear, and then go and tell. And she doesn't miss anything that's going on, for all that she keeps her eyes shut."

"There isn't any harm in S'repty," said Mrs. Merritt. "I've always known her, and it kind o' interests her to come here."

"She takes too much interest in my affairs," persisted Emma. "And everywhere she goes she tells about 'Si,' and 'Em,' and 'Lucindy,' and so on, as if we belonged to her."

"Never mind, Emma Jane," replied her mother, "I guess there's room enough in this world for you and S'repty, too."

"Oh mother, mother! you're too good. You make excuses for everybody, and there's nobody you'd refuse to speak to. I do believe you would visit with a caterpillar, if you thought it would be pleased."

This seemingly absurd conjecture was verified. The next day as Mrs. Merritt sat in solitary state at her loom, there came upon the window-sill a great fluted green caterpillar, moving with dignity, as became a creature whom splendid destiny was to transform into a still more magnificent green moth.

The shuttle lay idle as for some minutes Mrs. Merritt watched and admired and even talked softly to her guest. All this would have seemed but foolishness to Sarepta, had she been present. Her mind must have been constructed on a larger scale, after all, for she reserved her curiosity for the human species.

Within a fortnight she was again spending her afternoon at Mrs. Merritt's, but she did not occupy her usual seat, commanding a view of the house.

She had crowded her chair into a narrow space beside the loom. The window was above her head and she sat unobtrusively busy in darning a desperate rent in her brown alpaca dress. She had caught it upon a stake which was driven beside a path; one of several stakes which were visible from the doorway. Though her place was humble and retired, S'repty was full of lofty indignation. Her own special grievance of the torn gown only added to her wrath at what she deemed a great public wrong.

For months there had been talk of a proposed new railroad. At least the line had been surveyed, and it crossed the Merritt farm, running between the house and the "great barn."

S'repty had lost no time in going to condole with her friend.

"Here I be a-settin', mendin' a dress on me," she remarked. "It's a sign somebody's going to tell a lie about me, but I guess I can resk it if they can, 's long's 'tain't the truth. Wish I could make them railroad folks buy me a new dress! But you oughter git big damages," she went on. "It jist spoils your posy garden. It's lucky the girls is growed up big enough to keep off'n the track."

Mrs. Merritt assented.

"An' to have 'm comin' along screeching in the middle of the night, shakin' the very pillars under your head! I know how 'tis to Sister Church's. But the wust was when they was diggin' an' blastin', and great stones a-flyin' an' Ketury's folks had to live all cluttered up in the ell-part, an' all nerved up when a blast went off. An' when they went to meetin' the road was all blocked up in front of Eben Clay's house, an' they had to drive up over the bank expectin' the kerridge would slip off'n the aige. An' her a-lookin' out o' the front winder, crosser'n time, because there was wheelmarks on the terriss, as she called it."

"The road will be easier to build here," said Mrs. Merritt. "And now they've begun, they say they're going to rush it through."

"But the emigrants will have to come, them Eyetelians," said S'repty. "An' the shanties will be right under your nose, an' there they'll be cookin' themselves an' livin' on black bread."

Even this mixed statement, hinting at cannibalistic tendencies on the part of the workmen, did not seem to shake the placid nerves of Mrs. Merritt.

"You're making a good, workmanlike job of that tear," she said kindly. "There's very few can beat you at mending, S'repty."

S'repty drew her thread with a steadier hand. She was used to less disinterested compliments than this; hints pointing directly to great baskets full of tattered garments which had accumulated ready for her needle.

"Mother," said Lois Merritt one morning some days later, "here is Bradford Toker. He says S'repty is very sick and wants to see you."

"Yessum," put in a small boy at the door, "S'repty says, if you wanter see her alive again' to come soon's you can."

"How long has S'repty been complaining?" inquired Mrs. Merritt.

"Oh, most a week—an' las' night we was kep' up with her 'bout all the forepart of the night," said the small boy with a careworn air. She was out of 'er head, an' took on pretty bad."

"I'll go over to your house as soon as I can," said Mrs. Merritt.

"She's been dretful flighty," said Azariah's wife, before she led the way to the sick room. She's been goin' on about bein' took up, an' about your bein' run over by the engine, an' such like. She begun with a sort of influential cold a day or two after she was over to your house. Monday she couldn't git up. I had my hands full, so I kep' Bradford home from school, an' that most killed him. But he's a great hand to read, Bradford is, an' he took the Roaring Brook Argus up stairs an' read it through to S'repty, advertisements and all. Somethin' in it seemed to excite her, an' she begun to act kind'er wild then, he thought. But of course we all know that the intellex of S'repty's mind ain't over keen at the best of times, an' havin' so much read to her right out kind'er dazed her."

It was a very pale, drawn face which Mrs. Merritt encountered a few moments later—that of the supposed victim of too much learning, but there was in the eye a feverish brightness which gave them more expression than usual. S'repty said but little, and that in very feeble tones, until there came a call from below which her sister-in-law was obliged to heed.

Then the invalid started promptly into a sitting posture and drew from under her pillow a newspaper, which she handed to Mrs. Merritt.

"I got Bradford to bring it up here, an' say nothin'," she said. "Now read that itum."

Mrs. Merritt read as follows:

"A considerable number of the stakes, which were driven by the officials engaged in surveying the proposed route of the R. A. and S. V. R. R. were surreptitiously removed during the night of June 16. We understand there are strong suspicions as to the identity of the perpetrator of this outrage."

"Now, how dew yew suppose they found it out?" said S'repty. "These newspaper folks is great hands to make up new words, but when I heered my own name read right out so, it did give me an awful start. Who could 'a' told 'em?"

"Oh, the correspondents make it their business to find out about all these little happenings."

"But what made 'em think I did it," persisted S'repty, in a tremulous whisper.

"You?" asked her friend. "What did you have to do about it? We surmised it was those Clancy boys did it for fun."

"It was me that pulled up them stakes. An' I dudno but I'd dew it ag'in. But that sca't me so when Bradford read it out so loud, 'S'repty-shusly,' just the same as sayin' it was me."

"Don't worry a mite about it," said her friend soothingly. "That's a real dictionary word, and didn't mean anything about you. And I won't say a word about it, even to Silas."

S'repty's eyes lost something of their distracted look.

"That's just like you, Lucindy," she said feebly. "I should hate to have it in everybody's mouth, arter I was gone, how I just missed bein' took up by dyin'."

"But, S'repty, what in the world possessed you, a woman of your years, to cut up such a crazy caper?"

"'Twas all on your account, Lucindy. Comin' home from your house I got thinkin' about the railroad track runnin' between the house an' the barn, an' if I didn't run ag'inst another stake an' tear my dress wuss'n 'twas before. An' that night I dremp how you was goin' acrost to the barn to do some weavin', an' the cars come along an' run over you."

"There, there, don't think any more about it," said her friend. But S'repty must make her confession.

"So nex' night, when Azariah an' his wife was gone to the strawb'ry festival, I cut acrost to your home-lot. I knew your folks was gone to the Center, too, but I was afeard somebody'd be 'round an' see me. Still, I hed to risk it. I'd no idee how hard it would be gittin' them sticks up, but I remembered how good you'd allus been to me. I tried to come home a shorter way, thinkin' I heerd somebody followin', an' I got into that springy place in the Leyd lot, an' got my dress wet an' my shoes."

"You poor thing, you!" said the object of this ill-starred loyalty. "To think that you should have so much trouble on my account! The railroad folks have acted real fair by us. And I wouldn't say anything about it yet, for you know how things go, but we expect to move in the fall."

"You don't say!" exclaimed S'repty with considerable animation.

"Yes, he's been thinking for a long time the place is too large for him to carry on, seeing the boys ain't ever going to take to farming. And the creamery folks want it, and he had a good chance to buy the Ford place at the Center."

"What! the house with the pillars in front?" inquired S'repty, much revived.

"Yes, and so I gave my consent. It's home to me where my folks are. The girls urged me real hard. I suppose, if nothing happens, Emma will live right next door to us——"

"What, has Emma Jane and John Kilborn made up?" queried S'repty, forgetting her feebleness and sitting up.

"Yes, and I suppose there will have to be a double wedding!" said Mrs. Merritt

"Well, I never!" said S'repty. "Lois ain't goin' to be married, too?"

"The girls wouldn't thank me for telling, but you won't mention it. That's the plan now."

"When you move, I can't go and set with you an' see you weave, even if I should ever git up ag'in," sighed S'repty, dropping on her pillow.

"Oh, he says there's room enough in the house for my loom, and when we get moved, I want you to come and make me a good visit."

The invalid brightened again.

"Hain't you told anybody you was goin' to move? Not Mis' Peters, nor Viny Smith?"

"Not yet," said Mrs. Merritt. Sarepta breathed a sigh of content.

"An' I know Rosalia ain't heerd of it," she said.—Jennie Colton, in Romance.

HYPOTHETICAL TROLLEY TUNNELS.

The trolley car party is as popular here as in other cities, but it remained for Baltimore wit to invent an attractive novelty for the trolley ride. Last week a party of forty, comprising a due proportion of gay youths and maidens properly chaperoned, started for a ride to Glydon. On the return trip a member suddenly left his seat and had a long whispered consultation with the motorman, whose subject he refused to divulge to his curious companions, although, stimulated by the mischievous twinkle in his eye, they plied him with questions. On merrily went the car till, all at once, the motorman sung out:— "At the top of this hill, look out for the tunnel!"

The mystified members of the party looked at him and one another in amazement, for no tunnel could they remember on the road. But when the top of the hill was reached they shot into quick darkness, for the motorman had turned off the electric lights. A peal of laughter rose as the joke was seized, and then all over the car arose sounds of an osculatory nature which the perplexed chaperones could not locate, but were pacified when told the girls were only kissing their hands in deference to tunnel customs. Six tunnels were passed, and finally the motorman cried out:—

"Last tunnel before we reach the city!" and the tunnels were unanimously voted the best part of the jolly ride.—Baltimore American.

CARING FOR THE EYES.

To touch on the mere matter of caring for the eyes, it is sufficient preface to say that there is as much, yes, and more, necessity of caring for the eyes as for keeping the hands pliable and useful; yet either may be used almost constantly during waking hours and still retain their qualities in gratifying measure. The secret is to use, but not to abuse. It has been claimed that society women are the only people who take proper care of their eyes. In this sense, it must be confessed that the treatment accorded the eyes is rather that of disuse than care. From very late in the morning till much later at night—that is, from the time of rising till they retire—the constant study is how not to use the organs of vision, in order that they may retain their beauty unimpaired. Fans are almost perpetually carried, their first and principal use being for the protection of the eyes from any disagreeable light. Parasols are of course in vogue for all outdoor experience. This matter may be carried to an extreme, but within reasonable limits it is the natural sequence of the thoughtfulness which furnishes the young girl having weak eyes with a wide-brimmed hat, thus saving her modicum of visual strength for the exigencies of actual need.—Good Housekeeping.

A BLUE SNAKE STORY.

A Georgia drummer was talking to a crowd of the famous "blue snake" of Florida. The drummer said:

"I was workin' in the field one day with a nigger, and niggers are scared to death of blue snakes, when he gave a yell 'Blue snakes!' and went flyin'. I didn't know which way the durn snake was comin', so I took after the nigger, and we went out of that field like two streaks of lightning, leaving our hoes standing up in the furrow. What became of the snake I don't know, and I didn't go back to see until nex' mornin', and, by gun! what I found there surprised me about as much as anything I had met up with in Florida. The snake had bit my hoe handle plump in the center, and it had swelled up so that I got 1000 shingles, 10,000 feet of weather boardin', four cords of firewood, 100 fence rails, enough floorin' for the Baptist church and 500 barrel staves out of it."

The listeners expressed their belief vigorously.

"And," concluded the drummer, when he could be heard, "that hoe handle was still swellin' when we got it to the sawmill."—Atlanta Constitution.

DECORATION DON'TS.

Don't put a bright-colored carpet into a room where the furniture is dull, old, or neutral, tints.

Don't have chandeliers or hanging lamps with rooms of low ceiling; use side brackets in such cases. Don't furnish a north room in blue or any other cold color; something of a warm tint should be chosen.

Don't hang a heavy portiere over a narrow door; generally speaking, hangings are out of place in a small house, or with small rooms.

Don't fill the center of the room unless there is plenty of space on all sides; nothing offends good taste so seriously as the sense of being "cluttered up."

Don't have too much of one kind of decoration in the house; two rooms upon the the same general pattern are quite enough—an individual scheme for each apartment is better.—Philadelphia Times.

A BUSINESSLIKE BEGGAR.—They tell a story of an enterprising beggar of Paris who went about with a sign "I am blind," hung about his neck.

"But you are not blind," said a man of whom he asked alms.

"I know that," said the beggar. But the man whose business I bought was. He used to make ten francs a day on this route with this sign. I bought him out. Pray help a poor blind man a little, sir."—Harper's Round Table.

The Special Fire District Meeting.

About 50 voters attended the special meeting of the fire district Tuesday evening in the district court room, the business being to see if the district would authorize the treasurer to pay for hose ordered by the chief engineer, the prudential committee having refused to approve the bill. L. E. Chandler was chosen moderator, and a motion that the treasurer be instructed to pay for the hose was made. The reason for the calling of the meeting being asked, Chief Engineer Bill of the fire district stated that at the annual meeting of the district a vote was taken to purchase hose, but that time went on and no hose appeared, and as he had not enough to successfully combat a big fire should one occur, he had ordered a supply, and now asked the voters to approve the bill. It was also stated for the board of engineers that they recognized the fact that they had no legal right to buy the hose, that belonging to the prudential committee; but that the committee had neglected its duty in failing to purchase the hose when it knew the department was in need of it, and that the purchase of the hose had been made with the sole intention of protecting the interests of the property-holders of the district. The prudential committee denied that it had been neglectful of its duty, and the chairman stated that he had several times requested the chief engineer to get samples and prices of hose and confer with the committee in the matter, but that he had never come near them. Mr. Bills announced that he had no recollection of such notices, and that if made they had slipped his mind. District Attorney Gardner thought the whole matter child's play. The district had a prudential committee which was elected to care for the expenditures, and that if the district authorized the treasurer to pay this bill which they did not approve, the committee would be perfectly justified in resigning, and that it would be hard to find anyone else to serve, as no self-respecting person would agree to act in that capacity only to have their acts overridden by the engineers at any time they saw fit. Mr. Gardner moved to amend the motion so as to instruct the prudential committee to proceed at once to the purchase of hose, and that they be recommended to buy that which the chief engineer had on hand, which was carried, and the meeting adjourned.

Barns and House Burned by Lightning.

The barns and house of James O. Hamilton, living beyond Forest Lake on the road to Ware, were destroyed by fire Monday night, with three horses, one cow, two hogs, about 50 tons of hay, grain, wagons, farming tools, etc. Nearly everything was burned, and the loss will foot up about $7000, on which there is only $3000 insurance. The family had all retired for the night when the shower came up, and after it had sprinkled a little and then slacked up Mr. Hamilton remarked to his wife that apparently the storm had gone around and that they were not to get much of it; the words were hardly out of his mouth when there was a blinding flash of lightning and a heavy peal of thunder. Mrs. Hamilton remarked that the lightning had evidently struck near by, and Mr. Hamilton arose and went to the window, but could see nothing; after starting back to bed he turned and took another look out, and saw the flames bursting from the horse barn. He at once aroused his sons, who live with him, but the fire was too far advanced to save the animals in this barn; one horse finally broke loose and came out into the yard, where it fell down, too severely burned to rise, and it was killed to put it out of its misery. The cows, which were in another barn, were saved. Help was slow in arriving, and not much was saved from the house. Many things were removed but were ruined by the rain, which then fell in torrents. With the recklessness usually practiced at such times bureau drawers were dropped from upper windows with little regard as to where or which side up they fell, and other things were handled in a like manner. Many of the articles lost can never be replaced; among them was a handsome set of old china, containing over a hundred pieces, not one broken or even chipped, and not a piece was saved. One thing which Mr. Hamilton especially mourns is the loss of the fine old elm which stood in the door-its branches extending over the house and horse barn. It was a magnificent specimen, tall and well proportioned, affording a most delightful shade in hot summer days, and being heartily admired by all passers-by.

Soldiers in Town.

"Hi, Chimmie, look't de sogers!" shouted one little urchin to another about 9.30 Monday morning on Main street, and everyone within sound of his voice looked in the direction he was pointing, toward Church street. Sure enough, around the corner was coming a company of horses and men wearing the blue uniform of Uncle Sam's boys; down the street they came until the head of the column reached the Nassowanno House, where they halted, the rear being in front of the Lawrence block. It was Battery B of the Fourth Artillery, regular troops, from Fort Adams, Newport, on the way to Camp Tyringham near Lenox, for battery practice. There were 59 men and 53 horses in the command, under Captain Fields. The men were mostly young fellows, from the West, and this trip is to give them a taste of what they may expect if called upon any time for actual service. The camp to which they are going is a large place which will give them ample room in which to maneuver and try their guns, which they cannot do very well on the small strip at their disposal near the fort. There were four rifled guns of 3 2-10 inches calibre. The start was made Tuesday, and the route across Rhode Island to Hartford was attempted, but the roads were so poor that a change was made, and the line of march taken through Southbridge and Brimfield to Palmer, thence to Springfield. No rations are carried, the commissary buying needed supplies and paying for them with checks. About 20 miles a day is made, which might be 30 but for the handicap of an old furniture wagon, which the captain was compelled to hire for the transportation of needed articles, when he should have had a six-mule army wagon. This wagon had no brake and gave much trouble, especially down hill, and was very hard on the horses. The high school scholars were dismissed for a quarter of an hour to have a look at the boys in blue. After a time the column moved along to West Main street, where a rest was had under the shade of the maples. The company camped at Brimfield Sunday night and Monday night stopped east of Springfield.

Next Week's Cattle Show.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural society have been hard at work perfecting arrangements for the annual fair next week, and with good weather expect to have a fair which will surpass all others in this section this year. Among the special attractions will be a competitive Grange exhibit between the Granges of Monson, Warren, Hampden and Wilbraham, which will occupy a part of the lower hall. Extra premiums have been offered in many of the classes, which will tend to make the exhibits larger and better than ever before. The display of carriage horses on the second day is expected to bring out a large number of fine animals, as special efforts are being made in this race. Wednesday is Monson day, and the people of that place are arranging to be present in large numbers. The Columbian Band of Thorndike has been engaged to furnish music both afternoons, and there will be a balloon ascension and parachute drop both days by Prof. Ed Hutchison, who has a reputation for good work in that, line. The railroads have offered reduced fares, and the outlook for a large attendance is good. The programme will be:

Death of Dr. John Wilbur.

Palmer people were greatly surprised to read in yesterday's Springfield papers of the death of Dr. John Wilbur, formerly of Palmer, at Canton, N. Y., on Tuesday of heart trouble. Dr. Wilbur came to Palmer about eight years ago and bought a farm at Blauchardville, and became known throughout this section through his love for good horses, of which he owned a number. Some four years ago the house on the place was burned, and he moved to Canton, N. Y. Dr. Wilbur was born in Westerly, R. I., and received his classical education at Brown University. He graduated in medicine at the university of the city of New York, at the head of his class, receiving a certificate of honor and the Mott gold medal. He also graduated at Prof. Aylett's medical institute in New York city. He was at one time demonstrator of anatomy at the university of Vermont, which position he held for two years. He then visited Europe, making a tour of the principal hospitals in England and on the continent, and was for a time physician in St. Bartholomew's hospital in London. He began his practice of medicine and surgery after his return from Europe with his father at Westerly. A few years ago Dr. Wilbur began to travel, giving lectures in various parts of the country, and stopping a few weeks in each city, where he practiced as a specialist. His career was very successful, and he amassed considerable property. He leaves a widow, but no children. A short time ago W. F. Waite of Palmer became associated with him, and an office was opened in Syracuse, N. Y.

$4000 More for Thorndike Schoolhouse.

Dr. William Holbrook was chosen moderator of the special town meeting last Saturday afternoon, called to see if more money would be appropriated for the construction of the new schoolhouse at Thorndike, and the business was transacted in a few moments. Article two was taken up, and it was voted that $4000 additional be appropriated for the school building; then the town treasurer was authorized to borrow the money for the purpose. H. E. W. Clark of Thorndike then rose with the remark that as it had been announced that the committee would have two plans to show the voters, one for a wood building and the other for a brick structure, he would say,—But what it was he would say will never be known, as the moderator announced that there was no motion before the house, and consequently no debate was allowable. Mr. Clark said he did not wish to debate, but to make a statement in behalf of the building committee, but the moderator ruled that there was no article in the warrant under which he could bring the matter up, and a motion to adjourn was carried.

Landlord Pierce Entertains.

An enjoyable event for all concerned was the reception and dinner given Wednesday evening by Landlord Pierce of the Converse House to the officers of the Springfield Commandery of Knights Templar and the Palmer members of the order. Ten of the officers came to Palmer on the 9.03 train, being met at the station and escorted to the hotel by the local Sir Knights. There a social hour was spent in the parlors, after which an excellent seven-course dinner was served. After dessert had been disposed of and the cigars lighted Mr. Pierce addressed a few words of welcome to his guests, and introduced Eminent Commander Prouty of Springfield. He was followed by Sir Knights Dexter and Sherwood of Springfield, Robinson and Osgood of Palmer, and Sawin of Brimfield. An adjournment was then made to the parlor, where whist was in order until the 1.46 train took the visitors home. The parlor and dining room were very prettily decorated with flowers by Mrs. J. F. Holbrook, and the Palmer Orchestra, stationed in a small parlor at one side, furnished most acceptable music.

Cannot the Stores Close?

The management of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society invites the merchants of the place to assist in making the fair of next week a success by closing their places of business Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons from 1 to 5 o'clock, in order to give all an opportunity to attend the fair. Nearly all other villages where fairs are held observe the occasion as a holiday. It is understood that an effort is to be made on the part of Monson people to devote Wednesday to attending the fair, as they have a personal interest in the affairs of that day. Palmer ought not to be behind in the matter. There is very little trade on the street during the hours specified, and the merchants would probably not lose a dollar's worth of custom were they to close.

C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers has been awarded the contract to build the new schoolhouse at Thorndike, the price being $11,650. This is for the building alone, and does not include the heating and venitlating apparatus, the grading or plumbing.

Wednesday and Thursday were two of the most uncomfortable days of the season; hot and dry, with very little life in the atmosphere, it being a severe exertion to breathe. Wednesday night was probably as uncomfortable as any this summer.

Work has commenced on the change of grade between the highway and the New London Northern road's tracks at the Ferrell crossing near Three Rivers, the road commencing the preliminary work of driving piles last Friday, finishing the job Sunday.

R. W. Averill, author of the spectacular opera "Zephra," with which the opera house was opened, has been spending a part of the week in town. He has decided not to put the piece on in Palmer this fall, as was at first intended, but will open the season at Meriden, Ct., October 17.

The scholars of the high school, having made the lecture course of last winter so profitable to the school library fund and so acceptable to the public, are contemplating another for this season. If one is arranged it is probable that the majority of the entertainments will come earlier in the season than last year.

Lyman Sheldon, night operator and repairer at the telephone exchange, had a narrow escape from serious accident yesterday afternoon. While at the top of a pole in Monson the pole broke and threw him to the ground, injuring his head and left side. No bones were broken, however, and he will probably be out in a few days.

The business committee of the Palmer Club is anxious to hear from any persons who have land adapted for manufacturing purposes and who are willing to give or sell the same. In talking with possible locaters here the committee must know what it can offer, and must know what land is available in order so to do. Parties having land please communicate with D. L. Bodfish.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Palmer Club last Friday night J. F. Foley of Palmer, Frank L. Shaw, Ralph Clifford and W. H. Gifford of Monson and Julius Heimann of New York were admitted to membership. The team of six men which came up from Monson last Saturday afternoon to shoot against a team of the Palmer sportsmen was defeated by a score of 59 to 54; as each man shot at 20 birds it will be seen that the average was not very large. The best score was made by Silas Keith of the Palmer team, who broke 17 out of 20, thus breaking the best previous record in the club. The Palmer team will probably return the visit to Monson at some future time.

The Mount Bunyan Granite Company has secured the contract for a large amount of cut stone for the new dam at Holyoke, and has commenced work on the same, expecting to begin shipment the first of next week. The cost of the two is about $600. On the Converse avenue sewer the town will get back $225 in entrance fees.

A session of the probate court was held in the district court room Wednesday. Administration was granted in the estates of Samuel C. Wood, late of Springfield, Charles B. Holton administrator, and Elvira S. Nichols, late of Monson, Charlotte E. Nichols administratrix. The will of Henry J. Dougherty, late of Holyoke, was proved, Jennie M. Dougherty executrix. The account of Harriet L. Brown as executrix of the estate of Samuel W. Brown, late of Brimfield, was rendered.

There was a severe thunder storm Monday night about 9 o'clock; the rain fell in torrents, and the lightning was frequent and close. The electric company had many lights put out by the storm, and the men were kept on the jump the next day trying to get the lights in order for use before night. There was another hard shower Wednesday afternoon, with a slight fall of hail, but Palmer escaped the worst of the storm. More rain fell in the evening, and still more, accompanied by a high wind, fell during the night.

People who wish to visit Canada at low rates can hardly do better than take advantage of the excursions offered next week by the Boston and Maine railroad to Montreal or Quebec. Round-trip tickets to Montreal will be sold for $8.50, and to Quebec for $10.50; they will be good on regular trains leaving Springfield, Chicopee, Holyoke, Greenfield or Northampton Wednesday or Thursday of next week, and on the return trip the purchaser will have until October 5th to reach his destination. A choice of two routes is given on the return trip from Montreal, and four from Quebec.

Under certain conditions sound travels long distances, but this beats the record. A party of women were traveling from New London up the New London Northern road Tuesday morning, after the storm of the night before. At Willimantic they got the Springfield papers, which announced the burning of J. O. Hamilton's home four miles north of Palmer, the night before, after being struck by lightning. When one of the number read the item aloud to the others one exclaimed: "There, I thought I heard an awful clap of thunder last night." And from the tone of her voice she evidently thought that she had heard at New London the thunder from the lightning flash 70 miles away.

Next Sunday will be the fifteenth after Pentecost, the Feast of the Holy Name of the Blessed Virgin, at St. Thomas' Catholic church, with masses at 9 and 10.30 a. m. During the week the daily services have been mass at 5 a. m., with sermon; at 7 for children, with instruction; at 8 with sermon; at 7.30 p. m., instruction, with sermon, ending with benediction each evening. On Wednesday morning there was a special sermon for married women, and a special sermon in the evening for men. The mission will open at North Wilbraham next Sunday.

The selectmen have decided that, as long as they are held responsible for the condition of the streets of the town, they will not have the same dug up promiscuously by whoever may choose to do so, but will rigorously enforce the law prohibiting the same. In the matter of connections with the sewers now being laid the selectmen announce that the town will in all cases dig the ditch and lay the pipe from the main sewer to the curbing, or street line where there is no curbing, the work being in charge of the superintendent of streets. For this work a uniform charge of $5 will be made. The selectmen have also had some trouble with delinquents in the matter of paying for sewer licenses, and hereafter all such licenses must be paid in advance, as well as the charge for laying the pipe to the street line, and no person is allowed to connect with the sewers without first having secured a license.

The Palmer Bicycle Club is arranging to give all attendants at its concert and ball next Tuesday evening, which will be the first in the new opera house, an enjoyable time, Brown's orchestra of Monson having been engaged to furnish music, and David Bissett will prompt. J. Adams will have charge of the floor, assisted by G. R. Shaw. The social committee is J. W. French, J. Entwistle, F. Gunn, F. Thayer, M. Scott French and H. Converse. A dance order of 20 numbers will be preceded by a concert, the admission to which will be 25 cents. The followiug will be the programme:

March Appalachean.....Perkins
Overture. "Around the Metropolis".....Beyer
Cornet Solo. Selected.....Mr. H. Butterfield
Overture. "Castle Gate".....Schlepegrell
Fantasie. "Tone Pictures of the North and South".....Bendix

There was a lively time with electricity on Walnut street about 5.30 last evening. About midway of the Nassowanno building is a pole holding electric light wires, on the top being a lightning arrestor. In some way it is supposed the wire from this became connected with the light wire, and being connected with the ground a large section of the street became charged. A staid black family horse was being driven up the street attached to a carriage in which were seated a man and woman. When opposite the pole the horse shied, and as some flaming circus posters adorned the wall just there the driver thought the horse was afraid of them, so determining to give him a lesson drove past again. Once more the horse shied, and on the third attempt fell to the ground. Attempts to get him up showed what the trouble was, and the animal was let alone until it finally struggled away from the spot and got up. It was led away and after a while was driven home, apparently none the worse for its experience. Harry Lombard hitched his horse to this pole a couple of years ago and the animal received a shock which caused it to run away; Lombard sued the town for damages, but failed to recover.

District Court.

At the civil term of the district court last Saturday the defendants were defaulted in the cases of Frederick Thompson against W. P. Hegeman, and G. A. Bills against C. L. Alexander, and executions have been issued. These cases were entered: C. D. Holbrook against Edward Carey of Palmer, W. E. Stone of Palmer against Hattie E. and Clinton C. Day of Wilbraham, Mary If O'Brien against Mary V. O'Brien, both of Monson; all cases were action of contract. The hearing in the case of Stevens against Foley of Monson was continued. Mr. Stevens, owner of the Monson House, served the landlord, Foley, with a notice of ejectment for failure to comply with the terms of the lease in the non-payment of rent. Foley set up a counter claim that he had made numerous repairs which he had not been allowed for in previous payments. Tuesday the court decided in favor of the plaintiff, giving him possession and costs.

In the criminal court on Monday Michael Hurley of Windsor Locks paid $10 drunkenness. A Polish wedding at Thorndike Saturday night, with the customary dance, keg of beer and fight, resulted in Rock Schleidick and Josef Washkerus being assessed $10 each for an assault on Stiney Check—(that's the way he pronounced it; he couldn't spell it and you may take your choice). Josef Blazegwski of Three Rivers paid $10 for an assault on John Szcygiel—(pronounce it what you will.) The liquor seized at Connelly's place in Thorndike on the 25th of August was declared forfeited to the commonwealth.

Thorndike 23—Bondsville 3.

Never before was such slugging witnessed on the grounds here as that the home team put up in the game with the Bondsville club on Saturday. The game was so one-sided from the start that it is useless to go into details; the visitors should have been retired without a run. Riley, who was in the box for the home team, did not exert himself in the least. The following score will explain the whole:

The second game of the championship series between Thorndike and Bondsville will be played on the hotel grounds here to-morrow. It is expected that Sedgwick of Andover fame will pitch, and Sullivan, Amherst's crack backstop, will catch. With these two noted players in their respective positions it will undoubtedly be a game well worth seeing.

Death of an Old Resident.

James Fuller, 77, a native of Palmer, died at his home Sunday. He was born in 1818, and has always lived in the town with the exception of two years spent in Brimfield and one in Illinois. He was a member of the First Congregational church for many years and was much respected by all who knew him. Besides a wife he leaves a son, who lives in this place, and one daughter, Mrs. C. W. Crouch of West Warren. He also leaves a brother in Southwick, 80 years old. Mr. Fuller was married in 1840 and celebrated his golden wedding five years ago.

Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Hills, who has conducted revival meetings here all summer, preached his farewell sermon. As Rev. G. S. Butler cannot be here next Sunday, Rev. Mr. Anderson, who preached in the tent during the revival season last year, has been procured.

Saturday afternoon there was an exciting game of ball on the old ground between the Indian Orchards and the home team. Both put up a good game. If it had not rained during the sixth inning the latter part of the game no doubt would have been lively, as the score was then 14 to 14.

Leon Henrichon, who lives about half a mile north of the village, dug up yesterday afternoon a potato weighing four pounds and an ounce. The monster is of roundish shape and about as large as a common pumpkin. It is not the union of several potatoes, as one would naturally suppose, and apparently is perfectly sound.

Although we did not get quite so much of a storm Wednesday as the towns north of us report, we were satisfied to have only a taste. The largest hail-stones which fell measured from 2½ to 3 inches in circumference, and backed up by a hurricane they did considerable damage. At the schoolhouse a dozen lights of glass were broken, and at the mill several more.

John Wilson has on exhibition at his store this week two very beautiful and unique pieces of parlor bric-a-brac, presented him and Mrs. Wilson by Alexander McKay, who has lately returned from Pennsylvania. Both of the ornaments are hewn out of coal; one is a little monument about a foot high, and the other would not be out of place in Mrs. Wilson's work-basket. The monument especially is a fine piece of art, and among the figures that adorn it sides is the emblem of Mr. Wilson's lodge, the A. O. U. W.

THE statement has been made recently, by a resident of the town, that no town in the state was more in need of a council of the A. P. A. than Palmer, on account of the condition of its public schools. As the maker of the statement has been a resident of the town only a few months,—is not yet a voter here—it is hardly to be supposed that he has in that short time become intimately acquainted with the workings of the town machinery. No person thoroughly conversant with the schools of the town and the methods by which they are conducted can conscientiously say that there is need of A. P. A. oversight. Probably no town in the state is in less need of a council of the order than Palmer.

THE voters of the town of Palmer did a wise thing in granting additional funds for the school building at Thorndike. There have been altogether too many mistakes made in the past in the matter of school buildings, and the time has come to have things as they should be, without any scrimping or cutting down of plans to save a few hundred dollars; that's poor economy in the long run. The village of Thorndike is to be congratulated on being the first in the town to get a school building as near right as it is possible to build. The construction will be under the watchful eye of C. H. Hobbs, and the voters may be sure of getting the most possible for their money.

IN an old trunk in an ante-room at the town house, thrown promiscuously together and covered with dust and mixed with dirt, are valuable papers concerning the past history of the town. There are original town warrants of nearly a hundred years ago, orders for payments of sums for various purposes, and documents which will some day be of priceless value. Why are they thrown together in this careless manner and left in that fire-trap? They should be collected and stored in some safe place. The town has already suffered too much from the destruction and loss of valuable historical documents; why should these be left to go the way of the others?

The way in which the work on the change of grade at the Ferrill crossing is being pushed along delights all who have to use the present crossing. Sunday the pile-driver, which was the center of attraction for crowds all day, drove in the piles, and Tuesday the excavation was begun. Thursday afternoon the way was dug through, and the new road east of the track, about 20 feet below the present road, was nearly finished. All that remains to be finished is the masonary in the tunnel and the road west of the track. The new road is expected to be open to travel at the end of this month.

THAT Palmer's location is one of the best in the state was evident again in the storm on Wednesday. While Wilbraham and other towns near by suffered severely by the storm, Palmer escaped with only a few small hailstones about the size of small hazlenuts, and no damage was done. And this is the second time this year; once before these same towns were visited by hail which destroyed fruit and vegetables, while Palmer escaped. Moral: Live in Palmer.

DUNRAVEN was foxy enough to fix matters so that he will stand well with the Britishers when he gets home. He'll be in much better odor now than if he had kept on racing and lost, as he was sure to do.

FOR another year at least the America's cup will remain with us,

The Journal.

Monson, - - Mass.

Miss Clara Cushman, late missionary to China, will speak upon "Missions" in the Methodist church one week from Sunday evening, and assisted by the Young Ladies' Missionary Society will give an entertainment entitled "An Evening in Pekin," the following Monday night.

At a special meeting of the director's of the Monson Free Library association the resignation of the librarian, Wesley A. Squier, was accepted and Nellie F. Squier was chosen in his place. It was decided to issue a supplementary catalogue, and to change the hour of closing from 8 to 8.30.

A team loaded with garbage, driven by William Underwood, came to grief in the Cushman lot on Pease avenue last Saturday. The horse fell into the dump, breaking the harness and wagon, and barely escaped being killed. Considerable complaint is made by residents in that locality about the odor from said dump.

Miss Margaret McNamara of the Springfield School of Elocution, who had a class in physical culture and elocution here last winter, intends to form another class soon. She will give private lessons, and will doubtless have both afternoon and evening classes. She was very successful in her work last season.

The 5-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mumford is singularly afflicted. While at supper Thursday night of last week it was noticed that he did not use his right hand; his mother requested him to do so, and he replied that he could not. Upon examination it was found that the arm hung limp. A physician was consulted, who pronounced it a case of paralysis, and all efforts to restore action have so far been fruitless. The child is apparently well otherwise.

Considerable mischief has been perpetrated during the past few nights; signs have been removed from their places and deposited some distance away; a small building which was recently erected near the ruins of Day's block was found one morning on the top of four packing boxes; fruit has been stolen, and on Saturday evening Henry G. Winthrop's Cleveland Special bicycle was stolen from the bank block, where he left it but a few moments previously. With the exception of the last-named case, the work is probably that of hoodlums.

Rev. P. M. Shea of St. Paul, Minn., who recently visited his relatives in Monson, was assigned to teach Latin and German in St. Paul University directly upon his return home. St. Paul University is one of the best educational institutions in the world, and it was a gift of Mr. J. J. Hill, the railroad magnate of the Northwest, to Archbishop Ireland. Mr. Hill attended a lecture given by Archbishop Ireland in the St. Paul opera house on the educational question, and at its close placed half a million of dollars at the archbishop's disposal for the erection of an educational institution for young men after the ideal manner described by him. The munificent offer was accepted, and as a resu t the Catholics of the Northwest now boast of a university second only to that at Washington. Such a gift from the most prominent and influential citizen of St. Paul, together with his being a Protestant, speaks volumes for the harmony existing between Protestants and Catholics in the Northwest, and of the great confidence placed in Archbishop Ireland's views of the school question by the Protestants of his city.

Miss Nina T. Gould will go to Tufts College this fall, Miss Helen K. Demond will enter Smith, Carl M. Blair will attend Amherst College, and Charles Harwood the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston.

Rev. John F. Leonard, for the past two years assistant pastor of St. Mary's church in Westfield, will take charge of the Catholic parish here. Before his residence in Westfield he spent eight years in Holyoke, and in both places he accomplished great good as a temperance worker. He is also a noted speaker and writer in the temperance field. In his promotion to a parish of his own he has the best wishes of his friends.

WILBRAHAM.

Gymnasium for the Academy.

A meeting of the trustees of Wesleyan Academy was held in the art building last Saturday afternoon. The resignations were accepted of George N. Kingsbury, commercial director of the Academy, and Miss T. Lillian Howe, for the past four years instructor of elocution. Mr. Kingsbury will be succeeded by William F. Gibson, who has had charge of the commercial department at the New Hampshire conference seminary in Tilton, N. H.; Miss Howe, who is to be married soon, is to be succeeded by Mrs. Alice H. MacRobert of Boston. The Emerson system will still be employed. The committee appointed at a previous meeting to select a site for the new gymnasium recommended the south side of the campus, in the vicinity of the present music hall, which is to be removed. This was accepted and a building committee appointed with power to proceed at once with the erection of the building, and also to provide for suitable grading of the grounds about the Academy. The committee is composed of B. D. Rising of Springfield, John R. Buck of Hartford, Judge L. M. Hubbard of Wallingford, Judge L. E. Hitchcock of Chicopee, Principal W. R. Newhall and George A. Russell of Wilbraham.

BELCHERTOWN.

The engagement is announced of Thomas Allen and Miss Lizzie Bartlett.

Miss Alice R. Walker has returned to Rutland to begin her school work again.

The quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Clapp Memorial Library was held last week Wednesday. The occasion was the eighth anniversary of the founding of the library, and during that time 89,000 books have been given out.

A supper was given at the Clapp homestead last Friday evening in honor of Everett Clapp, the occasion being his 73d birthday. Mr. Clapp is the oldest of the remaining sons of the late James H. Clapp, and his kindly disposition and genial temperament have endeared him to all who know him. Mr. Clapp left Monday for New York, and the family will leave for their city home about the first of October. It is a matter of much pleasure to the friends of Everett Clapp that their summer residence has been occupied by the family this year, it being the first time since it was built several years ago.

Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Thomson, Miss Lucy D. Thomson and Mrs. G. W. Longley went to Middlefield, Ct., last week to attend the wedding of Dr. Edmund S. Thompson, only son of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Thompson, and Miss Coe, a graduate of Mount Holyoke College in the class of '91. The wedding was at the home of the bride's parents, and the house was handsomely decorated in green and white. Miss Lucy D. Thompson was maid of honor and Dr. William F. Baldwin of New Haven was best man. The bridesmaids were the Misses White of New York, and the ushers were Henry L. Ellenberger of New Haven and W. D. Blake of Springfield. The bride was beautifully attired in white silk and carried a large cluster of bridal roses. A reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a wedding tour. On their return they will be at home at 91 Park street, New Haven, where Dr. Thompson is a practicing physician.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

H. C. Ellis is visiting friends in Brookine, Mass.

Tommy Powers is clerking in the office of the Cutler Co.

J. M. Perry spent last Saturday and Sunday in Boston.

H. W. Cutler took a business trip to Westpoint, Ct., Tuesday.

Mrs. D. W. Mowry visited friends in Springfield Tuesday.

Joe Baldwin, son of Postmaster Baldwin, is a student at Childs's Business College, Springfield.

Two cases of scarlet fever are reported in the family of Mrs. Smith, who lives on the Donovan place.

The heavy shower of Monday and Wednesday washed the roads very badly, which will necessitate more repairs.

A. E. Bell and family have been taking carriage drives through Hampden county this week, and enjoying the scenery.

Heavy Damages by Hail.

One of the most terrific hale storms within the memory of the oldest inhabitants struck this town between three and four o'clock Wednesday afternoon, lasting about 20 minutes. Hardly a house in the neighborhood but what sustained the loss of window glass and blinds. The paper mill and tenements belonging thereto suffered the greatest loss from broken glass, it being estimated that they have about 1200 panes of various sizes to repair. About everyone reports five to forty lights of glass broken in their houses. The farmers and fruit raisers in this vicinity will lose nearly all their apples and pears, there being hundreds of barrels of bruised fruit on the ground, which is comparatively worthless. Deputy Sheriff Scott, who is quite a hen fancier, had about 150 chickens killed, and others about town report the loss of fowls. The money damage from the storm is hard to estimate. To those who were not eye witnesses of the storm it may seem like exaggeration to state that some of the hail stones which fell measured three inches in length, but such is the fact however, and can be verified by almost anyone in town.

WALES.

Joseph Lucy is selling more JOURNALS than ever before; everybody seems to want a copy.

Mrs. J. H. Loudon and three children are away visiting friends in Connecticut, and expect to be absent sometime.

Mrs. Lizzie Rourke and son, returned from Springfield Monday, where they have been spending a week among friends.

Mr. Flynt of Charlton, an old gentleman of over 80 years, spent Sunday and Monday in town visiting his children, several of whom reside here.

During the shower Monday night one of the ventilators on top of the chimney on Shaw's block was blown off. Several trees were badly twisted and broken; no damage by lightning has been reported.

W. H. Kelly of Warren, administrator of the estate of John W. Adams, late of Wales, was in town last week appraising the property, most of which is claimed by other parties. It looks as if fees would be small.

Several boys, "just for fun," they say, stopped Luther Gardner's team and turned it into a ditch, keeping him there some time, or until his cries aroused the neighbors, when they fled. Several times in the past boys have played tricks on him and his team, which have been overlooked. This time Mr. Gardner intends to show them what the strong arm of the law will do.

Two boys who have several times in the past been engaged in pilfering, have again committed a very grave crime in entering a widow's home in her absense and taking a watch, two knives and a pocket-book. Their parents have settled several times for their mischief, and this time the widow partly promised not to prosecute if they would return the stolen property, which they did. She now thinks she ought to have the boys dealt with for their own good, and should she fail to make a complaint, other parties are likely to see that they are taught better.

Several of the steady, conservative people thought last Sunday to absent themselves from church for a drive to Mashapaug and to enjoy the day in a Sunday picnic. On arriving at the grounds, to their surprise they found a dominie on the platform proclaiming the "glad tidings of salvation," to which they must listen or go away. So they reverently gave attention to the sermon, after which they spread their tables and enjoyed their viands much better for the service. One of the party said that during the hard shower Monday night she felt glad she had attended church on Sunday.

WARE.

Walter Reilly has taken a position as clerk for Rohan & Brosnahan.

The mission meetings at All Saints' church this week are for women; next week they will be for men.

Miss Katharine Kennedy, in addition to her duties as supervisor of music in the schools, advertises to receive pupils in vocal harmony and piano.

A band of Kickapoo Indians are camped on James Edward's lot on North street, giving free exhibitions each evening to advertise the Indian medicines they have for sale.

The children who are brought into the schools from the out-districts seem to enjoy the trip very much—a bus ride every day. Edgar Winslow has the largest load, some sixteen boys and girls.

The mission services at All Saints' church are largely attended. Fathers Carubbell, Himmel and Stanton are in attendance. Mission goods are for sale at Miss Cannavan's and at P. J. Downey's.

Miss Effie Seavey has some fine paintings of horses on exhibition, the latest being of H. M. Clark's horse. She has also a fine picture of a spaniel dog on exhibition in Dexter & Richard's window.

Misses Minnie Fitzgerald and Nancy Feehan have entered the normal training school at Westfield. and Misses Elizabeth Moran and Margaret Murphy have entered the normal school at Springfield.

Henry Grigware, the tea and coffee dealer, had a narrow escape on Monday night. He attempted to drive into the Hamilton barn on the Palmer road to get out of the rain, but found it locked, so was forced to drive on, and had just got out of range when it was struck by lightning.

The firemen are to have their annual parade and inspection Saturday, the 28th instant. There will be tests of the steamer, the hose companies will compete in running and making connections with the hydrants, and the hook and ladder company will give an exhibition, all closing with supper at the Methodist vestry and a dance by hose company No 4.

Mrs. Daniel Sanford, aged 70 years, one of the old-time good women of the town, whom none knew but to love and respect, died at her residence at Ware Center on Sunday afternoon. About the first of January she had a slight shock of paralysis, but recovered from it and was in pretty good health until about a week before her death, when she had another light stroke, but was not considered in a dangerous condition until the Friday night before her death. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from her late residence. Rev J. P. Harvey officiating.

The thunder shower of Monday evening was the most severe of the season, and considerable damage was done to the roads. The lightning struck the barn of F. W. Farrar and followed the water-pipes to the house, doing considerable damage and knocking the bottom out of a washtub in which clothes were soaking. George Joslyn's barn was burned, with the contents, consisting of six tons of hay belonging to Miss Mary Howe, a horse, cow and farming tools. The barn was insured for $400, and Mr. Joslyn's part of the contents for $200. Miss Howe's hay was uninsured.

School Shoes

for boys and girls. Have them easy to wear, whether good or bad; as well to have them both good and easy to wear. Easy, first then—no comfort in hard ill-fitting shoes; good, after—good leather, good shoemaking. It is as much to our interest that the shoes you buy are good, and easy to wear as it is for the boy or girl or woman that wears them.

We keep a great many kinds of school shoes—for boys and girls. All are good or we wouldn't keep them. But good shoes need not cost too much. Here are half a dozen kinds; pay more or less if you want—

Boys' satin calf lace shoes, all solid leather, medium toes, satin calf tops; sizes 11 to 2, $1.25; 2½ to 5½, $1.50.

Boys' real calf lace shoes, narrow toes, fancy tips and kangaroo kid tops; sizes 11 to 2, $1.50; 2½ to 5½, $2.

Boys' French calf lace and button shoes, welt soles, medium toes and kangaroo kid tops (Hannan's shoes—there are no better made than Hannan's); sizes 11 to 2, $2.50; 2½ to 5½, $3.25.

Child's bright dongola kid button boots, spring heels, patent leather tips; sizes 6 to 8, 75 cents; sizes 8 to 10½, $1.

Misses' dongola kid button boots, spring heels, patent calf tips; sizes 11 to 2, $1.25; 2½ to 5½, $1.50.

Misses dull dongola kid button boots, dongola kid tips, double soles, sizes 11 to 2, $1.50.

Main floor of Pynchon street building.

Silks.

Black brocaded gros grain silks, 22 inches wide, a dollar a yard that Boston people have to pay $1.25 for—Springfield ahead of Boston again! Ten different patterns.

Taffeta silks, bright and new, 50 cents, 75, $1, and $1.25 a yard. Just a little style to the thing, and they'll be the prettiest waists for evening or street wear.

Summer girl (who has been suddenly attacked with palpitation of the heart)—"There must be a man somewhere around here!"—Beacon.

A. M. Bailey, a well known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required.

While in Chicago Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and a half dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

A Country Phlosopher.

The cold has killed the corn off an' blighted all the wheat;
The ice is on the peach blooms and the apple blossoms sweet,
An' the country is in mournin' from the mountains to the sea,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-botherin' me!

The bees was out for honey an' a-workin' for their lives,
But the blizzard stopped their buzzin', an' they're froze up in their hives;
An' there won't be any sweetenin' for the coffee or the tea,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-botherin' me!

The mockin'-birds was singin' jest the sweetest kind o' notes,
But now they're sittin' silent with a flannel roun' their throats;
And there won't be any music 'til the summer time to be,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-botherin' me!

It don't make any difference what these changin' seasons bring;
If it's cold, the fire's a blazin', an I hear the chimney sing;
If it's hot, the trees are shady, with the breeze a-blowin' free,
Fer the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-botherin' me!

A WASHINGTON WAIF.

"Look behind you, quick!" said an eager, childish voice at my side as I was going out on the electric cars to Chevey Chase a few evenings ago.

I looked, but saw nothing, when the little voice cried again:—

"Look at the roof!"

Then I knew the little lad at my side had for the first time seen the electric lamps flash out their wondrous light-like magic, making the gathering shadows suddenly grow deeper.

I now noticed the little chap for the first time. He was quite a handsome little colored boy, about 10 years of age, with light coffee-colored skin and very soft eyes, which just then were shining with pleasure. He was just as ragged as he could be, his feet were bare and muddy and he held a ragged cap in his hand.

Seeing I did not repulse him he began to talk so eagerly, too, as if he could not help it.

"Were you ever at the zoo?" he began.

"Yes," I replied. "Are you going to the zoo?"

"Oh, no," he replied. "I'm going way beyond that. I'm going to Chivvy Chase; were you ever there?"

"Yes," I replied again. "Were you?"

"I was there this morning," he said; "I walked out and I'm going back now to get work."

"Why, what kind of work can you do?" I asked, "you are such a little chap."

"I can do most anything," he said promptly. "I can dig potatoes and corn, and do any kind of country work. I just love the country. I'll tell you something if you won't tell."

I assured him gravely that I would not mention it.

"Well," he said, looking at me solemnly, "I've run away. I just run this morning."

"Why, little lad, you had better not run away; your father and mother will be frightened about you," I said.

"But I didn't run away from no kin; I ain't got none. My mother died when I was little."

When he was little! Poor little duffer!

"I ran away from Miss Ellen," he went on. "She lives on Twelfth street. When I was little I lived in the country: I was born there. Then my mother died, and pap and me lived alone. It was down in Virginia, but after a time pap he seen a ghos'. He said it was my mother's ghos', and he was afraid to stay there, he was just that scared of that ghos'; but I told him if it was my mother's ghos' I wasn't scared of it. I just wanted to see my mother that bad that I wanted to see her ghos'. But pap allowed he couldn't stand it, so we went off to big cities. First we went to Fredericksburg, but pap couldn't get work there, so we went on to Richmond, and that was just as bad, so we came to Washington. We lived in a room on Tenth street, and then pap did a queer thing—he went off one day and he never came back. I wonder why he never came back?"

Poor little fellow! How I wanted to take that look of wonder out of his eyes!

In a moment he began again:

"Then Mr. Brown he said he would get me a place at Miss Ellen's, on Twelfth street, and I've lived there ever since."

"Who is Miss Ellen; is she a white woman?" I asked, "and why did you run away from her?"

"No, ma'am," he replied; "she's a colored lady who does washing, but she was so bad to me; why, she treated me just like a dog, and I stayed as long as I could stand it, and this morning I ran away. I won't live in big cities any more. I'm going to Chivvy Chase to get work."

"Well, you are a brave little fellow," I said, "and I believe you will get work, but you may not get it to-night."

"Oh, I think I will," he said cheerfully. "I went to every place in Washington, and if I had been a man I could have got a good job at blacksmithin'. The man said, 'Do you think you could do blacksmithin'? and I told him I thought I could. But he laughed and told me to come back when I was a man. I'm going to Chivvy Chase inn. I was there this morning and they told me to come back next week, and they would see about it. It's dark now, and I think I will go back and get them to see about it right away, so I can begin to-night."

It had grown darker and darker while we talked, and we now saw the lights from the Chevy Chase circle and the little fellow got off the car, and as it was starting again he smiled back at me so pleasantly and cried, "Good night, I'm just sure I'll get a place."

I will never forget the brave little face and the pleasant smile that he gave me as he dashed on into the darkness.

The next day I picked up a paper and saw the following item:—

"Last night, adout 9 o'clock, near Chevy Chase circle, a small colored boy was struck by an electric car and killed instantly. The body has not been identified."—Washington Star.

THE DEPTH OF THE SEA.—Small boys often ask their parents, "How deep is the sea?" The answer depends entirely upon the sea. The following table, complied by one who has investigated, may help one to the solution of one of the small boy's problems. Average depth in yards: Pacific, 4272; Atlantic, 4025; Indian, 3658; Antarctic, 3000; Arctic, 1620; Mediterraneau, 1476; Irish, 240; English channel, 110; Adriatic, 45; Baltic, 43.—Harper's Round Table.

THE MODERN STYLE.—Bridget had just informed the unwelcome caller that the lady was not at home, and as she returned to the kitchen she moralized.

"It makes a great difference," quoth she, "whin an' how yez practice a good thing. Not tellin' a loie made George Washington famous, but, begorrah, 'twould hov losht me me job."—Washington Star.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with locol treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

House Furnishings.

With the advent of the Fall season we place before the public the largest assortment of House Furnishings ever shown in Springfield. Our steadily increasing business in this line has compelled us to make larger preparation than ever before, and to facilitate matters we have taken 10,500 square feet additional floor space in adjoining property on Hillman street, making the total amount devoted to furniture alone over 100,000 square feet.

Our Carpet Department is piled high with rolls upon rolls of every wanted kind of floor covering. We had the pick from the best manufacturers, our orders were placed early and the stock is now complete and ready for your inspection and purchase.

More space has been given to rugs, new lines have been added, making the assortment without doubt the largest of its kind in this section.

In Draperies, productions of foreign and domestic manufacturers are crowding the counters and offering no end of choice things to furnish and beautify the home.

In all we are well known for carrying only the reliable sorts, the kinds we can safely guarantee, while our styles nearly all of which, are exclusive, give evidence of much forethought and consideration to the wants of our patrons. Furthermore our large buying enables us ever to share profits with you, a fact that has been well proved and is appreciated by the thousands who favor us with their orders.

Spend a little time here, whether purchasing or not. One call will lead to others.

EXPERIENCE THE BEST TEACHER.

The great value of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in curing diseases of the blood, particularly the ills of women, has again been demonstrated. Mrs. W. J. Anderson, of Bruyn street, Kingston, N. Y., in speaking of her experience says: "I was an awful sufferer from troubles common to my sex, was reduced to 70 pounds; four physicians prescribed for me, but I kept growing worse. Until I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I never knew a well day. By its use I grew stronger, the pain less frequent, until it entirely disappeared. I now weigh 125 pounds and am a well woman. I must know a dozen women who suffered similarly and have been cured by its use."

A TIME-HONORED JOKE.

"I suppose the professional humorist must live," said Miss Nancy, "but there is one of his jokes which I, for one, am heartily tired of."

"What is that?" asked the minister's wife, breaking off the thread.

"The one about the stingy girl. You see it all the time in one form or another. A group of girls get into a car, and when the conductor comes up for the fare they all pretend not to see him, and when finally he forces himself upon their notice, they haggle and scramble about paying the fares, each one hoping she won't have to, but pretending that she will, and settling herself back at last in secret triumph and permitting some one else to pay. Or it's the same scene about candy or soda water, or matinee tickets, or anything else you like. I'm disgusted with it. Most of all because it's true." "True?" ejaculated Mrs. Thayer, faintly.

"Yes, true!" said Miss Nancy with her most awful glare. "Of course it's true. I've seen it dozens of times, so have you. The boys don't do it. Don't you suppose there's a reason? If the professional joker would only draw the moral as well as the picture; would only print the reason in big black capitals, so that only the blind could fail to read, I for one, would befriend him for life."

The old lady paused and knitted rapidly for a few minutes. "How can they help it?" she broke out at last. "How are the girls treated? What sort of an income do they have? There is my friend, Belinda, with her two children, Mary and Tom. How did she treat them? Just as every other parent, almost, treats his children. Tom had a regular allowance from the time he was ten years old, only a few pennies at first, but he always had money in his pocket. As he got older the sum increased, until when he was sixteen he was given two dollars a week for his car fare and petty expenses. Do you suppose he ever cared for a car fare, or thought of being mean about it? Of course not.

"Did Belinda treat the girl the same way? Oh' bless you, no! When Mary asked for an allowance, she was met with cold denial. She would gladly have accepted half the amount of her brother's, but was given none at all. 'You do not need money. Everything is provided for you. When you are taken out, your car fares and admission fees are paid for you. Your brother has to do that for himself and others—other girls like you. Boys need money, girls don't'. There it was, dinned into her ears from childhood—'Money will be paid for you, you will not be expected to pay it yourself.'

"When Mary wanted anything, she had to coax for it, up to the day she was married at twenty-five. If her father had had a good day, he would chuck her under the chin, laugh at the request,—even if a mild extravagance—and with a 'Here, you expensive puss,' the coin would be counted out to her. Another day, when business had worried him, he would stalk out of the room and refuse her a pair of shoes. In the meantime, Master Tom was receiving a stated quarterly allowance for clothes, regardless of fluctuations in the family finances. All the pocket money poor Mary got was saved out of the money her father gave her for a special purpose. Do you wonder she did not want to spend this pittance on other women's car fares or confectionery? She would get no more in a hurry.

"By-and-by Mary was married. Her husband had been brought up like Tom, to believe that women did not need money. He allowed her a certain sum—as closely calculated as possible—for the table, and it had to do. All other bills were paid by himself, and Mary received no other money. If she wanted any little thing for herself or the house—over and above the necessities—she waited till her husband was in good humor, and then she weedled him as she had weedled her father years before. There was no wheedling necessary when money was wanted for one of his fads, she noticed.

"Sometimes she tried to save a little out of her market money, but this was difficult. It was already small enough. Her husband lunched sumptuously every day at a downtown restaurant, while she ate a tasteless cold meat and drank innutritious tea at home. He often asked a friend and called for a more liberal meal; if a friend dropped in to lunch with her, either she had to serve 'leftovers,' or provide a meal which would produce a deficit at the end of the month—to her husband's displeasure. She had no share in the family income, no part nor lot in it. And she was the best and most loving little wife in the world, too.

"When her husband's birthday came around, she bought him a present—for which he had to pay the bill. That's another standing joke in the newspapers. How else could she give him anything? She had no private purse. From the day she was born, she never had any pocket money. Her husband made a great parade of giving her something handsome at Christmas. I wonder if that wasn't bought with some of her money—money that she was entitled to for her own use, that he kept her out of on the plea that everything was provided for her. The newspapers don't print that side of the story.

"Well, her father will die perhaps, one day, and Mary will inherit a little money. Will she know anything about taking care of it? If her husband be living, he will see that she is not cheated, and he is not the kind of man to cheat her himself. But should he be dead, what will the poor woman do with her capital? Do you suppose she knows the first thing about investments, or even how to draw a check? Certainly not. She has been brought up by her parents, and kept by her husband, to have no practical or valuable knowledge concerning the care of her little fortune: and if she does not fall an easy prey to some rascally man, it's a miracle of mercy.

"Tom, on the other hand, will be able to manage his little inheritance beautifully. He has had financial training with an ever-increasing capital since he was ten years old. He has been taught when and how to be thrifty, when to be liberal, how to invest and how to spend wisely. And some day that poor, shortsighted, foolish Belinda will say, "Girls are not fit to handle money they always make a mess of it. But there's, Tom, he's a born business man!"—Jean McVeagh Zieber, in Woman's Progress.

ODD MOMENTS.

Said a discouraged woman: "If you had ever tried to work by snatches you would know how hard it is to get anything done that way."

"I've had to do a good deal of work and study just that way—by snatches," responded the other quickly. "I had to learn to systematize my odds and ends of time. So I know it can be done.

These "odd minutes," which we all lose in our days, count up amazingly. Fifteen minutes multiplied by four make an hour, and so many times a day we let slip fifteen minutes!

Fifteen minutes waiting for the lazy ones to come down to breakfast! Fifteen minutes for the unpunctual ones to go for a walk or a drive! Fifteen minutes waiting for the luncheon or dinner bell to ring! Fifteen minutes waiting a dressmaker's pleasure, for the child to come back from an errand, or for the restless baby to go to sleep! Not to speak of the half hours and hours spent in trains and boats!

When at night the busy woman counts up her used and wasted opportunities, she thinks, despairingly, "If I only had those odd minutes in a lump at one time, how much I could accomplish which now seems unattainable!"

Some headache powders are good. Others are better. TAYLOR'S ANTI-HEADACHE POWDERS are recognized the world over as the BEST. Purely vegetable, containing no deleterious drugs, they are guaranteed absolutely harmless. Cures any headache in a few minutes. At LeGro & Lynde's.

But something can be done with these odd moments which are so exasperatingly unproductive to the diligent one. This is indisputable, because there are those who have used just such minutes to advantage. Many true examples rise up to confirm the statement.

A woman who was obliged to wait at the breakfast table for a dozen boarders to straggle down, in her waiting moments manufactured yards of a dainty lace, which she found a profitable way of employing the time. Another young woman, who daily waited a quarter of an hour for an elderly friend to go driving, kept a book on the hall table, and in the waiting times of one summer managed to do a creditable amount of historic reading. Another kept a novel "going" in each room of the house, and whenever she waited for dinner managed to read a few chapters of whichever book was handiest. The only reading moments of one busy woman was the time she spent every day putting her baby to sleep, and her book was kept in readiness for the operation.

It is told of one industrious young girl that she constantly crocheted or knitted during the minutes her drawing teacher was explaining prospective or sharpening her pencil. But this does seem carrying minute-saving very far.—Harper's Bazar.

"Satan keeps himself busy in this world." "Well, you don't blame him for staying away from home, do you?"—Life.

Not Without Care.

You may build you an elegant mansion
And fence it around with gold,
Set it with diamonds and rubies;
You may keep out the wind and the cold,
You may banish from it all intruders,
Have music and levity there;
You may shut out discord and envy,
But you cannot shut out care.

You may build a lowly cottage,
You may paint it all in white,
Grow vines and shade trees about it,
Let in only sunshine and light;
You may keep out the envy and malice
That wrinkle the faces we wear;
But you may keep love inside and contentment,
You cannot keep out care.

You may sing with the voice of an angel,
You may dance with a fairy's feet,
You may laugh till your laughter makes music
For everyone that you meet;
You may dance till your feet seem twinkling,
Till ths roses fade in your hair,
You may dance till the world dies of envy,
But you cannot drive away care.

You may smile in the faces of women
Who envy your very life,
As you hide from their eyes all the burdens,
The weariness, heartaches and strife;
You may live so the poor may adore you,
Live a life that the world calls fair;
You may let love be conquered by duty,
But you cannot live without care.

MARRIED AT A GALLOP.

"Well?" in a decidedly testy tone, was the greeting old Joel Gringer gave the tall young schoolmaster who stood fumbling the latch of the front gate and clearing his throat more for the sake of attracting attention than to remove any obstruction from his windpipe. "Well?"

But it wasn't well. That wasn't the right way to encourage the young man, and shrewd old Joel Gringer knew it. He wanted to make him go through the torture of telling him plainly that he had come to see his daughter, so that he could put an end to the thing then and there.

"Well?"

"H'm; I—I just wanted to know if Miss—h'm, h'm—is at home;" and the young fellow relieved his nervousness by digging up the gravel walk with his left toe at a rate that threatened to damage it worse than ten years' wear and tear.

"I thought your business was to teach the children to speak the English language, and here you can't do anything but hum and hawk. I'm at home and so is Growler there. Anything else?" and the steely eyes looked through the young man like a ferret's.

"No, sir," with a loud h'm: "I was just going up the road to Mr. Mason's and wanted to know if the family were all well—that's all." And the bashful young fellow seemed to have found his wits somewhere, for he turned coolly away, raising his cane as he did so, and striking the maple foliage over his head three sharp clips that made the leaves crack like a pistol.

And the old farmer's eyes were not so sharp as he prided himself that they were, or he might have seen the flutter of something white, three distinct things, from the narrowest opening in the blinds above, and have guessed why the young man was so easily satisfied.

Maybe love is blind to its own objects; but for dullness of vision give me, all the time, the eyes that are ever so sharp after a bargain, but have not the quickening of the divine passion to make them vigilant guards against the dangers that threaten to thwart love's plans. That's a long way of spelling Joel Gringer, but a true one.

He watched the straight, lithe young form until it seemed only a shadow against Neighbor Mason's barn, and then began banging the shutters with a vehemence that said to all: "Joel Gringer can take care of his own every time—leave him alone for that."

"Gone on to Mason's," was his gruff answer to his wife's questioning look. "Only wanted to inquire after the health of the family. S'pose he thinks the deestrick is assessed to pay him for goin' round an' doin' that—ha, ha! What would the funerals of two-thirds of this family count with him? Good at fractions, they say. We'll see how his fractions will work in this house. Much good it will do him to talk it over with John Mason, the old——"

"Sh——!" hissed cautiously into his ear, and a warning finger told him to leave uncomplimentary references to the neighbor—with whom he had been embroiled in a bitter lawsuit, and between whose farms a "devil's lane" prevented any joining of line fences, unsaid. "There's Mason's hired man again."

"Well?" (About twenty per cent more peppery than a moment ago.)

"The old man sent me over to say them there hogs o' yourn's been in the back cornfield agin, an' he won't turn 'em out till doomsday, nor let me. They're there yit, an' makin' the interest on five thousand dollars fly like sixty—that's what the old man 'lows the field'll fetch him. Better not take that there pup along, had ye? Hi? Wait till I can get out!"

The last exclamation was caused by preparations for unchaining the huge bulldog Growler; and Ben Stone made one leap over the fence, and was out of hearing before Joel Gringer could finish something about "going for witnesses."

"Said my say out. He'n the dog's witnesses enough, I reckon, to the scrimmage there'll be. I'm engaged in another case. Hogs ain't to my likin', Joel Gringer, though I do know how to drive 'em purty slick. Wouldn't a-taken that dog if I hadn't called it a pup and riccommended not. Laws! but there'll be smash to pay for tonight, sure's my name's Ben Stone."

Mrs. Gringer set her candle in the back kitchen window and her supper in the oven, and watched and waited for Joel's lantern to gleam down the lane leading to the back cornfield.

But it was gleaming in more fantastic forms farther down. It was playing hide and seek up and down dusty rows of corn, just in the milk and toothsome to the unruly swine. He and Growler were defending the rear, with Mrs. Gringer doing sentinel duty for them; but what of the front.

In a little hollow in the road, not twenty rods from Joel Gringer's house, the thick green turf of the wayside served as a cushion for the feet of two restive steeds that would stamp at the troublesome flies. Every nail was fast in their shoes and every strap buckled tight, while the nervy fellows—two of the most tireless travelers John Mason's stabled could boast—champed their bits restlessly and tossed their heads, throwing now and then a flake of foam that flashed with silvery brightness in the chance rays of moonlight, and—But what is that?

Adown the green, thorny breastwork that defended Joel Gringer's possessions from the wayside flittered a slight figure, crouching and halting, and then darting swiftly forward toward the little dell which seemed to be the rendezvous sought.

"Is that you, Nannie?" a hoarse, excited whisper met her a few rods distant from the horses.

"Sh——! Yes; I never saw a man who could help spoiling things by blunders. There, don't take it to heart, Richard; I won't scold you again, after all this until we are——"

"Married."

"Yes; but do not let us hurry! I'm afraid every minute that those hogs haven't done justice to the obstinacy of their nature, and father——"

"Well, give me your foot, and off we go. We'll show Joel Gringer whether I am competent to teach addition to a girl."

"And are you sure the preacher understands?"

"Sure, darling; he's to be at Brother Stilwell's tonight, on his way to the Kildeer appointment. Now, old fellows, do your best. Mr. Mason told me not to spare horseflesh."

As the clatter of the hoofs rang down the road two unusual night incidents might have been witnessed: the gleam of a light across the the fields, swaying and flickering as though carried by an excited, unsteady hand; and a man leaning against the door of John Mason's stables, whittling a stick and musing over something which evidently pleased him much. "He, he! I never helped take them out of here. Can't prove it by me who's takin' to stealin'; h'aint I been behind the haystack tryin' to hammer the bung in that barrel? An' it won't stay, but it made an awful racket. There's one consolation; if them there hosses have to go fur, they've been well fed an' every shoe is as sound as a trigger—ha, ha!" And Ben Stone shut up his knife and went in to inform his master that as likely as not somebody had stolen something or other about the place, but it couldn't be proved by him.

"Shut up and go to bed with you, and don't answer questions until you're asked," was the curt reply, with this addition in an undertone: "I I—would't begrudge the best span I've got to get even with old Gringer once more."

"Patter, patter! click, click! neck to neck and nostril to nostril, along ridge and through wooded hollow skimmed the two fleet coursers like some well mated birds of flight. But few words were exchanged, but two pairs of human ears strained, minute by minute, to catch the first sound of expected pursuit.

Out of another valley and up to the top of another ridge they go steadily, panting and steaming. They paused a second to breathe, and look and listen.

Away back on the last ridge, a mile or more away, the moonlight glistens on something bright—a silver-plated buckle or saddle decoration—and then there comes a clear, ringing sound, as when steel strikes flint!

"He's coming! Oh, hurry, Dick! We cannot reach Mr. Stilwell's in time; it's——"

"Three miles yet, and——"

"You know Fleetwood's gait; Mr. Mason never had a horse that could outrun him. What shall we do? Oh, if only we were——"

"Married and I could call you my own; then I would not need run a step, but could defend my right to you in the eyes of the law. Listen! What's that ahead?"

"The Corners are just down there, you know, and someone may be coming on the cross-road."

"An idea! That is the direction from which the preacher comes. What if it should be—But, no; he's going straight ahead of us. Yes, there he turns! Whip up, and let's overtake him, whoever the rider be!"

And the two blown and jaded horses were urged afresh.

A quarter of a mile; half a mile; three-quarters. The sound of hoofs in both directions are growing distinct. Oh, so near behind!

"Call him, Richard! He may stop. Oh, if it only is!"

"But your father will hear, too, and hasten! Hello, there! Wait!"

"Who is it?"

"I can't be mistaken in that voice, Dick. He has sopped. Now——"

In a moment the overtaken party was seen, sure enough, to be the very preacher they were riding hard and fast to find. But while the situation was being explained the footsteps of the pursuing horse were heard close by, and in a minute another "Hello!" rang on their ears, hoarse and infuriated: "Stop! stop, I command you Nannie, your father tells you to stop! Young man, I'll horsewhip you on the spot if you don't give me my daughter!"

The two looked at each other in despair. There would scarcely be time to begin the ceremony. Must they be torn asunder when so near the goal? The thought made the girl turn pale, and she almost sank helpless in her lover's arms.

But the preacher, backwoodsman that he was, was a man of wit and resources, and of heart as well. "Keep on," said he, quietly, "and ride as fast as you can. I will follow. Join your hands and sit firm in the saddle when I tell you. I have it on the tip of my tongue. The Lord please, you'll be man and wife before that horse brushes his nose against yours."

Clatter, clatter—clink, clink! rang the sharp hoof-beats! Nearer and nearer they came together; but the words rolled off the preacher's lips, as he rose and sank in his stirrups, faster than the speed of the racers.

It was a race of tongue against hoof!

The wild, and mad pelting of the iron-shod feet were pitted against heart-throbs and brain-pulses and trembling lips!

The strain upon John Mason's horse-flesh, and its fleeter competitor, whose master spared him neither pain nor life, was telling; but the tension on two hearts that were tortured by suspense was still more terrific.

Nearer and nearer sped Fleetwood, until his horse's panting almost drowned the preacher's words! But a few rods separated them!

"Join your hands," came the sharp command.

"Halt, I command you, in the name of——"

"Put spurs! Forasmuch as Richard W. Anderson and Annie Gringer have consented to——"

"Hold up there! I'm an officer of the law!" demanded another voice, drowning the preacher's "forasmuch." But the wild wedding party dashed forward, now almost covered by the dust the others raised; and the preacher's lips worked fast.

"In the name of the Father——"

"Halt, or you'll suffer the penal——"

"And of the Son——"

"Give me my daughter, you villain!"

"And of the Holy Ghost, I pronounce that they are husband and wife. Amen."

And love had won the race!

There was a halt, and explanations that disarmed the man of the law and sent old Joel Gringer back to his belated supper with vein cursings of his luck.

The supper at Stilwell's was flavored with pleasanter reflections; and Ben Stone had many an opportunity to wonder aloud, in his sly way, "How in tarnation them hogs ever did git into old man Mason's cornfield jest when Dick Anderson wanted to steal Joel Gringer's daughter."—J. F. Cowan, in Frank Leslie's Monthly.

"Ah, nevah was glaid t' see cops in er pokah-room till las' night. Jackson held fo'h aices, Johnson fo'h queens, Ketchum haid fo'h jacks, I haid fo'h kings, Randolph held fo'h tens and Pullit held a royal flush, an' uv co'se we all held razzers. De brack undertaiker dat stacked de kairds tried t' hold de door, but de cops broke in and rescued us."

CAME TOGETHER.

Peculiar things sometimes are told into the ears of Lewiston lawyers. They are a sort of father confessor for certain classes. Thursday afternoon a woman from the country climbed slowly up the stairs of Lyceum hall block and rapped ceremoniously upon the door of Joel Bean's office. Squire Bean was talking with a farmer who had come in a minute before, and he requested the lady to be seated in the outer office, while he listened to the man's story, told excitedly in the inner room. It was rather a commonplace story, and amusing to the lawyer, but not to the man who told it, for he was terribly in earnest.

"No, sir, Susie won't pay no 'tention to anything I say. We've been married nigh on to forty-four years, and we've children of our own grown up and married. The farm down there has my best manhood tilled into it with the plow and harrow, and not a spear of grass grows but it is better for the years of labor I put into it. Our crops wuz not extra fine in them first years, for it wuz a run out farm, and we wuz poor. But she never complained in them days. She wuz a little thing, but Lord! how she worked! But now she don't give me no comfort at all. And it's all because I happen to believe in preadamite men. Do you? She says it's contrary to the Bible and all that. Now I'm a-going to let her get a divorce or I'm a-going to get one myself. She shall have half the property, but she shan't call me a heathen—me who has led the prayer meeting for years, and sez my prayers. I don't believe God made the earth in a million years and then snapped the fingers and sez 'Nebecunezer' backward, and the man sprung into life from the dust of the street. I'd sooner think he did it 'cording to rule as he'd a orter."

"Reuben!" came a high soprano voice from the other room, and in the door stood Susie, who could not stand it any longer.

Reuben looked surprised, but plucked up courage and coughed.

"The good Lord might a made you from a monkey, but I never wuz. My folks are old New England blueboods," she said.

The lawyer looked interested, but did not smile. "Be seated, madam, please," he said. "Your home must be a pleasant one. Your husband tells me that you and he have worked long and hard to make it so—in fact, have put your best life's blood into it. Is it so? Yes. And who will live there when you separate? Perhaps some of your neighbors may like to buy it."

The man and woman looked indignantly into each other's faces.

"Neighbors, indeed. There hain't one of 'em got such a farm."

"Oh, well; it will have to be sold, of course. I suppose your children agree to this separation. It won't make them feel bad to see the old farm where they were born sold?"

"I ain't thought of that," murmured the woman.

"Nor I, nuther," said the man.

"And you, too. What will you do? Go and live with them, or will you work out somewhere? Could you do housework, madam?"

The woman's eyes flashed. The man suddenly straightened up and set his teeth. "No wife of mine shall ever work out!" he exclaimed.

Her face softened and the lawyer saw it. "Did you ever say that before you married her? She's been a good wife to you all these years! Were you ever sick and has she not cared for you tenderly?"

Tears glistened in the sunken blue eyes and trickled down to his wizened beard. "Who'd take care of you now if you were ill?" pursued the lawyer in a quiet voice.

The woman let down her veil and the farmer said, "I'll come in and see you again," and offering his arm to his wife he tenderly showed her out and helped her into his battered wagon at the door of the block. As they drove down the street there was no room between them for a third person on the seat.—Lewiston, Me., Journal.

HOW TO MAKE CALLS.

What do you find to talk about when making calls? Is it some latest bit of scandal, some choicest story of an old gossip?

Don't gossip; it is worse than useless.

Let us talk over what you can find to tell your friend with profit to you both.

There is that pleasant trip you took last week. You can tell what you enjoyed about that—what you enjoyed. Do not hunt up and talk over the unpleasant things unless you are very positive some one will be benefitted thereby.

That book you read was delightful; perhaps it will please and delight your friend. Kindly offer the loan of it to her. If she has read it, compare notes with her on its different characters, its plot, etc. You will be sure to get some new ideas.

Perhaps you have learned a new way of doing some bit of work; it may help your friend as it has helped you.

Do not tell the unkind remarks you heard about an acquaintance. Tell all the pleasant things you have heard.

If some one has told you some pleasant thing about your hostess which it would please her to know, tell her; it will not be flattery.

Meet any talk which promises to be unfair or unpleasant to others with words amounting to "We do not know all," "We cannot tell what one might do in her place," and change the subject as soon as possible.

In the meantime your friend will have helped you in her own way; you need never fear to carry the talk on by yourself.

Strive to have your conversation mean something. Use all your chances for improvement which come to you.

Carry with you when you start on your round of calls—you need it always—a heart filled with charity, and your calls will be successful. You may not be wise or brilliant, but you will find yourself everywhere welcome.—The Call.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER

That a clean apron worn while hanging the clothes helps them clean.

That a pair of white gloves or mittens are a comfort to hands taken from hot suds to hang clothes in zero weather; also a close-fitting jacket and hood to keep one from catching cold.

That the line, as soon as its duty is ended, should be reeled up and placed in a bag until next time.

That clothes when brought in should be separated and folded at once; if allowed to lie together, many wrinkles accumulate.

That clothes carefully folded and sprinkled are half ironed.

That dish towels and common towels can be ironed just as well in half the time if folded together once as if ironed singly.

That sheets folded across, bringing the wide and narrow hems together, then folded again, then ironed across both sides, are finished quickly and look as well as if more time were spent on them.

That pillow-slips should be ironed lengthwise instead of crosswise if one wishes to iron wrinkles out instead of in.—Good Housekeeping.

Teacher—"Tommy, would you say that a man lies easy, or lies easily?" Tommy—"It depends on the man."

Forty Years After.

We climbed to the top of Goat Point Hill,
Sweet Kittie, my sweetheart, and I,
And watched the moon make stars on the waves,
And the dim white ships go by;
While a throne we made on a rough stone wall,
And the king and the queen were we,
And I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

The water was mad in the moonlight,
And the sand like gold where it shone,
And our hearts kept time to the music
As we sat in that splendor alone.
And Kitty's dear eyes twinkled brightly,
And Kitty's brown hair blew so free,
While I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

Last night we drove in our carriage,
To the wall at the top of the hill,
And though we're forty years older,
We're children and sweethearts still.
And we talked again of that moonlight
That danced so mad on the sea,
When I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

The throne on the wall was still standing,
But we sat in the carriage last night,
For a wall is too high for old people
Whose foreheads have linings of white,
And Kitty's waist measure is forty,
While mine is full fifty and three,
So I can't get my arm around Kitty,
Nor can she get both hers about me.

MRS. WILLIAMS'S WAY.

"'Taint much use spending your time getting that garden fixed up."

That was what Farmer Allen said to his new neighbor, as he stopped to talk one morning when on his way to town.

Mrs. Williams looked up in surprise at this remark, for her flowers had been her pride in her old home.

"You will find them small boys across the way can do a sight of mischief unless you keep your eye on them," he replied to her look of inquiry, as he drove away.

It caused Mrs. Willaims an uneasiness, however, and she resumed her work, humming as she bent over the young plants, or talking to Tabby who sat purring close beside her.

"Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!" sounded near by, and looking up Mrs. Williams saw four small boys marching towards her, and about to make their way straight across the newly-made garden. A frown gathered on her usually sunny face, and she was ready to order them from the yard with impatient words, when a happy idea suddenly came to her. Looking up brightly and smiling, she exclaimed as she took a position in front of them: "Halt!" They stopped as quickly as trainsd soldiers. "Right about face!" Every eye was turned towards this strange woman. "Rest arms!" The soiled flag was lowered, the wooden guns placed on the ground, and the drumsticks lay idly on the drumhead.

"I need a detatchment of brave soldiers, such as I know you to be, to keep guard over my flower garden," she said to the amazed boys. "Can I depend upon you to help me?"

They did not know what to say, so shuffled their feet uneasily about, and looked shamefacedly away. Only one voice answered faintly, "Yes, um."

They had not looked for such treatment as this from the new neighbor. Every one else spoke cross words to them and did not want them to come near their land.

They were not bad boys at heart, only full of mischief; but sometimes their fun had ended seriously for their neighbors, and now they were not willing that the boys should play near their homes.

"The dogs run across the garden and break down so many things, and I am afraid some boys might play about here and tread on the plants without thinking how sorry I would be," Mrs. Williams went on, as she tenderly dug about the roots of the tall white lily. "They look thirsty now. I wonder if my new company of soldiers would like to give them a drink?"

"Do flowers drink like folks? I never knew that, did you, Dan?" said Johnny, growing bolder and interested.

"Oh, yes?" answered Mrs. Williams. "Only they have a great many mouths to drink in the water. Away down at the roots, when the water reaches the little openings at the end, they suck in the moisture and it goes into the stems and to the buds, and makes the flowers look fresh and bright. There is Miss Pansy now almost asking me for a drink."

"Oh! can't I give her some water?" exclaimed little Dan, his face full of interest. "And I," "And I," said other voices.

"Yes, you may take the pail and bring some water, and I will get other cups, so you all may help. I take a knife and loosen the dry earth around the plants, so," Mrs. Williams said, showing the curious company how she did. "Then the air can go away down to the roots, and they can breathe better. Now, one of you can water the pansies; and my lilies, which I have just given air, need water, and the geraniums and pinks—flowers for each one of you." And Mrs. Williams talked on, speaking of the flowers as though they were children.

The boys listened as they worked, drinking in every word, their faces full of interest and eagerness.

"There! everything is done, and you may sit on the end of the piazza while I give my soldiers their rations," said Mrs. Williams, as she went into the house.

"What's rations?" whispered Johnny, as he nudged Dan.

"Don't know. Something good, I s'pose."

"My! Ain't she just nice?" Willie burst out.

At this moment Mrs. Williams came out with a plate of gingerbread and a basket of apples. Their eyes showed their gratefulness, and the sudden disappearance of the lunch evince their appreciation.

"Shoulder arms! March!" was the order given when Mrs. Williams had told the boys what a help they had been, and that she should be glad of their services again.

The drum beat a call, the flag was raised, the guns shouldered, and the company marched gravely out of the yard.

"My! but ain't she a good un?" said Willie, as soon as they reached the road.

"Well, I guess! We won't never let nothing happen to Mrs. Williams' flowers, will we, boys?" answered Dan.

"Let's give her three cheers!" The caps came off and a loud "Hurrah!" filled the air.

She had won their hearts. She need not have any fears of their giving her trouble.

That morning was only the beginning of the work of the small company, and while they worked Mrs. Williams talked of plant life, and taught them gentleness and kindness in the home and to each other, but all in such a quiet interesting way that they did not realize that they were being trained into thoughtful, manly boys, or that their work was anything but play.

"Who'd a thought that garden would look so fine with them boys at work there?" said Farmer Allen, as he stopped to talk to Mrs. Williams, after she had been at her new home about three months. "Guess they ain't so bad after all."

"Kindness does more with boys than driving, I have always found," she answered, as she turned to go into the house.—Jennie E. Breck, in Zion's Herald.

Not Without Care.

You may build you an elegant mansion
And fence it around with gold,
Set it with diamonds and rubies;
You may keep out the wind and the cold,
You may banish from it all intruders,
Have music and levity there;
You may shut out discord and envy,
But you cannot shut out care.

You may build a lowly cottage,
You may paint it all in white,
Grow vines and shade trees about it,
Let in only sunshine and light;
You may keep out the envy and malice
That wrinkle the faces we wear;
But you may keep love inside and contentment,
You cannot keep out care.

You may sing with the voice of an angel,
You may dance with a fairy's feet,
You may laugh till your laughter makes music
For everyone that you meet;
You may dance till your feet seem twinkling,
Till ths roses fade in your hair,
You may dance till the world dies of envy,
But you cannot drive away care.

You may smile in the faces of women
Who envy your very life,
As you hide from their eyes all the burdens,
The weariness, heartaches and strife;
You may live so the poor may adore you,
Live a life that the world calls fair;
You may let love be conquered by duty,
But you cannot live without care.

MARRIED AT A GALLOP.

"Well?" in a decidedly testy tone, was the greeting old Joel Gringer gave the tall young schoolmaster who stood fumbling the latch of the front gate and clearing his throat more for the sake of attracting attention than to remove any obstruction from his windpipe. "Well?"

But it wasn't well. That wasn't the right way to encourage the young man, and shrewd old Joel Gringer knew it. He wanted to make him go through the torture of telling him plainly that he had come to see his daughter, so that he could put an end to the thing then and there.

"Well?"

"H'm; I—I just wanted to know if Miss—h'm, h'm—is at home;" and the young fellow relieved his nervousness by digging up the gravel walk with his left toe at a rate that threatened to damage it worse than ten years' wear and tear.

"I thought your business was to teach the children to speak the English language, and here you can't do anything but hum and hawk. I'm at home and so is Growler there. Anything else?" and the steely eyes looked through the young man like a ferret's.

"No, sir," with a loud h'm: "I was just going up the road to Mr. Mason's and wanted to know if the family were all well—that's all." And the bashful young fellow seemed to have found his wits somewhere, for he turned coolly away, raising his cane as he did so, and striking the maple foliage over his head three sharp clips that made the leaves crack like a pistol.

And the old farmer's eyes were not so sharp as he prided himself that they were, or he might have seen the flutter of something white, three distinct things, from the narrowest opening in the blinds above, and have guessed why the young man was so easily satisfied.

Maybe love is blind to its own objects; but for dullness of vision give me, all the time, the eyes that are ever so sharp after a bargain, but have not the quickening of the divine passion to make them vigilant guards against the dangers that threaten to thwart love's plans. That's a long way of spelling Joel Gringer, but a true one.

He watched the straight, lithe young form until it seemed only a shadow against Neighbor Mason's barn, and then began banging the shutters with a vehemence that said to all: "Joel Gringer can take care of his own every time—leave him alone for that."

"Gone on to Mason's," was his gruff answer to his wife's questioning look. "Only wanted to inquire after the health of the family. S'pose he thinks the deestrick is assessed to pay him for goin' round an' doin' that—ha, ha! What would the funerals of two-thirds of this family count with him? Good at fractions, they say. We'll see how his fractions will work in this house. Much good it will do him to talk it over with John Mason, the old——"

"Sh——!" hissed cautiously into his ear, and a warning finger told him to leave uncomplimentary references to the neighbor—with whom he had been embroiled in a bitter lawsuit, and between whose farms a "devil's lane" prevented any joining of line fences, unsaid. "There's Mason's hired man again."

"Well?" (About twenty per cent more peppery than a moment ago.)

"The old man sent me over to say them there hogs o' yourn's been in the back cornfield agin, an' he won't turn 'em out till doomsday, nor let me. They're there yit, an' makin' the interest on five thousand dollars fly like sixty—that's what the old man 'lows the field'll fetch him. Better not take that there pup along, had ye? Hi? Wait till I can get out!"

The last exclamation was caused by preparations for unchaining the huge bulldog Growler; and Ben Stone made one leap over the fence, and was out of hearing before Joel Gringer could finish something about "going for witnesses."

"Said my say out. He'n the dog's witnesses enough, I reckon, to the scrimmage there'll be. I'm engaged in another case. Hogs ain't to my likin', Joel Gringer, though I do know how to drive 'em purty slick. Wouldn't a-taken that dog if I hadn't called it a pup and riccommended not. Laws! but there'll be smash to pay for to-night, sure's my name's Ben Stone."

Mrs. Gringer set her candle in the back kitchen window and her supper in the oven, and watched and waited for Joel's lantern to gleam down the lane leading to the back cornfield.

But it was gleaming in more fantastic forms farther down. It was playing hide and seek up and down dusty rows of corn, just in the milk and toothsome to the unruly swine. He and Growler were defending the rear, with Mrs. Gringer doing sentinel duty for them; but what of the front.

In a little hollow in the road, not twenty rods from Joel Gringer's house, the thick green turf of the wayside served as a cushion for the feet of two restive steeds that would stamp at the troublesome flies. Every nail was fast in their shoes and every strap buckled tight, while the nervy fellows—two of the most tireless travelers John Mason's stabled could boast—champed their bits restlessly and tossed their heads, throwing now and then a flake of foam that flashed with silvery brightness in the chance rays of moonlight, and—But what is that?

Adown the green, thorny breastwork that defended Joel Gringer's possessions from the wayside flittered a slight figure, crouching and halting, and then darting swiftly forward toward the little dell which seemed to be the rendezvous sought.

"Is that you, Nannie?" a hoarse, excited whisper met her a few rods distant from the horses.

"Sh——! Yes; I never saw a man who could help spoiling things by blunders. There, don't take it to heart, Richard; I won't scold you again, after all this until we are——"

"Married."

"Yes; but do not let us hurry! I'm afraid every minute that those hogs haven't done justice to the obstinacy of their nature, and father——"

"Well, give me your foot, and off we go. We'll show Joel Gringer whether I am competent to teach addition to a girl."

"And are you sure the preacher understands?"

"Sure, darling; he's to be at Brother Stilwell's tonight, on his way to the Kildeer appointment. Now, old fellows, do your best. Mr. Mason told me not to spare horseflesh."

As the clatter of the hoofs rang down the road two unusual night incidents might have been witnessed: the gleam of a light across the the fields, swaying and flickering as though carried by an excited, unsteady hand; and a man leaning against the door of John Mason's stables, whittling a stick and musing over something which evidently pleased him much. "He, he! I never helped take them out of here. Can't prove it by me who's takin' to stealin'; h'aint I been behind the haystack tryin' to hammer the bung in that barrel? An' it won't stay, but it made an awful racket. There's one consolation; if them there hosses have to go fur, they've been well fed an' every shoe is as sound as a trigger—ha, ha!" And Ben Stone shut up his knife and went in to inform his master that as likely as not somebody had stolen something or other about the place, but it couldn't be proved by him.

"Shut up and go to bed with you, and don't answer questions until you're asked," was the curt reply, with this addition in an undertone: "I I—would't begrudge the best span I've got to get even with old Gringer once more."

"Patter, patter! click, click! neck to neck and nostril to nostril, along ridge and through wooded hollow skimmed the two fleet coursers like some well mated birds of flight. But few words were exchanged, but two pairs of human ears strained, minute by minute, to catch the first sound of expected pursuit.

Out of another valley and up to the top of another ridge they go steadily, panting and steaming. They paused a second to breathe, and look and listen.

Away back on the last ridge, a mile or more away, the moonlight glistens on something bright—a silver-plated buckle or saddle decoration—and then there comes a clear, ringing sound, as when steel strikes flint!

"He's coming! Oh, hurry, Dick! We cannot reach Mr. Stilwell's in time; it's——"

"Three miles yet, and——"

"You know Fleetwood's gait; Mr. Mason never had a horse that could outrun him. What shall we do? Oh, if only we were——"

"Married and I could call you my own; then I would not need run a step, but could defend my right to you in the eyes of the law. Listen! What's that ahead?"

"The Corners are just down there, you know, and someone may be coming on the cross-road."

"An idea! That is the direction from which the preacher comes. What if it should be—But, no; he's going straight ahead of us. Yes, there he turns! Whip up, and let's overtake him, whoever the rider be!"

And the two blown and jaded horses were urged afresh.

A quarter of a mile; half a mile; three-quarters. The sound of hoofs in both directions are growing distinct. Oh, so near behind!

"Call him, Richard! He may stop. Oh, if it only is!"

"But your father will hear, too, and hasten! Hello, there! Wait!"

"Who is it?"

"I can't be mistaken in that voice, Dick. He has sopped. Now——"

In a moment the overtaken party was seen, sure enough, to be the very preacher they were riding hard and fast to find. But while the situation was being explained the footsteps of the pursuing horse were heard close by, and in a minute another "Hello!" rang on their ears, hoarse and infuriated: "Stop! stop, I command you Nannie, your father tells you to stop! Young man, I'll horsewhip you on the spot if you don't give me my daughter!"

The two looked at each other in despair. There would scarcely be time to begin the ceremony. Must they be torn asunder when so near the goal? The thought made the girl turn pale, and she almost sank helpless in her lover's arms.

But the preacher, backwoodsman that he was, was a man of wit and resources, and of heart as well. "Keep on," said he, quietly, "and ride as fast as you can. I will follow. Join your hands and sit firm in the saddle when I tell you. I have it on the tip of my tongue. The Lord please, you'll be man and wife before that horse brushes his nose against yours."

Clatter, clatter—clink, clink! rang the sharp hoof-beats! Nearer and nearer they came together; but the words rolled off the preacher's lips, as he rose and sank in his stirrups, faster than the speed of the racers.

It was a race of tongue against hoof!

The wild, and mad pelting of the iron-shod feet were pitted against heart-throbs and brain-pulses and trembling lips!

The strain upon John Mason's horse-flesh, and its fleeter competitor, whose master spared him neither pain nor life, was telling; but the tension on two hearts that were tortured by suspense was still more terrific.

Nearer and nearer sped Fleetwood, until his horse's panting almost drowned the preacher's words! But a few rods separated them!

"Join your hands," came the sharp command.

"Halt, I command you, in the name of——"

"Put spurs! Forasmuch as Richard W. Anderson and Annie Gringer have consented to——"

"Hold up there! I'm an officer of the law!" demanded another voice, drowning the preacher's "forasmuch." But the wild wedding party dashed forward, now almost covered by the dust the others raised; and the preacher's lips worked fast.

"In the name of the Father——"

"Halt, or you'll suffer the penal——"

"And of the Son——"

"Give me my daughter, you villain!"

"And of the Holy Ghost, I pronounce that they are husband and wife. Amen."

And love had won the race!

There was a halt, and explanations that disarmed the man of the law and sent old Joel Gringer back to his belated supper with vein cursings of his luck.

The supper at Stilwell's was flavored with pleasanter reflections; and Ben Stone had many an opportunity to wonder aloud, in his sly way, "How in tarnation them hogs ever did git into old man Mason's cornfield jest when Dick Anderson wanted to steal Joel Gringer's daughter."—J. F. Cowan, in Frank Leslie's Monthly.

"Ah, nevah was glaid t' see cops in er pokah-room till las' night. Jackson held fo'h aices, Johnson fo'h queens, Ketchum haid fo'h jacks, I haid fo'h kings, Randolph held fo'h tens and Pullit held a royal flush, an' uv co'se we all held razzers. De brack undertaiker dat stacked de kairds tried t' hold de door, but de cops broke in and rescued us."

CAME TOGETHER.

Peculiar things sometimes are told into the ears of Lewiston lawyers. They are a sort of father confessor for certain classes. Thursday afternoon a woman from the country climbed slowly up the stairs of Lyceum hall block and rapped ceremoniously upon the door of Joel Bean's office. Squire Bean was talking with a farmer who had come in a minute before, and he requested the lady to be seated in the outer office, while he listened to the man's story, told excitedly in the inner room. It was rather a commonplace story, and amusing to the lawyer, but not to the man who told it, for he was terribly in earnest.

"No, sir, Susie won't pay no 'tention to anything I say. We've been married nigh on to forty-four years, and we've children of our own grown up and married. The farm down there has my best manhood tilled into it with the plow and harrow, and not a spear of grass grows but it is better for the years of labor I put into it. Our crops wuz not extra fine in them first years, for it wuz a run out farm, and we wuz poor. But she never complained in them days. She wuz a little thing, but Lord! how she worked! But now she don't give me no comfort at all. And it's all because I happen to believe in preadamite men. Do you? She says it's contrary to the Bible and all that. Now I'm a-going to let her get a divorce or I'm a-going to get one myself. She shall have half the property, but she shan't call me a heathen—me who has led the prayer meeting for years, and sez my prayers. I don't believe God made the earth in a million years and then snapped the fingers and sez 'Nebecunezer' backward, and the man sprung into life from the dust of the street. I'd sooner think he did it 'cording to rule as he'd a orter."

"Reuben!" came a high soprano voice from the other room, and in the door stood Susie, who could not stand it any longer.

Reuben looked surprised, but plucked up courage and coughed.

"The good Lord might a made you from a monkey, but I never wuz. My folks are old New England bluebloods," she said.

The lawyer looked interested, but did not smile. "Be seated, madam, please," he said. "Your home must be a pleasant one. Your husband tells me that you and he have worked long and hard to make it so—in fact, have put your best life's blood into it. Is it so? Yes. And who will live there when you separate? Perhaps some of your neighbors may like to buy it."

The man and woman looked indignantly into each other's faces.

"Neighbors, indeed. There hain't one of 'em got such a farm."

"Oh, well; it will have to be sold, of course. I suppose your children agree to this separation. It won't make them feel bad to see the old farm where they were born sold?"

"I ain't thought of that," murmured the woman.

"Nor I, nuther," said the man.

"And you, too. What will you do? Go and live with them, or will you work out somewhere? Could you do housework, madam?"

The woman's eyes flashed. The man suddenly straightened up and set his teeth. "No wife of mine shall ever work out!" he exclaimed.

Her face softened and the lawyer saw it. "Did you ever say that before you married her? She's been a good wife to you all these years! Were you ever sick and has she not cared for you tenderly?"

Tears glistened in the sunken blue eyes and trickled down to his wizened beard. "Who'd take care of you now if you were ill?" pursued the lawyer in a quiet voice.

The woman let down her veil and the farmer said, "I'll come in and see you again," and offering his arm to his wife he tenderly showed her out and helped her into his battered wagon at the door of the block. As they drove down the street there was no room between them for a third person on the seat.—Lewiston, Me., Journal.

HOW TO MAKE CALLS.

What do you find to talk about when making calls? Is it some latest bit of scandal, some choicest story of an old gossip?

Don't gossip; it is worse than useless.

Let us talk over what you can find to tell your friend with profit to you both.

There is that pleasant trip you took last week. You can tell what you enjoyed about that—what you enjoyed. Do not hunt up and talk over the unpleasant things unless you are very positive some one will be benefitted thereby.

That book you read was delightful; perhaps it will please and delight your friend. Kindly offer the loan of it to her. If she has read it, compare notes with her on its different characters, its plot, etc. You will be sure to get some new ideas.

Perhaps you have learned a new way of doing some bit of work; it may help your friend as it has helped you.

Do not tell the unkind remarks you heard about an acquaintance. Tell all the pleasant things you have heard.

If some one has told you some pleasant thing about your hostess which it would please her to know, tell her; it will not be flattery.

Meet any talk which promises to be unfair or unpleasant to others with words amounting to "We do not know all," "We cannot tell what one might do in her place," and change the subject as soon as possible.

In the meantime your friend will have helped you in her own way; you need never fear to carry the talk on by yourself.

Strive to have your conversation mean something. Use all your chances for improvement which come to you.

Carry with you when you start on your round of calls—you need it always—a heart filled with charity, and your calls will be successful. You may not be wise or brilliant, but you will find yourself everywhere welcome.—The Call.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER

That a clean apron worn while hanging the clothes helps keep them clean.

That a pair of white gloves or mittens are a comfort to hands taken from hot suds to hang clothes in zero weather; also a close-fitting jacket and hood to keep one from catching cold.

That the line, as soon as its duty is ended, should be reeled up and placed in a bag until next time.

That clothes when brought in should be separated and folded at once; if allowed to lie together, many wrinkles accumulate.

That clothes carefully folded and sprinkled are half ironed.

That dish towels and common towels can be ironed just as well in half the time if folded together once as if ironed singly.

That sheets folded across, bringing the wide and narrow hems together, then folded again, then ironed across both sides, are finished quickly and look as well as if more time were spent on them.

That pillow-slips should be ironed lengthwise instead of crosswise if one wishes to iron wrinkles out instead of in.—Good Housekeeping.

Teacher—"Tommy, would you say that a man lies easy, or lies easily?" Tommy—"It depends on the man."

Forty Years After.

We climbed to the top of Goat Point Hill,
Sweet Kittie, my sweetheart, and I,
And watched the moon make stars on the waves,
And the dim white ships go by;
While a throne we made on a rough stone wall,
And the king and the queen were we,
And I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

The water was mad in the moonlight,
And the sand like gold where it shone,
And our hearts kept time to the music
As we sat in that splendor alone.
And Kitty's dear eyes twinkled brightly,
And Kitty's brown hair blew so free,
While I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

Last night we drove in our carriage,
To the wall at the top of the hill,
And though we're forty years older,
We're children and sweethearts still.
And we talked again of that moonlight
That danced so mad on the sea,
When I sat with my arm about Kitty,
And she with her arm about me.

The throne on the wall was still standing,
But we sat in the carriage last night,
For a wall is too high for old people
Whose foreheads have linings of white,
And Kitty's waist measure is forty,
While mine is full fifty and three,
So I can't get my arm around Kitty,
Nor can she get both hers about me.

MRS. WILLIAMS'S WAY.

"'Taint much use spending your time getting that garden fixed up."

That was what Farmer Allen said to his new neighbor, as he stopped to talk one morning when on his way to town.

Mrs. Williams looked up in surprise at this remark, for her flowers had been her pride in her old home.

"You will find them small boys across the way can do a sight of mischief unless you keep your eye on them," he replied to her look of inquiry, as he drove away.

It caused Mrs. Williams an uneasiness, however, and she resumed her work, humming as she bent over the young plants, or talking to Tabby who sat purring close beside her.

"Rub-a-dub-dub! Rub-a-dub-dub!" sounded near by, and looking up Mrs. Williams saw four small boys marching towards her, and about to make their way straight across the newly-made garden. A frown gathered on her usually sunny face, and she was ready to order them from the yard with impatient words, when a happy idea suddenly came to her. Looking up brightly and smiling, she exclaimed as she took a position in front of them: "Halt!" They stopped as quickly as trainsd soldiers. "Right about face!" Every eye was turned towards this strange woman. "Rest arms!" The soiled flag was lowered, the wooden guns placed on the ground, and the drumsticks lay idly on the drumhead.

"I need a detatchment of brave soldiers, such as I know you to be, to keep guard over my flower garden," she said to the amazed boys. "Can I depend upon you to help me?"

They did not know what to say, so shuffled their feet uneasily about, and looked shamefacedly away. Only one voice answered faintly, "Yes, um."

They had not looked for such treatment as this from the new neighbor. Every one else spoke cross words to them and did not want them to come near their land.

They were not bad boys at heart, only full of mischief; but sometimes their fun had ended seriously for their neighbors, and now they were not willing that the boys should play near their homes.

"The dogs run across the garden and break down so many things, and I am afraid some boys might play about here and tread on the plants without thinking how sorry I would be," Mrs. Williams went on, as she tenderly dug about the roots of the tall white lily. "They look thirsty now. I wonder if my new company of soldiers would like to give them a drink?"

"Do flowers drink like folks? I never knew that, did you, Dan?" said Johnny, growing bolder and interested.

"Oh, yes?" answered Mrs. Williams. "Only they have a great many mouths to drink in the water. Away down at the roots, when the water reaches the little openings at the end, they suck in the moisture and it goes into the stems and to the buds, and makes the flowers look fresh and bright. There is Miss Pansy now almost asking me for a drink."

"Oh! can't I give her some water?" exclaimed little Dan, his face full of interest. "And I," "And I," said other voices.

"Yes, you may take the pail and bring some water, and I will get other cups, so you all may help. I take a knife and loosen the dry earth around the plants, so," Mrs. Williams said, showing the curious company how she did. "Then the air can go away down to the roots, and they can breathe better. Now, one of you can water the pansies; and my lilies, which I have just given air, need water, and the geraniums and pinks—flowers for each one of you." And Mrs. Williams talked on, speaking of the flowers as though they were children.

The boys listened as they worked, drinking in every word, their faces full of interest and eagerness.

"There! everything is done, and you may sit on the end of the piazza while I give my soldiers their rations," said Mrs. Williams, as she went into the house.

"What's rations?" whispered Johnny, as he nudged Dan.

"Don't know. Something good, I s'pose."

"My! Ain't she just nice?" Willie burst out.

At this moment Mrs. Williams came out with a plate of gingerbread and a basket of apples. Their eyes showed their gratefulness, and the sudden disappearance of the lunch evince their appreciation.

"Shoulder arms! March!" was the order given when Mrs. Williams had told the boys what a help they had been, and that she should be glad of their services again.

The drum beat a call, the flag was raised, the guns shouldered, and the company marched gravely out of the yard.

"My! but ain't she a good un?" said Willie, as soon as they reached the road.

"Well, I guess! We won't never let nothing happen to Mrs. Williams' flowers, will we, boys?" answered Dan.

"Let's give her three cheers!" The caps came off and a loud "Hurrah!" filled the air.

She had won their hearts. She need not have any fears of their giving her trouble.

That morning was only the beginning of the work of the small company, and while they worked Mrs. Williams talked of plant life, and taught them gentleness and kindness in the home and to each other, but all in such a quiet interesting way that they did not realize that they were being trained into thoughtful, manly boys, or that their work was anything but play.

"Who'd a thought that garden would look so fine with them boys at work there?" said Farmer Allen, as he stopped to talk to Mrs. Williams, after she had been at her new home about three months. "Guess they ain't so bad after all."

"Kindness does more with boys than driving, I have always found," she answered, as she turned to go into the house.—Jennie E. Breck, in Zion's Herald.

THE CATTLE SHOW.

A Good Exhibit Tuesday—Rain Spoils Wednesday's Programme.

While the 43d annual exhibition of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society Tuesday and Wednesday was disappointing in that the rain the last day kept away the crowd which was planning to attend, and also the horses which would otherwise have been there, in many respects it was the best fair in the history of the organization. The weather the first day could not have been better, and the programme was carried out as planned with the exception of the balloon ascension. A contract had been made with Prof. Ed Hutchison, who has been doing good work in this section, and no longer ago than last Friday gave an ascent in Clinton, but for some reason yet to be explained he did not appear, and sent no word in excuse of his action. The society greatly regrets this fact, as it has been unfortunate in this line in the two previous years and knows that some will say that it was never intended that the balloon should go up; the secretary, however, has the correspondence to show that the contract was made and that the balloonist agreed to be here.

TUESDAY—FIRST DAY.

As usual the first day was devoted to cattle, and the exhibit was the finest ever on the grounds. Never before have so many or such choice blooded animals been shown. Especially fine were the Jerseys shown by O. E Bliss of Monson and C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, the Devons of H. E. Wallis of Holland, the Durhams of the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. and H. A. Rindge of Monson, the Dutch Belted by W. N. Flynt of Monson, and the Holsteins by L. E. Wells of Brimfield, these being the largest exhibitors in these classes; in all there were 60 thoroughbred cows and heifers. Some unusually fine animals were also shown in grades.

There were some choice breeding and milch cows among the eighteen animals shown in this class, while the herds of miscellaneous neat stock and milch cows were more numerous and much larger than last year.

There were only four entries in the class for working oxen five years old and over, to be tested on a cart with a load of 3000 pounds, C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield carrying off first prize. The increased premiums for draft and farm horses brought out three pairs in the former class and eight in the latter. In draft horses those belonging to E. J. Foskit of Monson carried off first honors, and in farm horses O. E. Bradway of Monson took first premium. J. M. Allen took first prize on single farm horses.

The first thing after dinner was the members' trotting class, to see which would finish the mile nearest to 4½ minutes. There were six entries, and they all came down the finish neck and neck, as will be seen by the following summary:

G. C. Flynt, Monson,	4.30
H. T. Bolles, Wilbraham,	4.31¼
G. W. Ely, Palmer,	4.28½
Dr. S. H. Ellery, Palmer,	4.28
C. E. Fuller, Palmer,	4.27½
E. J. Foskit, Monson,	4.26

The 2.50 and 2.45 races were called next, and although the former was finished in three heats and the latter in four, the interest of the crowd was held to the end, each heat being a horse race, with no walk-overs and no "soft snaps." The summaries follow:

Time, 2.30½, 2.29¾, 2.29¼.

Between the heats of these races eight carrier pigeons belonging to Henry Connell of Ware and twelve owned by F. D. Beach of Monson were liberated from the upper portion of the judges' stand, and after circling about for a time started for their homes. One of Mr. Beach's birds recently flew from Buffalo, N. Y., to Monson. The occupants of the grand stand were also amused by a race between a donkey and a goat, in which the former proved rather too much for the latter. Master Junior Flynt's span — a Shetland pony and a jack-ass — was also exhibited on the track hitched to a light, small buckboard.

WEDNESDAY—SECOND DAY.

The skies were lowery Wednesday morning and rain commenced to fall about seven o'clock, a most unfortunate occurence for the success of the day's programme. This was to have been Monson day—Monson people had greatly interested themselves in the success of the day's doings, and proposed to be present in large numbers; but the rain held steadily on until about eleven o'clock, so of course the would-have-been crowd stayed at home. The rain also prevented the appearance of the many fine horses which had been entered, and but few animals were shown. About noon the skies cleared up and the races were run as advertised. These were the 2.36 and the 2.26 classes, and proved even more interesting and exciting than those of the day before, being pronounced the best ever seen on the track. There were no particularly "soft snaps" in these races either, and the winners had to fight for their positions in every heat. There was some reckless driving in the second heat of the 2.36 class, and in consequence "Red Elm" was set back to seventh place, after finishing third. In one heat the drivers proved particularly annoying in the matter of scoring ahead of the pole horse, and after three otherwise good starts had been spoiled by their "monkeying" Starter Quimby notified the drivers that it would cost them $10 apiece the next time they came ahead of the pole horse, and they made the prettiest start of the day on the next attempt. The summaries:

The judges were H. B. Quimby of Worcester, starter, H. P. Holden and J. F. Holbrook of Palmer. During the races a dozen carrier pigeons belonging to H. C. Palmer of Worcester were released. All of these birds have flown from 100 to 500 miles, one of them coming from Washington, D. C., last week.

In the Hall.

Taken altogether, the hall exhibit was the best the society has ever seen. The lower hall was crowded, and many of the departments usually seen there were moved up stairs. The displays by the Granges attracted much attention, and it was regretted that the other two which had entered did not make a display. There were large and fine displays of potatoes and fruit, especially apples. In many of the departments more than the usual number of entries were made. In the upper hall the display of fancy articles, though not as large as last year, showed that hours of careful labor had been spent in making them. Some of these were doilies exhibited by Mrs. E. L. Davis, Mrs. L. E. Chandler, Miss Blanche Hellyar, Mrs. E. Green and Miss Idella Holbrook of Palmer; also crocheted mats by Mrs. F. N. Carpenter, sofa pillow made with cigar ribbons, and knit lace on apron by Miss M. Warner, and knit lace by Mrs. S. Moore. There was a large exhibit of silk, woolen and knit bed quilts, and various kinds of rugs. Miss Effie Shaw showed some beautiful decorated china, as also did Mrs. L. E. Chandler and Miss Hadley. The latter had the only tapestry and oil paintings on exhibition. A pencil drawing by Harry Giffin was very nicely done for a boy of thirteen. The large display of potted plants and cut flowers was very fine, F. D. Rogers of Monson having the largest collection of cut flowers, among which were phlox, petunias, pansies, sweet peas, asters, etc. S. Blodgett, the florist, had a fine collection of pinks, and Mrs. M. G. Moore of Brimfield seven varieties of petunias. Among the other exhibitors of cut flowers were A. B. Howard of Belchertown, Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Mrs. F. D. Orcutt and Mrs. William Merriam of Palmer Mrs. E. Brown's Japan lilies and LaFrance roses were greatly admired. Alice Carpenter of Monson, who competed for the special premium offered by O. P. Allen, had twenty-one varieties of wild flowers. A collection of thirteen varieties of fuchsias belonging to Mrs. E. Brown looked very thrifty, as did Mrs. C. A. Brown's six varieties of begonias, also a sword fern and case of cottonwood fern, and a very large begonia of Mrs. M. G. Moore of Brimfield. J. M. Bruce of Springfield occupied the front end of the hall with Mehlin and Trowbridge pianos and several organs, some of these instruments being played on nearly all day. Mr. Merrick of Monson also exhibited sewing machines and various kinds of excellent work, which showed what can be done on these machines. He spent most of the time stitching ruffles of colored cloth on fans to give away.

In the lower hall a part of the center was reserved for the Monson and Warren Granges, and the skilful arrangement of the articles placed on exhibition added much to the attractiveness of the hall. They had a fine display of fancy articles, cake, canned fruit, vegetables, fruit, etc. In the Monson display special mention should be made of a child's dress 80 years old, and also in the Warren display of a sampler made by Mrs. Madison Weaver's mother, of above place, when only 10 years old, the sampler being now 72 years old, and another made by same person in 1826; also a tidy of Nellie Bridges, the linen of which was woven 75 years ago by her great grandmother. All these articles seemed to be in excellent condition. The Monson Grange, however, took the first premium, and the Warren Grange the second.

G. H. Fisherdick of Palmer took first premium on the greatest variety of garden vegetables, having a collection of 92 varieties. H. D. Geer of Belchertown had a fine lot of potatoes, there being 40 varieties, while O. D. Wells showed 36. Noticeable among the other exhibits of vegetables were those of H. D. Vaille and O. E. Bradway of Monson, A. B. Howard of Belchertown, and G. W. Lent of Palmer. F. E. Clark of Wilbraham displayed 18 varieties of grasses. Fine collections of fruit were exhibited by A. B. Howard of Belchertown, E. N. Walker, F. H. Johnson, G. E. & W. M. Tucker of Monson, A. J. Blanchard of Wilbraham and J. A. Palmer of Palmer. The bread, cake, honey, canned fruit, butter and cheese all looked very appetizing.

THE latest regarding the A. P. A. and the nomination for governor is that the order will try to rush through the convention the name of William H. Haile of Springfield, ex-Lieutenant Governor, without asking his consent or consulting him in the matter. Which, if true, shows that the managers of the movement do not know the man they are dealing with. Mr. Haile would be the last of men to have anything to do with a nomination made in such a way. And after all, the strength which the order is likely to exert in the convention may be reckoned as a decidedly doubtful quantity. The leaders do not seem to know exactly what they want; hardly a week passes but brings out some new plan of action in the gubernatorial question.

HARD luck seems to follow the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society in the matter of the date for its annual fair, rain being pretty sure to fall on one of its two exhibition days. The show this year gave unusual promise of excellence, and on the first day the exhibit of cattle rivaled that of many more pretentious fairs, but the rain of Wednesday prevented the attendance of the fine horses which had been entered and promised. The tide must turn sometime, however, and already plans are being made for next fall's fair.

THE Prohibitionists nominated their state ticket at Boston Wednesday, as follows: For governor, Dea. Edward Kendall of Cambridge; lieutenant-governor, Edward Rogers of Lee; secretary of state, Willard O. Wiley of Beverly; treasurer, Wilbur M. Purington of Williamsburg; attorney-general, Frank Forbush of Natick; auditor, Herman T. Regnall of Attleboro.

IT is conceded that Brimfield has the right to name the candidate for representative in the 10th Hampden district, and although there are several who would like to spend the winter at the Hub, the outlook is that the nomination will go to Porter A. Parker, a long-time resident of the town and a man well known in this section. If elected he will ably represent the district.

Sweethearts, Gin and Bullets.

Rodolphus Scoverra, a Three Rivers Pole, called on his sweetheart Tuesday evening at the house of Martin Hollis, another Pole, where she was boarding, taking with him John Doktor, a mutual friend of all parties. Doktor was sent out for stimulants by Scoverra, who furnished the money, and gin was procured. Later there was more gin and a bottle of wine, and still later more gin. All hands partook of the liquid refreshments the first two times, but when the "growler" put in its third appearance Hollis objected, as Scoverra was getting noisy, and suggested that he had better go home and go to bed. This made Scoverra mad, and after smashing his glass he invited Hollis out of doors with him, where nothing more serious than words took place, and Hollis returned to the house, locking the door. Scoverra stood on the steps trying to get in and shake hands and make up; Doktor concluded that he would go home about this time, and when the door was opened Scoverra attempted,to crowd in. He was finally put out and then Hollis grabbed a revolver and fired through the door, the ball striking Scoverra in the left side just above the hip bone. With some friends he walked to the office of Dr. Boulay, who on viewing the wound decided that it might be a serious one, and called Officer Manning, who arrested Hollis. The ball could not be found, and it was uncertain what direction it had taken, the patient's chances of recovery depending on its course, but it is now known that it went back and down; the wounded man is getting along finely, and will be out in a few days unless something unexpected sets in. Hollis had a hearing in the district court yesterday, and was bound over to October 3d, bail being fixed at $1100, bank books for that amount being accepted as security.

School Matters.

The school committee held a meeting last Saturday afternoon and decided, on account of the large number of pupils in the primary department at Three Rivers, to open another room there, and Miss M. S. Merrill has been engaged as teacher. In accordance with the new flag law, flags have been furnished all school buildings, and will be displayed as the law requires.

Many new books have been purchased and distributed during the past two weeks, especially in the high school and upper grammar grades, to replace the old and wornout ones.

Drawing has been begun in all grades of schools. Miss Mahoney, the drawing teacher, devotes Thursday and Friday to the schools of Palmer, teaching the remainder of the week in North Brookfield. No music teacher has been engaged yet; the additional teacher required in the school at Three Rivers will probably use up the appropriation, making music impossible for the present.

One of the most important of recent actions by the committee was the vote that hereafter pupils in the grammar schools will be graduated from that grade and receive a diploma, the diplomas being certificates of admission to the high school. This will do away with entrance examinations in the future, and is a move in the right direction. The change is due to the new system, and will be greatly appreciated by the pupils, especially those who leave school at the end of the grammar course, as many do; under the new order of things they will have a diploma to show the extent of their school course, whereas heretofore they have had nothing.

House And Barn Burned.

The house and barn of John Newman at Palmer Center were burned Tuesday forenoon about 10 o'clock. The fire broke out in the upper part of the barn and had gained considerable headway when discovered. Mr. Newman was away from home, only Mrs. Newman, her sister, and the hired girl being about the premises. The neighbors responded to the call for help, and everything was removed from the house, which was doomed from the first, as the two were connected. Word was sent to this village for help, but the fire apparatus was not sent up, as experience has proved that no water is to be had there. The loss is about $5000, insured as follows: House $1000, furniture $1000, barn $500, contents $500, all through the Fitch agency. The origin of the fire is difficult to conjecture; there had been no one in the barn as far as known since the horses were fed by Richard Wright in the morning, and as it was then daylight he had no light; in fact he never took a light into the barn, no matter how late at night or how dark. Spontaneous combustion among the hay is suggested, but as the hay had been in the barn over two months, and was thoroughly dried three days before housing, that seems hardly probable.

It isn't often that Overseer of the Poor Merriam gets taken in; he rather prides himself that he can tell whether the applicant for aid is deserving or not, but he made one slip the other day, and is out a supper, lodging and breakfast and a dollar in money as the result. A young fellow applied to have his stage fare paid to Southbridge, where he said his mother lived. He had been in the hospital at Springfield for seven weeks, and was so weak he feared he might not have strength to walk so far. He told the name of the street on which his mother lived, and the man of whom she rented the house, also the names of the neighbors, and apparently knew everybody in the place. He was well acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Weeks at the hospital in Springfield, and also Mr. Lewis, and when he was discharged from the hospital they had paid his fare to Palmer. He told a good plausible story, and had his names of people down so fine that Mr. Merriam took his word for it all, and now knows that the fellow has no people in Southbridge.

Possibly a Murder—A Negro Stabbed.

William Pierce stabbed William Andrews, perhaps fatally, shortly after midnight yesterday. The two, are both colored men, and with others had attended the Palmer fair, and upon their return went to the house of Mrs. Roxanna Wallace on the "Plains." Andrews, who is a hard character, had been drinking, and was disposod to be quarrelsome. Finally a dispute arose and Andrews, to emphasize his remarks, which were somewhat abusive, struck Pierce with a broom-handle. This, according to Pierce's story, made him "just a little mad," and catching up a jack-knife which lay on the table near, thrust it into Andrews's abdomen. "And when it began to hurt he began to holler, and let me alone," Pierce said. Dr. G. E. Fuller was called to dress the wound, which he considers a serious one. The indications are that the stomach was cut into, but it is impossible to tell definitely the extent of the injury for two or three days. Pierce went in the morning and gave himself up to the authorities. He was taken before the court at Palmer and held to await developments. Mr. Johnson, who was one of the party, is disposed to make light of the affair; in fact shows very plainly that his sympathies are entirely with Pierce, who is a man of 21 years, large and strong-looking, having a pleasant face. Andrews is about 26, short, but powerfully built, though deformed. It will be remembered that he has served several sentences in jail.

A Woman's Strange Experience.

Mrs. Adelia Adams, who had such a strange experience some four weeks ago, lying for several hours in a nightmare, had an attack last Saturday which was probably due to the same cause, a pressure on the brain, but which was totally different. While about the house in the morning she was seized with a numbness which rapidly increased until she fell into a half conscious state, apparently in great agony, but Dr. Jackson, who was called in both instances, said that she probably did not suffer. She came out of the attack in about an hour and a half. Mrs. Adams is 87 years old, and lives with her son, G. W. Adams.

Enough Pearline has been sold to put a girdle of it round about the earth, and a good deal over. Hundreds of millions of packages, in the last fifteen years, have made washing easy for millions of different women. This suggests a question—to the timid women who think that because Pearline saves so much work it must do some harm. Could Pearline have been sold and used in this way and for this time, if it were dangerous?

And another, addressed to all women: Isn't it better to be sure with Pearline, the original washing compound which has been thus proved, rather than to risk it with some imitation about which you know nothing? 375 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

The other night a St. Louis policeman arrested a somnambulist who was wandering about the streets in his nightdress. When the somnambulist awoke, he exclaimed: "Surely, you are not going to arrest, me; I am not responsible, as I am a somnambulist." "I don't care what church you are a member of," said the officer. "You can't walk the streets of St. Louis in your shirt-tail if you belong to all the churches in the city."

A. M. Bailey, a well known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required.

While in Chicago Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and a half dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly.

A NICE NEW LINE OF SAMPLES OF FOLDERS. FOR DANCE PROGRAMS, INVITATIONS, MENUS, ETC. t received at the JOURNAL Office.

To Go-swimming.

There's a red-letter page that is brighter for its age,
And the finger-marks of Time are never dimming;
It has very much to say of a hot summer day,
When we fellows ran away, to go a-swimming,
Creeping through lengthy grass while dancing shadows pass,
Threading deep haunted woods where the squirrel stows his goods,
And birds nested high teach their little ones to fly,
Where the grape cluster shines in a wilderness of vines,
Where are mossy pillows green not a slumberer hath seen,
And the flowers grow in a blossom-drift of snow;
It was maybe twice as gay that we felt a bit astray,
When we fellows ran away, to go a-swimming!

And the river and the pool were so heaven-like and cool,
With fresh baby-breezes over-skimming;
Everything well contrived for a pleasure short-lived,
When we runaways arrived to go a-swimming
Now all ready—now a plunge! and our bodies lik a sponge
That unduly dry has been, seem to drink the water in;
We are groping in the caves of the cold, silent waves,
We are climbing in the air, flinging torrents from our hair,
And we struggle to and fro through the ripples' gentle flow,
And we duels gaily fight with the plashing waters bright,
On each other, through the fray, flinging barrels-full of spray;
Oh the mad and merry day we went a-swimming!

Now the moral of this rhyme, is for youth's careless time:
Full of good, sober counsel it is brimming:
In your labor or your play, your superiors obey;
Don't you ever run away to go a-swimming.
Though the flower-jewels shine with a radiance divine,
And the daisy blossoms creep in the meadows half asleep,
And the clouds are like a high floating castle in the sky,
And the branches dumb wink and beckon you to come,
And a shady nook you know where the dainty billows flow,
Whose delicious quiet charms would fold you in their arms,
Be obedient while you may; on the shore of duty stay;
Don't you ever run away to go a-swimming!

THE PARTICULAR SERVICE OF OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Whittier did much more than Holmes to soften the Puritan theology, but Holmes did vastly more than Whittier to soften the Puritan temper of the community. And here was his most characteristic work. He was neither stoic nor ascetic; neither indifferent to life's sweet and pleasant things, nor, while hankering for oheir possession, did he repress his noble rage and freeze the genial currents of his soul. His was "an undisguised enjoyment of earthly comforts"; a happy confidence in the excellence and glory of our present life; a persuasion, as one has said, that "if God made us, then he also meant us," and he held to these things so earnestly, so pleasantly, so cheerily, that he could not help communicating them to every thing he wrote. They pervade his books and poems like a most subtile essence, and his readers took them in with every breath. Many entered into his labors, and some, no doubt, did more than he to save what was best in the Puritan conscience while softening what was worst in the Puritan temper and what was most terrible in the Puritan theology. But it does not appear that any one else did so much as Dr. Holmes to change the social temper of New England, to make it less harsh and joyless, and to make easy for his fellow-countrymen the transition from the old things to the new. And it may be that here was the secret, in good part, of that great and steadily increasing affection which went out to him in the later lustrums of his life. It was recognized, or felt with dim half-consciousness, that here was one who had made life better worth the living, who removed the interdict on simple happiness and pure delight, who had taken an intolerable burden from the heart and bade it swell with gladness in the good world and the good God. Whatever the secret, it is certain that no man among us was more widely loved, or will be more sincerely mourned.—John W. Chadwick, in the November Forum.

SOME HISTORICAL ANECDOTES.

"Would to God that night or Blucher would come!" exclaimed the duke of Wellington, as his anxious eye surveyed the dark masses of Napoleon's forces.

"Night will be here in three hours and 11 minutes, your grace," said his chief of seaff, consulting his watch.

"Oh, I ain't so particular about night," responded the Iron duke.

"All is lost save honor," exclaimed Francis I, as he looked upon his defeated army.

"How about honor?" asked a sorrowing courtier.

"Oh we didn't have any of that."

"Soldiers," exclaimed Napoleon, "40 centuries look down on you from the pyramids."

"Oh, they look down on us, do they?" asked Murat. "Well, I should think 40 centuries on top of the pyramids would feel stuck up!"

"Stuck up!" said the little Corsican," they are out of sight!"

"Gentlemen of the English, fire first," shouted the French gaurds at Fontenoy, as they ensconced themselves behind a brick wall.—Boston Transcript.

A FAMILIAR SELECTION.

The choir was singing a new arrangement of the beautiful anthem, "Consider the lilies." The pure sweet voice of the soprano rose clearly and distinctly on the solo:

"They toi-oi-oil-oil not,
They toil not,
They toil not,
N-y-y-ther do they spin."

She paused and the tenor took up the strain:

"Nee ee-ee-ther do they spin,
They toi-oi-oil-oil not,
They toil not,
They toil not,
Nee-ee-ee-ther do they spin."

The tenor ceased, and the basso, a solemn, red-haired young man with a somewhat worldly-looking eye and a voice like a fog horn broke in:

"Nay-ay-ay-ay-ther do they spin,
They toi-oi-oi oil-oil not,
They toil not,
They toil not,
Nay-ay-ay-ay-ther do they spin."

Then the voices of three were lifted up in semi-chorus.

"Brethren," said the gray-haired, old fashioned pastor, when the choir had finished, "we will begin the service of the morning by singing the familiar hymn, 'And are we yet alive?'"

"The only thing I don't like about Miss Peeler is her bathing suit." "That isn't much against her."—Life.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with locol treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

EXPERIENCE THE BEST TEACHER.

The great value of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in curing diseases of the blood, particularly the ills of women, has again been demonstrated. Mrs. W. J. Anderson, of Bruyn street, Kingston, N. Y., in speaking of her experience says: "I was an awful sufferer from troubles common to my sex, was reduced to 70 pounds; four physicians prescribed for me, but I kept growing worse. Until I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I never knew a well day. By its use I grew stronger, the pain less frequent, until it entirely disappeared. I now weigh 125 pounds and am a well woman. I must know a dozen women who suffered similarly and have been cured by its use."

YOU LACK STRENGTH

Weak Nerves, Tired, Exhausted Bodies.

The Complaint of Thousands Upon Thousands.

Health and Strength are Within Your Grasp.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Makes You Strong and Well.

It is the Great Restorative of Nerve and Body.

The world is filled with people who, while not exactly sick, yet lack strength. They are weak, tired, languid and nervous, especially at this season of the year, and have lost their oldtime vigor and energy, and go about their work in a listless manner, without ambition, and feeling dull and dispirited.

In this connection we publish the cure of Mrs. B. B. Graves, of Middlefield, Mass., in the lady's own words:

"I have been sick for two years, and have been a great sufferer during all that time. I was fearfully nervous, and could get but little sleep. I was constantly worrying about something. My head ached nearly all the time so that I could hardly endure it. My stomach was in a terrible condition, and I could eat but very little. I suffered awfully from the little food I did eat.

"I was frightfully weak and exhausted all the time, and could do almost no work at all. I was troubled with rheumatism. I was in a fearful condition from all these complaints, and thought I never should get well.

MRS. B. B. GRAVES.

I took medicines and employed doctors but got no better.

"Finally I began use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and immediately there was an improvement. I gained rapidly in health and strength, and everyone of my troubles soon left me. I was entirely cured of them all by that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. There is no other medicine in the world that will do what that will, I advise everybody to use it."

Use it—it will make you strong and well—give you back your snap, energy and ambition to work.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the benefical action of this wonderful medicine.

You Are Coming Home.

The sky, my dear, is a brighter blue—
The rose is a rarer white;
The river ripples and sings—for you—
You are coming home to-night!

Over the wearisome land and sea
You are coming home,
You are coming home,
You are coming home to me!

You are coming home! . . . I have waited long,
And the world seemed lost to sight;
But the twilight thrills with a glad, sweet song—
You are coming home to-night!

Over the wearisome land and sea
You are coming home,
You are coming home,
Sweetheart to love and me!

You are coming home! . . . I shall see your face,
With its loveliness and light;
I shall hold you, dear, in a fond embrace—
You are coming home to-night!

Over the wearisome land and sea
You are coming home,
You are coming home,
To me, sweetheart, to me!

HIS WHEEL SAVED HIS LIFE.

The bicycle has proved useful as a life-saving machine, in many instances, but it remained for John O'Hara of Broome street, in New York, to discover how good a bicycle is as a means of escape from a mad dog. John is a well-grown lad, and is so fond of bicycle riding that he goes on wheeling trips through the streets of the East Side. All of these streets are crowded, but probably no one of them is so jammed full of pedestrians and push-carts and peddlers' wagons as Forsyth street. Experts say that no other part of the earth is so thickly populated as this neighborhood, so you can easily imagine how difficult it must be to go wheeling a bicycle through it. John O'Hara was enjoying a pleasant spin on the smooth asphalt pavement of Forsyth street, near Broome, at noon the other day, when he noticed the crowd scattering right and left, and diving into open hallways and down cellar and stairs. Presently he heard a cry of "Mad dog!" He wheeled around and turned to flee to the southward. As he hurried away he looked back over his shoulder, and saw a big white dog galloping after him, its red tongue lolling out, and yellow foam dripping from its open jaws. As the dog ran it turned and snapped viciously right and left. The cries of the crowds on the sidewalk warned everybody on the pavement, so that there was a clear field ahead of O'Hara for several blocks. He pushed hard on the pedals, and sprinted away as hard as he could. If he could only be sure of plenty of headway he he knew he would be safe. The dog was not running very fast, for his gait was uncertain, and he wavered from side to side.

If O'Hara had turned out into any of the side streets he would have been safe, but in the excitement of the moment he did not think of this. His one idea was to run ahead as fast as possible. Now and then the carts and wagons in the street were slow in turning out, and O'Hara had to slow up. In this way he ran five blocks, now gaining on the dog, and now almost overtaken. At Canal street there was such a jam of vehicles that the bicycle rider almost had to stop. The dog galloped ahead of him, snapping at the wheel as it went past. O'Hara might have even then turned northward for safety, but he was too excited, as probably most of us would have been in his place. He kept straight ahead, and as the dog fell in front of him, the wheels of the bicycle passed over its neck and stunned it. Away went O'Hara at full speed, and a policeman, fortunately near at hand, shot and killed the dog before it could recover. Probably this is the first time that a bicycle was ever used as a weapon as well as a means of flight from danger.—From Harper's Round Table.

DECORATIONS IN PAPER.

The art of fashioning by hand dainty and elaborate novelties in fancy paper has been brought to a state nearly approaching perfection by the Heaths.

Among their dainty fancies we lately saw a table laid for a pink luncheon. The cover was of white crepe paper two and one half yards wide, this fashion being new this season, and the material coming in all colors by the yard at $1.50. A candelabrum of cut glass formed the centerpiece, with shades of pink crepe paper; at two opposite corners stood pink and white Dresden candlesticks, each base concealed by a fluffy pink paper covering; at another corner was placed a delicate glass vase holding branches of pink Japanese cherry blossoms, while at the fourth was the small bell of Dresden. The table was spread for hostess and three guests. At each place was arranged the Dresden plate with pink doily; a menu card inscribed with the lady's name, and ornamented with a pink and white and gold butterfly, stood near one plate, while at the next was laid a tiny pink fan, embellished with white violets, the name inserted on a bit of bristol-board. A large bonbon basket of white rope paper had a lining of frilled pink-edged paper, three ropes serving for handles, which were caught on top by white satin ribbons and a cluster of white violets. Small bonbonnieres had a butterfly attached to each by a fine wire spiral; the almond baskets were diminutive heart shaped trifles of pink rope paper, flowers and ribbon; while the fancy dessert cups for holding an ice were varied in design, one representing a pink-tipped tulip, another a fluted cup, covered in a ruffle of white and pink paper, and encircled by a vine of morning glories in tint carrying out the general scheme of color. This same crepe paper is applied to the drapery of a toilet table illustrated, and is also used in the fashioning of sundry boxes, trays and sachets.

Shades for electric lights simulating large tulips can be found in different colors, white and cerise, rose or rich golden yellow tipped with deep reds and browns.

A unique trellis of rope is designed to fit over a window or doorway; within a narrow wooden frame the ropes cross diagonally back and forth, forming diamonds, and over this network trail vines of pink, purple and white hand-painted morning glories, the whole effect being most artistic.—Harper's Bazar.

QUEER THOUGHTS AT DEATH'S DOOR.

Some months ago a man went down to the lake shore to commit suicide, and when he began to write a final message to his wife he could think of nothing to say except that some batter which he had ordered would be found at a certain grocery. His message bears out a certain fact discovered by realists that in the supreme and soul-terrifying moments of life the most ridiculous and trivial things often come uppermost in the mind, notes the Buffalo News. The dying man comments upon the ugly pattern of the wall paper in his room, and the newly married couple are said to show an invariable preference for talking about the weather.

Just the other day a boy employed in a West Side factory fell four stories down the shaft of a freight elevator. By some interposition of faith or Providence he landed on his feet after turning over a couple of times and crawled out of the bottom door with a silly and mortified look on his face. Except for an inward jolting and a few bruises he was not injured.

The men who had seen him fall rushed to the bottom of the shaft, expecting to find him lying there crushed and lifeless.

But he was on his feet outside the shaft, catching his breath in an excited, nervous giggle, and awkwardly brushing the dust off his clothes.

"Are you hurt?" they asked, taking hold of him.

"N-n-no, I m all right."

You cannot find a pain that Redding's Russia Salve will not alleviate. Better have it in your pocket. You can for 25 cents.

"Did you light on your feet?"

"I don't know. Leave me alone. I'm all right."

In a few minutes he had calmed down and one of the men asked him: "What did you think of while you were falling?"

"All that I remember is that the feather cleanin' place on the second floor was shut down."

"Is that all?"

"I could see as I went by that there wasn't anyone workin' in there. That's every blamed thing I can remember."

He stuck to it. At an awful moment when his past life should have come to him in a flash, he was taking observations of the "feather cleaning place."

The reason why the houses in Kansas succumb so easily to cyclones is that they are built with such light frames. This peculiarity sometimes gives rise to peculiar accidents. As Mamie Waite of Kawmouth was cleaning her last winter's blue silk with benzine the inflammable stuff took fire. In a moment the room was filled with heated air, which expelled the cooler and heavier atmosphere, and then the entire house shot upward like a Montgolfier balloon. There was little wind, and it could presently be seen at a distance of two miles, burning so furiously that not a piece of it except the kitchen stove ever reached the ground. It is reported that Miss Waite is dead.

Taylor's Anti-Headache Powders are just as harmless as water. Yet look how powerful water is in putting out fire! Our powders cure Headache and Neuralgia in the same manner exactly. It is safe to say that these powders will cure all cases, because they never failed yet. Why not buy Taylor's and be sure about it? Get them of LeGro & Lynde.

Silkoline for sash curtains, 12½c a yard.

Fall Carpets.

As a fitting introduction to the Fall Carpet season, we have adopted an unusual plan.

With most Carpet houses a fresh new stock and a fresh new season call for fresh new prices. When everybody is buying, that is of course the time to put on "all that traffic will bear."

We begin by selecting a number of the very best, most popular, standard lines of carpets, and mark them lower than some dealers pay for them.

The reason—we want your carpet business, even if there's no profit in it.

Wilton Velvets, with borders to match, the best on the market—their wearing qualities are well known—new goods in the newest patterns and colors at $1.25 a yard.

Fourth floor, take elevator.

Fancy Rockers.

The most popular line of fancy Rockers ever on our floors, judging from the present rate of selling.

$3, $3.50, $3.75 and $4, buys polished oak, birch and mahogany finish Arm Rockers with cobbler and saddle seats. Don't fail to see them.

Carpets.

We are making a clearing sale in Wiltons, Axminsters and Brussels that is creating no little excitement among carpet buyers. For genuine value it is doubtful if you find their equal again this season. A saving of 50 and 75 cents a yard on the carpet purchase is an item worth considering; that is what we are offering you in $1.75 Axminsters at $1.

$1.50 Wiltons at $1.
$1.35 Brussels at 85 cents.

Little Feet.

Two little feet, so small that both may nestle
In one caressing hand;
Two tender feet upon the untried border
Of life's mysterious land;

Dimpled and soft, and pink as peach-tree blossoms
In April's fragrant days—
How can they walk among the briery tangles
Edging the world's rough ways?

These rose-white feet along the doubtful future
Must bear a woman's load;
Alas! since woman has the heaviest burden,
And walks the hardest road.

Love, for a while, will make the path before them
All dainty, smooth and fair,
Will cull away the brambles, letting only
The roses blossom there;

But when the mother's watchful eyes are shrouded
Away from sight of men,
And these dear feet are left without her guiding,
Who shall direct them then?

How will they be allured, betrayed, deluded,
Poor little untaught feet?
Into what dreary mazes will they wander?
What dangers will they meet?

Will they go stumbling blindly in the darkness
Of sorrow's tearful shades?
Or find the upland slopes of peace and beauty,
Whose sunlight never fades?

Will they go toiling up ambition's summit,
The common world above?
Or in some nameless vale, securely sheltered,
Walk side by side with Love?

Some feet there be which walk life's track unwounded,
Which find but pleasant ways;
Some hearts there be to which this world is only
A round of happy days.

But they are few. Far more there are who wander
Without a hope or friend,
Who find their journey full of pains and losses,
And long to reach the end.

How shall it be with her, the tender stranger,
Fair-faced and gentle-eyed,
Before whose untrained feet the world's rude highway
Stretches so strange and wide?

Ah! who may read the future? For our darling
We crave all blessings sweet,
And pray that he who feeds the crying ravens
Will guide the baby's feet.

—Elizabeth Akers Allen.

A NEWSPAPER STORY.

"Step into my private office when you are at liberty, Mr. Bennett."

The request was made in terse, authorative tones, familiar enough to every man in the editorial department of the paper as those of Mr. Priest, the managing editor—an undersized, fussy, little chap, with hair prematurely gray, tiny sharp eyes, like a ferret's, and enormous ears that seemed designed by nature to catch all the news there was adrift. The latter organs he had a peculiar fashion of moving backward and forward when excited or interested—a mulish mannerism which had earned him various more or less appropriate nicknames.

"Yes, sir," answered Bennett, looking up from the preparation of an article on the superlative greatness, present and future, of Kansas City. "Be there in five minutes," he added, and then sotto voce—"Wonder what the deuce is up now. Some idiot's been complaining about a report, of course." With this reflection the young man resumed his laudatory screed on the advantages of Kansas City, commercially, socially and generally. At last the column of fiction, upon which he had expended a good deal of energy, was handed over to the city editor with the remark, "Here's that rot about the town." An instant later Bennett had disappeared down the passage to confer with his chief.

"Wonder what Priest wants with him," said Godfrey, one of the stars of the staff, who had acquired local fame by virtue of a series of "beats" during his four months of service with the paper.

"May be going to do tardy justice and raise his salary," said O'Dell, the court man, cynically. "Bennett's been doing all the fancy work since poor Durnald quit, and he ought to get Durnald's salary, but he doesn't."

"Did you see Priest's ears?" asked little Davis, the junior member of the staff. "They stood right out," went on the youngster, "and there's something in the air, sure."

At that moment a messenger entered to inform Godfrey that he was wanted in the managerial sanctum, whereat little Davis at once urged the correctness of his surmise, that an unusual "something" was transpiring behind the figured glass doors of the editorial room.

"Sit down, Bennett," snapped the editor, as the former entered. Priest was a type. One of the class of men who seem to find their way into positions of influence and authority on newspapers without difficulty. He was not a writer, and in fact could hardly construct a sentence. He lacked most of the elements naturally supposed indispensable to succeed in such a place, but Priest had other qualifications, added to a good nose for news, which appealed more strongly to the stockholders of the paper. Chief among them was his ability to play into the hands of the business office, hold down the writers' salaries to the minimum, and curtail the expenses of his department generally. There were literary brains enough to be got for a very little money, clever writers on any and all topics of the day, but men of the Priest pattern were scarcer.

The air of the managing editor, as he motioned Bennett to a seat, was preoccupied. He was always preoccupied when spoken to or approached by any but the business manager. Then he was obsequious. His manner now said, as plainly as words could have said it, "you are my subordinate, and must be duly impressed with the dignity of my position." After gazing for some moments, in an attitude of deep thought, at a social item of utter unimportance, which had slipped in among his correspondence by mistake, Mr. Priest dropped the little piece of paper into his capacious wastebasket, swung around in his swing-chair, and faced Jack Bennett.

"Mr. Bennett," he jerked, "I'm going to detail you on an important piece of work."

"Yes, sir," replied Bennett, with a becoming show of interest.

"You know, Mr. Bennett," continued the chief, "all the main facts regarding the counterfeit $5 bills which have flooded the city during the last few months."

"I believe I am tolerably familiar with the matter, sir," was the reply.

"The fact is, Bennett," and the little man's ears began to oscillate with increasing rapidity—"the fact is, that every detective in the city has worked on this case for weeks at a time. They have all failed and the work has been practically abandoned. The police acknowledge themselves beaten, Bennett." The editor brought his hand down on the arm of the chair with an emphatic thump. "Now, then," and the ferret-eyed little man leaned forward as though to add weight to his words, "I have always held that a good reporter is the best detective in the world. You have done some very good work for the paper, Bennett—very good, indeed. You may take this case. Devote your whole time to it, follow up every conceivable clew, run those fellows to earth and—well, if you succeed, it will make a difference in your salary.

"You will take any other man off the local staff you may desire to assist you," went on the editor, before Bennett had time to reply. "I should suggest Godfrey. He's a bright fellow, quite up to the work, I should think."

"I think Godfrey is the right man, sir," said Bennett. Godfrey entered a moment later in response to a summons by telephone. The nature of the business on which he had been detailed was explained, and then both men were dismissed with the injunction to do their best.

* * * * * *

The task set these two reporters was by no means an easy one. Detectives, and reputedly smart ones, had worked on the counterfeiting case for months, but as the editor said, no clew, however faint, had been found to the makers of the base five dollar notes.

A week after he had been detailed on the matter, Jack Bennett sat lounging in an armchair at his rooms, examining one of the spurious bills for the hundredth time. He had just succeeded in running down, with the aid of Godfrey, a clew which the latter had suggested, but which like a dozen other supposed clews, had proven false. A week is a long time in a newspaper office, and Bennett was beginning to chafe at his lack of success in finding a single thread to work on.

"A bad beginning," he mused. "A deuced bad beginning."

Taking his cigar from his lips he again examined the counterfeit minutely. It was almost perfect. A slight difference, perhaps, in the texture of the paper between this and the genuine bill, but the lettering was clear and exact, the ink black and the printing without a flaw. None but an expert could have discerned the fraud.

Then Bennett fell to thinking of certain difficulties he had encountered in this investigation, which had so far proven profitless. Sometimes he thought Godfrey was jealous of the precedence given another on the case; sometimes his assistance and suggestions seemed half-hearted. Still, there were times when he was feverishly anxious to hunt down a newly discovered clew. There was no doubt of the man's ability. Godfrey had worked up two or three affairs single handed, in a manner that proved him a thoroughly capable man—and yet, there was something about his efforts to run down these counterfeiters that seemed half sincere.

Little was known of Godfrey on the paper. He floated in on the boom tide, just when a good man was badly needed. Jim Durnald, one of the best men Kansas City ever saw, had succumbed to the effect of six years' continuous work in the same chair, and was, at the time of Godfrey's advent, a helpless victim of paresis in a sanitarium somewhere in the central part of the state. The poor fellow imagined that he had purchased a controlling interest in the stock of two railroads and a steamship company. Of course every one was sorry for Durnald, but in a newspaper office there is very little room for sentiment. Jim was "out of the running," and it was necessary to get a man in his place at once. When Godfrey applied for a job, Fawcett, the city editor, put him on, and it took but a few days to demonstrate that a first-rate all-round man had been secured.

Bennett thought over his associations with the new man, and could find no real reason for complaint. Mentally resolving, however, to adopt a new line of research on the following day, he was about to retire, when a knock on the door startled him. It was the sharp rapping of some one in a hurry.

"Jack, say Jack!" Bennett recognized the voice as that of young Davis.

"Get up and let me in, old chap," went on the outsider.

Bennett walked over, turned the key and threw the door open. "Why, Davis!" he exclaimed, "what's the row? You look as though you had seen a ghost," for the junior member of the staff was very pale and very much excited.

Davis assumed an air which told plainly enough that he had a disclosure to make. The youngster drew up a chair, lighted one of Bennett's cigars, and replied to his friend's query with a question.

"How are you getting on with the case, Bennett?" he inquired coolly.

"What case?"

"Come, now, old fellow," went on the youth, "I haven't been in this business as long as you have, but I have learned enough to pick up a piece of news before I fell over it."

"Well, what have you picked up this time?" asked Bennett, rather disconcerned at the peculiar manner of his young colleague.

Davis pitched his hat into a corner, stuffed both hands deep down into his trousers' pockets, and with an air of quiet assurance, proceeded.

"What I came here for, at this unearthly hour of the night, was to put you on the right track and help you capture these queer pushers. You're all wrong," said the lad, with peculiar emphasis on the last three words.

"Look here, Davis," and Bennett rose to his feet, "what the devil are you driving at?"

"Oh, now, don't treat me like a child," interposed the other, indignantly. "I'm on to the whole game. You're working on this counterfeiting story, and Godfrey's working with you—that is, he's supposed to be. Am I right?"

"Suppose you are," said Bennett, guardedly. "What then?"

"What then!" cried Davis, sitting bolt upright. "Why just what I said before. You're on the wrong lay—clear off the scent, I tell you. Look here, Bennett," he continued in an excited voice, "I've been working on this thing for two months. There's $1000 reward offered for the capture of the gang, don't you see, and what I want is the reward."

Bennett could not repress an amused smile. The vanity of the youngster tickled him immensely, but Davis was a bright sort of little chap, and a fellow couldn't help liking him.

"I've followed up every clew," he went on. "Hundreds of 'em have amounted to nothing, but I tell you, Bennett," and the lad's face flushed with the excitement he felt. "I'm on to the whole deal now. I'd bet my life against a dollar that I can run these fellows to earth in a couple of days."

Bennett was interested now, and he was never wider awake in his life then when, turning sharp round on his heel, he pushed the excited junior member into a chair and took up a position before him.

The lad shrugged his shoulders as a man will who is sure of his position, and replied calmly. "Turn about's fair play. "What do you know?"

"Well," said Bennett, "to be perfectly frank with you, I have discovered nothing. The whole case looks just as blank as it did a week ago when I was put on it."

"That's what I thought," replied the youth. "Now I'll tell you something. It's not altogether fame I'm after in this thing, Bennett. I need that thousand dollars. Laugh if you like; laugh your head off. The fact remains that, if I had the thousand, I'd get married in less than no time."

"A laudable idea, my boy—very fine," laughed Bennett. "Er—who is the lady?" he added.

"Dolly Taylor of Omaha. Sweetest little girl in the world. I've known her all my life, went to high school with her, known all about her, and love her all the more, the more I know of her. There are only two in the family—just Dolly and her mother. There's a brother somewhere, but he's the black sheep of the family—been in some bad scrapes, I'm told, but they never speak of him. The father's dead, you know, and it's a case of highly respectable poverty. Well, to cut it short," concluded the youngster, "that $1000 would come in awful handy, and I never miss a chance, Bennett. Will you help me carry this thing out? Give me the money and you may take the glory. Will you do it?"

"Yes, yes," replied the other, hastily. "Now tell your story."

"I had better begin with the most important fact," said Davis deliberately turning over the leaves of his note book. "Here is the entry," he went on. It is dated just three hours ago. It reads like this—'Godfry is the counterfeiter.'" "Eh? Why, what the d—l! By George, you're crazy. Godfrey, one of the best all-round newspaper men in the West, a member of this gang? Oh, come Davis, this is all rot—utter idiocy," and Bennett began to pace the floor hastily. "Still," he went on, as though arguing the proposition in his own mind, "I don't know either. There have been one or two queer things—"

He glanced at Davis. That young gentleman had placidly closed his notebook, and was waiting for his friend to calm down.

"Go on with your story," said Bennett. "It was quite by chance," Davis resumed, "that I got my clew, I was down at Schaefer's place to-night, looking up a piece of news, when there was a row at the bar. A swell looking chap had tried to ring a flash five on Bill, the bar tender. Bill had him by the scuff of the neck, and was going to send for the police. The man protested violently that he was all right, and offered a large roll of bills in evidence, but Bill was obdurate, and there would have been a pinch all right if something hadn't turned up in the nick of time. Now what do you think happened?"

"Give it up."

"Just then Godfery stepped over from one of the billiard tables, cool as you please; shook hands with the man, swore to the barkeeper that he was all right, and asked Bill as a personal favor not to disgrace him by arrest. You know Godfrey is chums with every detective and patrolman in town, and Bill knew him well as the police reporter of our paper. The upshort of the thing was that he turned the swell loose and apologized. The latter laughed at the adventure, bought drinks for all the loafers, and everybody forgot it. What impressed me was the expression of the man's face. You never in your life saw an innocent man go as white. I kept my eye on the chap, and pretty soon he got over to the table where Godfery was still playing billiards. They had a brief talk, and as soon as the the game was over, Godfrey went out alone. There was a big crowd in the place, and he had not seen me. I had a mind at first to follow him, but on second thoughts determined to shadow the other fellow. In a few moments he went out too. I was on the other side of the street in a jiffy. He went through the front door of Harper's place on Topeka street, and I was after him like a shot. As I entered the front, he disappeared through the back door into the alley. There was no one watching, and like a flash I seized the nigger's coat from the wall, threw it over my shoulders and walked out into the alley. My hat was pulled over my eyes, and even Dolly would not have known me."

"Well?" said Bennett, who was visibly agitated.

"Well, I found 'em there. They were talking in the shadow of the building, and of course I did not care to stop. My object was to find them together. That settled the thing in my mind, but I followed farther, to make sure. I've tracked them to Godfrey's room, and now I know enough to justify a raid."

"You confounded young 'un?" gasped the excited Bennett, "I believe you're smarter than the lot of us." Hang me," he added, "if I don't believe you're right."

"Right!!!" exclaimed the youth, in a sort of a shriek. "Of course I'm right. Why, man, don't you see the game—Godfrey's, I mean? He's a crack o' jack at the business. Knows something about newspaper work, makes application for a job and gets the very run he most wants—police. He works hard, is a good writer, gets in with all the detectives and patrolmen, and knows just about what they are doing. Why, he even traveled round with them, working on this very case. Right!" added the excited young sleuth, panting for breath, "Why, it's the greatest graft on earth, and the grafter, like Cæsar's wife, above suspicion."

"When would you suggest making the arrest?" asked Bennett.

"Godfrey will be alone in the room after midnight. We must manage it alone, us two. If the police make the capture, we shall lose both the credit and the reward. The room is No. 20, top floor of the Perry block. It must be done to-morrow night. If anything scares these chaps, it's all day with our plans."

"To-morrow, then," said Bennett. "Be here at 10 o'clock sharp, and we can arrange the details then. I'll take care of Godfrey during the day and you keep out of sight. Now skip out and go to bed," he added. "We need a rest before tackling this job. Oh, by the way," he concluded, "bring a gun with you."

* * * * * *

At 12.16 Fawcett, the city editor, sat lolling in his spring chair, having one of those little breathing spells that come so rarely to the city man on a morning paper. A sudden cyclonic rush into the local room brought Fawcett up standing in an instant. The new arrival was Bennett. Blood was trickling down a long scratch on his face, and his clothing gave evidence that he was fresh from an encounter.

"What is it, Bennett?" asked the city editor, scenting a sensation.

"Got 'em," answered the other briefly, grasping a tab of paper. "Got the leader of the gang like a rat in a trap. It's Godfrey. We've tied him up, and Davis is standing guard over him with a gun."

"What!!!!" shrieked Fawcett, and then recovering himself—"Great Scott!! hot stuff, old man. Get right at it."

Bennett's pencil began to fly over the paper.

"The gang of counterfeiters whose shrewdness has proven too much for the best detectives in the country," he wrote, "have at last been run to the earth. The details of the capture, and the events leading up to it furnish one of the most remarkable pages in criminal hitsory—"

The rest of the story was never written. The half covered page of copy was torn from Bennett's hand. He looked up angrily, for time was short. There ghastly pale, and shaking from head to foot, stood Davis.

"Come out, quick," he gasped, and Bennett rushed after him to the elevator. They entered the car just as Fawcett called loudly to Bennett to rush up his copy.

"In heaven's name, what's the matter?" asked Bennett excitedly, but Davis only gasped for breath, and pulled the other out of the lift toward the street door. Once in the street, he spoke:

"Jack, you must not write that story. I—I've let the fellow go."

"You!!!!"

"I've let him go, I tell you. For God's sake, don't write the story, Jack. It's my story, by—, and you shan't write it, as Bennet hesitated before replying. "I'll tell you why. After we tied the fellow up, and you came down here to write the story, I saw a girl's picture on the table. I believe my blood almost froze in my veins as I looked at it, for the picture was of her. It was Dolly's photograph. D—it, don't you see, the man's her brother, the scapegrace, the vagabond, the—"

Bennett was undergoing a struggle, a terrible struggle. If he wrote the story, he would deserve to be kicked all the way to the Pacific coast; if he didn't write it, he would be certainly kicked out of the office. It was Davis who got the story. He knew that well. Yet the paper would never recognize such an excuse. The faces of the twain shone white in the light of the street lamp. The younger one was watching his companion eagerly.

"You won't write it, Jack," he begged almost piteously.

"No, old chap, I won't. Not if the whole press of the country turns its back on me. Come, youngster, we've got to shake this town. It's too hot to hold us."

At daybreak next morning two unkempt fellows boarded a Chicago train at a way station, ten miles from Kansas City. The morning paper contained a garbled story about a capture and a daring escape, but the only two men who knew the inside of the affair were speeding eastward as fast as steam could carry them. The whole affair was a great sensation in newspaper circles and there were a good many theories evolved to account for the extraordinary behavior of certain absentees. Bribery was freely hinted, but there were those who knew that something more than mere money had prompted Bennett to throw up the biggest beat of the year. Little Priest swore pompously that he would blacklist both men in every newspaper office in America, but despite the threat, Bennett is now one of the most valued men in New York, while Davis has grown into a big, strapping fellow. He is the sporting editor of a Chicago daily, and his wife is a pretty little girl, whose name was once Dolly Taylor, and her residence Omaha.—Arthur James Pegler, in Romance.

DIDN'T LIKE THE RULES.

I heard the old couple in the room next to mine when they discovered the "rules" tacked up on the door. The old man was trying to work at the transom when he caught sight of the card and exclaimed:

"By gosh, Lucy, come here! It says on this card if we don't put our money in the safe they won't be responsible for it! That looks as if robbers were about, doesn't it?

"Of course it does," she exclaimed in reply. "I told ye I didn't like the looks of this tavern as we drove up."

"No washin' did in the rooms," said the old man, as he read the next rule. "I didn't expect they'd furnish us with tubs and clothes lines, but that looks mighty stingy."

"No washin', eh? queried the woman. "Waal, I told ye things had a queer look as we came upstairs"

"Meals sent to the rooms charged extra." That's some more o' their stinginess."

"I should say. They'd probably charge a dollar for bringin' up a plate of meat and taters. Samuel, we've got in a place where they'll cut our throats to get our money."

"All bills settled weekly and no discount from the regular rates," continued her husband.

"Hev we got to stay here for a week before we can settle our bill?" she anxiously asked.

"Looks a heap like it, Lucy. I was goin' to ask 'em to throw somethin' on account of my being overseer of highways, but I guess is no use. Fire escapes at all the hall winders."

"For goodness sake! Then we are liable to be roasted in our beds. Samuel, if they wasn't afraid of fire they wouldn't hev fire escapes, and I wouldn't go to bed to-night for a millyon dollars."

"Looks kind o' risky, I do declar. Let's see. Gas burned after midnight charged extra."

"And do they expect we are goin' to set up till after midnight fur the sake of payin' extra. Samuel, we have made a great mistake in gettin' into this tavern."

"I guess we have. All damage done to room to be paid for by occupants. Hev we damaged anythin'?"

"No; except I knocked a cheer over. If they heard the crash down stairs they'll charge us $2 or $3 maibbe."

"Bolt the door and secure the transom before retirin'," read the old man, as he reached the bottom of the card.

"Where's the transom?" asked his wife.

"Durned if I know."

"But what is it?"

"I never saw one as I know of."

"Samuel Parsons," exclaimed the woman, as she rushed across the room, "you help me pack our duds into this satchel and we'll walk right down st

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 27, 1895.

THE A. P. A. still pretends to believe that it can control the Republican state convention, but the calling of a meeting of the leaders for the last of the week, to consult as to the best course to pursue, would indicate lack of genuine sanguineness.

THE Britons are playing in hard luck in contests with Americans this year. We beat them in yacht racing and then in fast railroading, and then last Saturday in the international athletic games in New York we captured first place in every one of the eleven events on the programme, not giving the visitors the ghost of a show.

LIEUTENANT PEARY arrived at St. John's, N. F., last Saturday, on his way from his Arctic trip. He didn't succeed in finding the north pole, and was disappointed in not accomplishing as much otherwise as he expected, still maps were made and collections brought back which are valuable. On the whole, it would seem as though the game was hardly worth the candle.

THE action of the A. P. A. in regard to the Republican caucus in Palmer Tuesday night was a fair sample of the methods of the order. If it could capture the caucus unawares it would do so; if not it would make no showing of the strength it had. The course of the order throughout the state in regard to the present election has been mainly of this surreptitious and cowardly nature. The results show that it has not near the strength its leaders have claimed for it, and it evidently dared not expose its weakness by an open contest.

A NOTABLE step has been taken by President Cleveland this week in an attempt to reform the consular service. These consuls, sent to foreign ports and towns look after the interests and protect the commerce of the country sending them, have been appointed as a reward for political service or because some party worker asked it. Hereafter those receiving salaries from $1000 to $2500 will be subjected to an examination in order to secure their appointment, unless they have already proved their fitness in the service of the department of state. The order was promulgated on the recommendation of Secretary of State Olney.

ANOTHER American heiress captures an English title, and the owner of the title will be endowed with a goodly portion of American gold. As long as each gets what is wanted and is satisfied, whose business is it if the Duke of Marlborough does wed Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt? At the same time there are several similar matches which have taken place in recent years which might serve as a warning on general principles. The experience of the daughter of a president cannot have been forgotton so soon, or that of a Western women who is paying her "lord" an annuity to keep away from her.

IT WILL BE GREENHALGE.

The Republican caucuses of Tuesday and Wednesday nights made it certain that Governor Greenhalge will be renominated at the state convention. The feeling of alarm as to the outcome did not appear to be well grounded, as in only a few places of acknowledged strength, such as Springfield, Holyoke and Westfield, did the patriotic orders control the caucuses, and the number of delegates who are known to be favorable to the present executive assures his nomination October 5th. This is as it should be. The thoughtful people of the state have admired the course of Governor Greenhalge during the two years he has been at the head of affairs. He has been a governor all the time, and those who have cared for his interests in the caucuses will not be neglectful of their duty at the polls. Massachusetts has every reason to be proud of her present chief executive; he has served her interests faithfully and conscientiously, acting at all times as in his judgment was for the best welfare of the commonwealth, and on the fifth of November he will receive the suffrages of many outside his own party.

THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES.

A special train carried the Republicans of Palmer and Thorndike to the town house Tuesday evening, and there was a good attendance. A report had been circulated that the A. P. A. at Three Rivers, assisted by its sympathizers in the other villages, were on the watch to capture the caucus if it had an opportunity; no special train had been announced up to a late hour Tuesday forenoon, and they were relying on a small attendance from the Depot village, in which event they were sanguine of success; if there was a chance to control the caucus they would try for it, otherwise no show of strength would be made. Evidently the special train upset their plans, for practically no sign of the order appeared. The list of delegates chosen will support Greenhalge for governor, Gardner for district attorney, Lakin for councilor and Clark for sheriff. W. W. Leach was chairman and L. E. Chandler secretary. Two vases of apple blossoms were among the decorations at St. Paul's Universalist church last Sunday morning, coming from a tree owned by Deputy Sheriff Northrop. Several of the hunters of the place have tried to shoot a Great Blue Heron which has for some time been making itself at home about the pond at the electric light plant, but George Woods was the fortunate one to bring it down, last Friday. A meeting of those interested in forming a Chautauqua circle was held in the Congregational church parlors Monday evening, and a circle formed; the membership will be limited to 15, as that is as large a number as can work together to advantage. Mrs. F. E. Jenkins is president and Miss Anna Fisherdick treasurer. Meetings will be held Monday evenings at the homes of the members.

There have been few days this summer more uncomfortable than Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The mercury took a sudden jump up among the 90's, being reported as high as 95; coming so soon after the cool weather of the fore part of the week the effect on humanity was most marked. The present month so far has been the hottest September ever known, and Saturday was the hottest September day for ten years.

C. A. Brown went to Worcester Monday, where he had a finger—the third on his right hand—amputated at Dr. Warren's private hospital. A large bunch some time ago formed on the bone, which had been scraped once in an effort to do away with the trouble, but recently it had grown rapidly, and was greatly inflamed, blood poisoning being feared. The trouble could have been retarded by another scraping of the bone, but as the finger would have to come off eventually Mr. Brown preferred to undergo only the one operation.

A meeting of sportsmen was held in the rooms of the Palmer Bicycle Club last evening, when it was decided to have a hunt next Wednesday, to be known as the Palmer Sportsmen's Club hunt. C. E. Fuller and H. W. McGregory were chosen captains, and the hunt will be a 24-hour one. S. B. Keith, W. J. Keith and F. J. Adams were chosen a committee to act with the captains in arranging the score, which will be on different lines from any formerly used. All insect-devouring birds will be dropped, and chipmunks and red squirrels will be made of little value, while game birds will be ranked high, and birds of prey still higher. The losing side is to furnish a game supper and dance for all concerned, which will probably be held on Friday evening.

An agent of the New England Telegraph and Telephone Company has been canvassing in this vicinity recently, and as a result a number of new subscribers have been added to the exchange, the recently reduced rates making the instruments available for many who felt that the use they had for the service would not warrant the payment of the former price. New instruments have been placed in Fredrick Thompson's market, W. H. Hitchcock's store, Converse House, H. P. Holden's house, C. E. Fuller's house, Holden & Fuller's mill, W. H. Small's house, C. A. Brown & Co's. store in Palmer, and in the residence of J. F. Twiss at Three Rivers. A long-distance instrument has also been placed in the bank. What the business men would like to have is an instrument in the freight house of the Boston and Albany road, so that they might communicate with that place. As it now is they must take a trip there to find out whether or not freight has arrived, and if telephone communication could be had it would be a great convenience.

In the district court on Monday the case of W. I. Whitlock of Wales, for disposing of property not his own, was heard and he was bound over to the December term of the superior court in $200 bonds, which was furnished; Whitlock sold a buckboard which was in his possession, but which belonged to another man. Two first-offense drunks were fined $5 each, and paid. William Pierce of Monson, who last week stabbed William Andrews, was bound over to the October term of the superior court in $500 bonds, which were furnished. Michael Danihy of Maine paid $5 for drunkenness. On Tuesday Jeremiah Crowley of Thorndike, for disturbing the peace Saturday night, paid a fine of $10 and furnished $200 bonds to keep the peace for six months. Yesterday morning B. Frank Coffin was charged with keeping an unlicensed dog, and the case was continued until to-morrow. This morning Celia Watros of Monson complained of Robert Fleming of the same town for an assault, and Fleming complained of the woman for the same offense, the case will be heard next Friday.

The Battery B. boys passed through Palmer Wednesday afternoon on their way back to Newport from camp at Tyringham, having camped at Springfield the night before. The ride from that city was a hot and dusty one, and the boys looked as though they would like to find a cool spot in which to rest awhile. The camp for the night was made near the Cooley crossing, and just before they reached it a horse gave out and had to be shot; the supposed cause was a burst blood vessel. This is the second animal to die on the trip. The cumbersome and unwieldy furniture wagon which they had on their former passage through the place had been shipped home by freight, with the tents, and the boys will have to get along the best way they can with blankets, etc., but consider that fun compared with the trip through the days. The weather was pretty severe while they were in camp; the cold snap took hold of them in good earnest, and then came the hot days and cold nights. A number of the boys came to the village Wednesday evening from camp and "did" the town. They had been paid off at Tyringham, and some of them went back to camp late at night "jolly" in more senses than one.

The pupils of the high school have in course of preparation a series of entertainments for the coming months similar to that which they managed last year and which proved so entertaining and successful. Dates are being arranged, and they expect to be able to announce them and the course in a few days. If all the proposed attractions can be secured the course will be even better than that of last year, and in any event will be well worth the price asked for season tickets. The proceeds will go toward increasing the library of the school, which was started last spring with the proceeds of the course given through the winter. Two of the dates desired for the course have been taken for attractions at the opera house, so it has been decided to have one on the evening of October 9th; should this be will patronized the school will feel encouraged to go ahead with the rest of the course. Mr. Leland T. Powers, the impersonator, will be the attraction at this first entertainment, and will be well worth the seeing. Mr. Powers takes a play and impersonates all the characters, their actions and tone of voice, and is acknowledged the best of his kind. He has eight pieces in his repertoire, and it is proposed to have him give "David Copperfield" here, though this has not been fully decided upon yet.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a costume of pink silk and Irish point lace, and her maid wore gray silk. Among the numerous presents was a dinner set from the bride's brother. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch. Both parties are well known in the place, and have the best wishes of many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Shea took the 3 o'clock train for Boston.

Rev. E. B. Blanchard of the Congregational church presented his letter of resignation last Sunday, to accept a call to a church in Brookfield. The church acted on the letter last evening, voting that it be accepted and the notice waved. The letter in full:

TO THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AND PARISH SOCIETY OF PALMER, THORNDIKE, Mass.

My Dear Friends in Christ:—Having labored together with you in the Lord's service since May 1st, 1892, and having found many firm friends in Christ, it is with regret that I now deem it necessary for me to close my work in this church and society, and ask that the three months' notice be wavied, and my labors with you be finished October 1st. Before coming to this decision I spent much time in prayer that God would lead me in that path which would be the means of bringing the greatest results for His Kingdom. I thank you for the spirit of harmony in Christian service, the close attention you have so often given to words of counsel, and for the kindly interest in the welfare of my family. I have felt especially grateful to all who enabled us this year to cancel the parish debt. I am also grateful to those who helped form and maintain the Young Peoples Society of Christian Endeavor; I hope no one by adverse criticism will discourage the bringing of the young into consecrated church work. I regret exceedingly that there are still those among us who express no desire for the Spirit of Christ in the growth of character, but I hope some one may be able to prove to them the comfort of the Christian life. Praying that the Spirit of God may soon lead you into close sympathy and union with another pastor and teacher, I am, yours in Christ,

E. B. BLANCHARD.

The three young men who went fishing the other night would probably have brought home a better catch had not a misfortune happened to one of their number. He usually carries his hooks in a pill box, but on this particular occasion he took the wrong box. Of course the deceived fisherman's rod was useless, but he consoled himself by taking a pill.

Monday evening the members of the Baptist church held a special business meeting to decide the knotty question, "Who shall be pastor?" and F. A. NEWSPAPER publishers in Western Massachusetts who are not members of the Suburban Press Association miss many good things which are brought out at the monthly meetings, held at the Crawford House in Boston on the third Saturday of each month. Matters of mutual interest are discussed, and notes compared. At the meeting last Saturday those present were especially favored by the reading of a paper on "Woman's Usefulness and Influence in a Newspaper Office," by Mrs. Barbara N. Galpin of the Somerville Journal. It bristled with good points from the first word to the last, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mrs. Galpin has charge of the woman's page of the Journal, which is vastly brighter and more entertaining than such pages are apt to be. She is endeavoring to arrange a trip abroad next season for the purpose of writing syndicate letters, which will be well worth the reading, we are sure.

The Sunday Song Service.

Sadly neglected was this part of ministerial training when I was a theological student. We had an occasional address on sacred music by some musician or hymnologist, but a regular lecture on the subject by one of the professors I have no recollection of. We had theology, metaphysics and logic in abundance, but musical instruction, as a legitimate part of homiletics, was left to take care of itself. As a decorative and sentimental art it was simply tolerated as an agreeable and optional affair. Nevertheless, we had some fine musicians and singers even in those limited circumstances. The cabinet organ was not yet born, but we had the flute, the bass viol, double-base viol, and in some cases the violin. While a student of Phillips Academy, Andover, I remember hearing the eminent missionary, W. G. Shauffler, play on his self-made flute in the choir of Andover seminary, who always had the hymn before him as well as the tune, (there were no hymn-and-tune books in those days) that he might join in the sentiment of the hymn while playing the tune. There were also some well-trained voices among the students and ministers in those days. I remember hearing one of them sing as a solo at a "protracted meeting" (four days,)

"Come ye disconsolate, where'er ye languish," to the fine tune by Webbe, which has never been surpassed for those words, in a manner and spirit that impressed me more than the sermon or the "inquiry meeting" that followed.

Music and song are older and planted deeper in the human soul than theological systems, and at length they have come to be recognized as an essential part of the training of young men for the ministry, both for their own personal solace and for their greater usefulness. The pulpit and the choir have too long been separated, and sometimes rival agencies in the Sabbath services. They are hereafter, let us hope, to be wedded for life and accounted as one in spiritual aim and influence. The great need now is, and the great purpose henceforth must be, to cultivate and develop the musical talent of the churches, not simply of the choir or quartette. The choir need not and should not be dispensed with, and certain members of it may occasionally be designated to sing certain pieces by themselves; but a prominent writer on church music recently said, "The quartette," as the leading feature of the song service, "has had its day." (Rev. C. L Robinson, D. D.) This is a very strong and sweeping assertion, but it is made by one of the most widely competent men, and we must believe that he has some ground for his opinion. If it be true, as he affirms, or becoming true, in the near future, as we earnestly hope, it must follow that the congregation hereafter, under a devout and competent leader, is to have its proper share in this important part of public worship. And in order to do this, provision must be made for their easy participation therein. Instruction in the theory and practice of music must be provided for the congregation as well as for the choir. The people cannot be reasonably expected to participate in the song service without practice and training any more than the choir or quartette can be. The latter are expected to meet for practice every week, to learn new pieces and be able to sing them easily and devotionally on the Sabbath. The congregation must do the same, and have the same opportunity, encouragement and help in doing it. In the late Dr. Henry Atlon's church, London, the hymns and tunes were all in books throughout the house, so that all could see and know what was sung and "take part freely in the same," as far as possible, whether anthems or set pieces, solos or common hymns and tunes. This required effort and expense, of course, but not more than the support of an artistic quartette, while it was worth many times more to the church, especially in spiritual life and joy.

An Interesting Talk on Evolution.

Members of the Monson Current Events Club, with their escorts and the school teachers of the town, met with the Spencer class at Dr. Soule's recently to enjoy an interesting and suggestive formal talk by Prof. James Tufts on "Some Aspects of Evolution."

Mr. Tufts defined evolution as the history of the steps by which things have come into their present state and form. Evolution does not explain how these changes came about, but itself needs explanation. It covers the whole field of our universe, including the realms of the professions, art, literature language, astronomy, geology, physical life, mind, morals, society and religion. Evolution is not a new idea, but one of the very oldest. The Greeks came close to many of the modern discoveries, but for more than a thousand years after the Christian era such thought was dropped. Newton's discovery in 1665 of the law of gravitation made manifest that it was not necessary as before to think of angels as attending the heavenly bodies to keep them in their orbits. Given the bodies and an initial push, and he could account for the courses. Kant, a century later, went so far as to say, "We do not need any initial push; given matter and forces now existing, and the present state of the universe can be accounted for. Still it remained for Darwin, Huxley, Spencer and others of the last fifty years to add the grand results of their thought and investigation, and to put the knowledge into clear and definite form, so that now the universe as it is, complex and marvelous, may be traced in its development from simple matter universally distributed through space. That which is seen going on to-day is the key to what has taken place in the past. The coast of Norway is rising at the rate of a foot a century; the Mississippi river is carrying debris into the Gulf of Mexico; rocks are being made every day; give time enough and remarkable changes in continents and oceans will result. Heredity, variation and the struggle for existence are active to-day. Through study of these we come to comprehend a little how the present complex orders are the heritage of the past. The human embryo passes through successive stages resembling lower animals. It presents seventy-one rudimentary organs, some of which are present at birth, and one at least, the vermiform appendix, remains in the adult. This organ, which causes so much trouble to the human being in appendicitis, is of decided use to herbivorous animals, and in them is developed in great size. The origin of an institution has little or nothing to do with its present worth. For instance, no one would question the value and sacredness of the family, whether he believes it has come down from a special ordination in the Garden of Eden, or whether he traces its evolution through polygamy and segregation such as is known in lower life. So, too, with religion, whatever the theory of its origin and past history, the blessing of its influence are alike acknowledged. Some would interpret the universe, in view of the atom, the lowest form, the beginning. Others read its meaning in the light of what it has become, as the acorn is rightly understood only when its possibilities in the oak are known. Thus while all processes are seen to take place according to natural law, Nature comes to have a broader, deeper, more divine meaning.

The clear, concise exposition of a subject that is attracting increased attention was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and aroused new interest and thought. Prof. Tufts recommended to all the reading of such books as Drummond's "Ascent of Man," Darwin's "Descent of Man" and "Origin of Species," and Fiske's "Destiny of Man" and "Ideal of God," which are at hand in our public library.

An Incendiary Fire.

The village people were aroused from their peaceful slumbers last Saturday morning about 12.15 by the screeching of a locomotive whistle, to find that the large house near the depot, owned by W. L. Collins, was in flames. The house was occupied by Mrs. L. E. Hawley, milliner, Herbert Tupper, fish market and baker's supplies, Charles Fuller and family, and Emily Phillips. Mr. Fuller saved most of his household belongings, as did Miss Phillips. The millinery stock of Mrs. Hawley was taken out in fair condition. Mr. Tupper lost a large share of his stock. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is suspected of being incendiary. Loss on building $3000, insured for $1500. It was fortunate for the inmates of the house that a freight train happened along in time to give the alarm, otherwise some of them might have been cremated. The barn adjacent to the house was saved by a stream of water from the paper mill.

Death of Dr. J. W. Hastings.

Dr. Joseph W. Hastings, the oldest physician in Warren, died at his home early Monday afternoon at the age of 61. He was born in Lenox, February 19, 1834. His medical course was pursued at Harvard, from which he graduated in 1856. He went at once to the Monson almshouse, where he remained until 1858, when he came to Warren, where he has since lived. In 1859 he married Elizabeth E. Patrick, who died the following year. In 1861, Dr. Hastings enlisted as assistant surgeon in the 21st Massachusetts regiment, and was promoted in 1863 to the rank of surgeon in the 33d Massachusetts; later, when Sherman made that famous march to the sea, Dr. Hastings accompanied him as brigade surgeon. After the war Dr. Hastings resumed his practice in Warren, and in 1865 was married to May Louise Patrick, the youngest sister of his former wife. By this marriage he had two sons, Dr. Robert Worthington Hastings of Brookline, and Joseph G., who has charge of Hastings's pharmacy.

Not only was Dr. Hastings well known in professional circles, but he was also very prominent and useful in public affairs. He was a member of the Grand Army, of the Masons and the Royal Arcanum. In 1884 he was a representative in the Legislature, and by his perseverance, although in the minority on the committee, successfully carried the measure for pure food. In 1889 Gov. Russell, although of the opposite political party, appointed Dr. Hastings to the position on the state board of health left vacant by Senator Hoar, and he was reappointed by Gov. Greenhalge for the term of seven years. Dr. Hastings held many town offices. He was on the school board for a long term of years, a member of the board of health, president of the rural improvement society, was a vice president of the Quaboag Historical society, a member of the board of trade and a member of other local organizations. He was also a member of the Congregational church and a teacher in the Sabbath school, where he was always present when not kept away by professional duties. About five years ago Dr. Hastings was prostrated by a serious illness from which he never fully recovered, although after a rest he resumed his work as a physician and did not give it up until about two months ago, when he took a vacation. He returned about two weeks ago, little benefited by the change, and since then he had gradually failed. He was taken suddenly worse last Thursday afternoon on his return from a ride. The cause of his death was cerebral embolism, augmented by heart and liver trouble. Besides a wife and two sons he leaves a brother, Dr. B. F. Hastings of Whitman, and two sisters, Miss Cornelia A. of Westfield, and Mrs. Julia Webb of Stillwater, Minn. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Revs. Jesse Forbes of New York, Mr. Clark of Worcester and H. Patrick of Newton being present. The large number of sorrowing friends showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held. After the services in the church the body was carried to the house, where the family held a short service of a prayer and reading of Scripture, after which the remains were carried to the cemetery by loving hands and laid in the family lot. His life was a noble one, and his death is a severe loss to the community.

Last Thursday Mr. Bonin was notified by letter of the dangerous illness of the oldest girl, and he started immediately for Canada. The singing evangelist, Rev. W. A. Dunnett of Hamilton, Ontario, so successful in evangelistic work throughout the state in recent years, will begin a series of revival and reformatory services at the Methodist church Sunday morning next at 10.30. These special meetings will continue for several weeks, and are free to all.

The Republican caucus was held in the town hall Tuesday evening and was very largely attended. H. M. Coney was chairman and Fred D. Gilmore secretary. There were 146 ballots cast. Greenhalge was defeated, also Charles E. Stevens, three of the five delegates being opposed to him. This opposition to Mr. Stevens is supposed by some to be caused by the recent appointment of Judge Mason of Northampton to the district court of Ware. The delegates were supposed to be all for Haile excepting one, who is thought to be for Greenhalge. The list will be found on the second page.

The evening free drawing school will be held Thursday evenings this season, the first session being this week. It is hoped that a large number may avail themselves of the advantages of this course. The ability to express one's ideas in a sketch cannot be overestimated, and will often be more useful than words. It has been stated that the town ought not to go to such expense for so few as attended last season, but we are told that it costs the town practically nothing, as the Otis Company furnish the hall free and Mr. Judkins gives his services, so the only expense is for the material used, which is very small.

A teachers' institute will be held next Thursday under the direction of the state board of education. The regular exercises will begin at 9 a. m. in rooms in the high school building, and continue through the day. The speakers and their subjects for Thursday are as follows: G. T. Fletcher, state agent of the Board of Education, on "School Management;" Dr. Pierce of the state board, "Arithmetic;" Mr. Bailey of the state board, "Nature Study and Drawing;" Mr. McDonald of the state board, "Algebra, Geometry and Literature;" Prof. Osgood of Chelsea, "Reading;" Prof. Murdock of Bridgewater, "Geography." The public is invited to all the exercises, but especially to the evening session in the town hall. This is the first teachers' institute to be held in town under the auspices of the state board for eleven years It would seem that the public should give it sufficient attention to have a large attendance.

Death of Mrs. T. C. Gleason.

Thomas C. Gleason has the sympathy of the whole community in his great affliction, the loss of his wife, who died suddenly last Saturday afternoon. She had not been in her usual good health for several days, but was about the house and not thought to be seriously ill until Friday night, growing rapidly worse on Saturday, and although everything possible was done for her she passed away. She leaves, besides her husband, seven children, the youngest not quite three months old, her mother, two brothers and two sisters. The funeral was held from All Saint's church on Monday, Rev. James Boyle celebrating a requiem high mass.

Found Dead in Bed.

James H. McGuire, aged about 50, who came to the Mansion House from Boston Sunday night, was found dead in his bed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. He was dressed and was lying outside the bed, and had evidently been dead several hours. He was last seen about 9 o'clock Wednesday night. Medical Examiner Miner viewed the body and pronounced death due to natural causes, although the man had acted strangely for several days. He had been suffering from cholera morbus, and seemed somewhat dazed, but had not called medical attendance and was about the house. It is supposed the man was here on some private errand, as his card said that he was a "confidential business agent," and it is said he had been a lobbyist at the state house. His residence is given on his card as Jamaica Plains, Mass. The only drugs or medicine found about him was a bottle of epsom salts.

CARD.—I desire to tender my most sincere thanks to all those who so kindly and carefully removed the goods from my store and home at the late fire, during my absence in New York.
